At the close of the late election campaign, we are quite sure that it was the desire of every sensible person, whatever his political views, to settle down and make the best of the result as arrived at by the electors at the polls on the 5th inst. But it seems to be the peculiar instinct of certain men in our midst that they must be engaged in petty carping of the ultra-partisan order, in season and out of season. This is very prominently manifested in the useless, if not positively hurtful discussion that has since the election taken place over the contest in the West Riding. Of the three candidates Mr. Scott has been elected by what may be considered a very large majority over the nominee of the Reform Party, while the Independent candidate polled but a comparatively insignificant vote. It might have been expected, perhaps, that complaints by way of explanation for his defeat would have been indulged in by the Reform candidate and his friends. But such is not the case. Mr. Elliott and his friends have accepted the result with the same admirable dignity with which they conducted the whole campaign. The grumbling and complaining has come from the camp of the victorious candidate, except the by no means unnatural explanations of the Independents in trying to account for the paltry vote polled by their man. Mr. Scott and his friends might well have rested satisfied with the good majority by which that gentleman was returned, without indulging in ill-natured remarks and actual insult toward a class of the community which must have given the successful candidate no inconsiderable number of votes. Mr. Hogan's candidature was certainly not so formidable in result as to justify the attacks made upon him since the election; and if he did receive the largest number of votes in Ennismore, that gave no valid reason for an assault upon his co-religionists, from whom even Mr. Scott's organ admits the Tory candidate got a considerable support. They, as well as any other of the electors, had a perfect right to vote as their judgment dictated: and if we do hold that their voting for Mr. Scott or Mr. Hogan in preference to Mr. Elliott was an error of judgment, that belief does not give us any sensible basis for a quarrel with them. Our appeals in behalf of Mr. Elliott were made to the whole body of electors, before the election. That these appeals failed in their purpose is alike the misfortune of our candidate and our own regret. But the electors have a right of choice which we as well as others are bound to respect; and we are not so silly as to attempt to bully those who thought otherwise than we did, even before, much less after, the election. But as belonging to a badly defeated party in the Riding, we might have been excused in showing our disappointment and expressing our surprise in somewhat warm terms. There is, however, no excuse for such warmth of expression, and the indulgence of useless invective on the part of those whose candidate has been triumphantly elected. It displays, to say the very least, extremely bad taste, and a disposition to be anything but thankful for the full favors bestowed upon the Conservative candidate at the hands of the electors of West Peterborough, in raising him from his former questionable position to that of the undoubted choice of the constituency by a clear and unmistakeable majority of votes. People who are never satisfied do not deserve success. The present Tory arrogance toward the electors of the West Riding is in violent contrast to the many and various begging appeals made before the election for the return of Mr. Scott. It is simply another case of setting the beggar on horseback.

The Review found it the wise course to publish a denial of the accusation it made against the President of the Midland Railway of having tried to get Tory voters out of town on election day; but the Tory papers that copied the story have not copied the denial. They seize anything likely to let them down easy; and only those which can be pressed to do so will contradict a falsehood started by any of their number. So a disgraceful libel on Mr. Cox has been started, and no denial is ever likely to overtake it. And the fault is all due to the Review's capacity for being crammed with idle tales.

THE NEW BISHOP.

The churches appear to have their internal troubles in succession. Very lately the Presbyterian Church of Canada had a serious agitation over points of doctrine raised by some of its Ministers, but these were to some extent compromised and quiet restored. The Episcopal church in the Toronto Diocese has had no trifling annoyance for many years, over what may be termed doctrinal points, concerning the "confession" and the "real presence." On the election of a successor to the late Bishop Bethune, these culminated in an open contest between the Clergy and the Laity, as to which party would secure a Bishop in accord with its own views on those important questions. The Laity, after several days struggle, elected Bishop Sweatman, a gentleman of very decided Evangelical views. The newly elected Bishop met his Clergy in Synod for the first time, last week, and delivered an address, the equal of which has not been delivered by any Bishop in Canada hitherto. He was calm, dispassionate, but very decided in declaring his own views on the questions causing the agitation, and was not afraid to point out his pre-determined action towards all young men holding the "real presence" doctrines, asserting that they could not have his favor or license in the diocese. With old men holding opposite views, he will act more moderately, we suppose.

The course pursued by Bishop Sweatman will give the evangelical party more boldness in opposing teaching at variance with the established doctrines, and will do much to prevent the increase of what the Laity consider anti-scriptural views. It may not be pleasant to have the two great powers of this very influential religious body in antagonism, but this it appears could not be avoided in the past. A firm hand at the helm will soon guide to a more secure moorings in a short time, a result that must be gratifying to all other protestant denominations.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The London correspondent of the Manchester Guardian, says that the University of Oxford is about to confer the degree of D. C. L., on Lord Dufferin.

Although Mr. Scott was elected by a majority of a quarter of a thousand, his Conservative supporters growl. What would they have? What could they have expected?

The Review has suddenly become a Reform paper. It actually endorses Mr. Blake's proposal for the representation of minorities and the cumulative system of voting. What has that got to do with the N. P. (National Poverty) question?

The Ontario Government, with the concurrence of his Honor the Lieut-Governor, has invited the Marquis of Lorne and the Princess Louise to occupy Government House during their three weeks' visit to Toronto in September.

The Grand Lodge of Oddfellowship will meet in Hamilton on August 11th, and sit for several days. It is expected there will be between 3000 and 4000 delegates present, and that a demonstration will take place on one of the days during which the gathering lasts.

Mr. Mowat's majority in the new Legislature is not less than twenty-eight, or man for man of the Opposition, he has twice as many followers as Mr. Meredith has. Indeed, he could send away one-half of his supporters and beat the Tories with the other half.

The standing committee appointed at the Synod of Toronto last week for the District of Northumberland in connection with the Church of England, is composed of the Archdeacon of Peterborough, Rev. Canon Stennet, Rev. H. D. Cooper, Andrew Hewson, Esq., and Major Rogers.

The newly appointed Governor of New South Wales, Lord AUGUSTUS LOFTUS, has embarked for New York with his family. He expects to take the steamer which leaves San Francisco on July 7th, and to reach Sidney in time for the opening of the International Exposition, at which the Prince of Wales is expected to be present.

Prince Edward Island, through her Legislative Council and Assembly, demand of the Dominion Government a million and a quarter as her share of the Halifax Fishery Award. The main ground of the claim is found in the fact that the Prince Edward Island Government was a separate Government at the time of the Washington Treaty and that she, therefore, is as much entitled as Newfoundland to a share of the award.

It is rumoured that the Premier goes to England for the purpose of being sworn in as Privy Councilor, and should that event take place, he will shortly afterwards retire. Already, in prospect of such a contingency, the friends of the rival pretenders are advancing the claims of their respective leaders. Sir Leonard Tilley is believed to be the favorite, although the abdicating leader has expressed preference for the Minister of Railways and Canals.

The acknowledged influence of THE EXAMINER is evidenced by the fact that the day preceding that of the election its words were quoted by Mr. Scott's organ in that gentleman's favor, thus:—"Mr. Scott, the best man among them,"—referring to the Opposition leaders. Will the Review now assist us in claiming for "the best man among them," the leadership that should be his? We have no objection now he has an undoubted majority in the constituency for which he sits.

It is understood that the Great Western Railway Company of Canada has entered into a contract with the Grand Trunk and Wabash Companies for the construction of a new line of railway between Detroit and Toledo, and that there is a fair prospect of the two great Canadian roads uniting in procuring a new line to Chicago. This accounts for the recent long and anxious conferences at Detroit and Toronto. As we stated previously, negotiations have for a long time been pending between the Grand Trunk and the Wabash roads looking to the accomplishment of a part of the design now said to have been carried out.

Sir Leonard Tilley leaves for England on Saturday, and Sir John Macdonald and Sir Charles Tupper on the 28th. As the Letellier matter is not going favorably for the Government, Hon. Hector Langevin will await their arrival in London. Four members of the Government absent from the country at one time will be rather a remarkable circumstance. It is supposed the object of Sir L. Tilley's mission is to procure Imperial assistance in the construction of the Canada Pacific Railway.

Tory disloyalty in the Province of Quebec has degenerated into ill-bred indecency when La Canadien, which branded the Governor-General as a pirate because he chose to refer the Letellier matter to the Imperial authorities, has had the audacity to throw slur and sneer and insult in the very face of the Princess herself. Happily it was not necessary for the Royal party to resent such an outrage. The people of Quebec have nobly done so by escalating the city of Kingston in extending the heartiest of welcomes to their distinguished guests. And the press in both languages have emphasized the popular acclaim. One of the French papers, after pronouncing the progress through the city to be nothing short of a triumphal march, compares the Canadien to the slave it was the custom of the victorious Romans to drag behind the chariot of their conquering hero. This drive at the disloyal sheet is a severe one, but it is a richly merited rebuke.

The Review in reviewing the field after the battle of "the memorable fifth," says:—The manner in which Mr. Morris was brought forward, both as Mr. Cameron's successor for East Toronto and as leader of the Opposition, gave, rightly or wrongly now matters not, too much color to the assertion of Mr. Mowat's friends, that it was done at the instance of Sir John Macdonald, with the view to his controlling the Government and Legislature of the Province, and still more unfortunately was the mal-apropos act followed by the Mail calling upon the supporters of the National Policy to turn out the Mowat Government, because they were opposed to it, and Mr. Morris claiming that if were granted full justice from the Dominion Government in the matter of the Nor'-West Boundary, we should have the Government at Toronto in "accord" with that at Ottawa. Our contemporary appears to be on "the fence" since the local election, judging from its remarks on local politics.

The Opposition in the Ontario Legislature must be ready to exclaim, "Save me from my friends!" The Toronto Mail says plainly though indirectly that the unsatisfactory "provisional" leadership had much to do with the disaster of the 5th of June. The Montreal Gazette (High Tory) points out that the Opposition laissez faire policy of doing and saying nothing during the three first sessions, and merely filling the house with all sorts of resolutions, "was not calculated to excite the enthusiasm of the party or to lead to triumph." And Mr. Goldwin Smith speaks as follows in a letter to the Toronto Telegram: "If the leaders of the Opposition wish to gain a victory in a local contest, they must establish their superiority in local opinion and in the discussions of the Local House; and this they have not yet done." We do not know how this sort of consolation will be relished by the Opposition leader and his handful of followers; but we fancy they must regard the comfort received by Job as sympathetic in comparison.—London Advertiser.

RAILWAY MEETING.

In compliance with a resolution of the Town Council, the Mayor called a public meeting of the ratepayers, in the Council Chamber, on Friday evening last, to receive an expression of opinion as to the advisability of extending the time for the commencement of work on the Toronto and Ottawa Railway, as asked for by the By-law submitted to the Council at their last meeting.

In the absence of the Mayor, Mr. Carnegie was appointed chairman, on motion of Mr. Dumble, seconded by Mr. Toole.

The Chairman in opening the meeting said he thought the question a most important one—important to both those who favored the road and those who opposed it—and trusted the discussion would be conducted in a calm and rational manner.

Mr. W. CLUXTON was first called upon. He did not propose to make a speech, but he thought the ratepayers would be very foolish indeed did they not renew the By-law.

Mr. JAS. STEVENSON thought the members of the Council should have taken the responsibility on themselves of extending the By-law. It would be too bad to lose what had been done, and to throw away what money had already been expended. He thought if Peterborough could be made the head-quarters of the road, or its terminus, it would largely benefit the community. If this By-law were allowed to lapse, Ottawa would also repudiate the scheme and the road would consequently be dropped.

Mr. CARNEGIE said he believed the grant was not so large as that given to the Midland Branch. That line had cost this town $160,000. It would increase our taxes about one-fourth.

Mr. DUMBLE was astonished at Mr. Edmison's remarks about the benefits of railways, and cited as an instance that Mr. W. Hamilton had just completed manufacturing a very large engine which, but for the railroads, he would be unable to ship, as well as the other machinery with which he largely supplied the lumbermen of Muskoka and the Georgian Bay district.

In reply to Mr. Yelland, Mr. Scott said that the contractors of the Grand Junction had been corresponding with him last winter, but nothing further had come of it. The Toronto & Ottawa Company had offered him a share of their County of Peterborough bonus if he crossed the River Trent at the Narrows and came to Peterborough and became a portion of their road.

It was then moved by Mr. Toole, seconded by Mr. Romaine,—That this meeting is of opinion that it would be to the interest of the Town of Peterborough that the time for the commencement of the Toronto & Ottawa R. R. be further extended to the 1st of July, 1880, and that we deem it of the greatest importance that the Town Council do pass the by-law, submitted to the Town Council, at its next meeting.

In moving the resolution he alluded to the foolishness of now allowing the scheme to fall through. If the time be extended, Mr. Scott will be able to go to Ottawa and Carleton and submit by laws in these municipalities. We have always been in the habit of trumpeting the advantages of Peterborough's water power, and we should not lose this opportunity of developing it.

The motion on being put to the meeting was declared carried, only three voting against it.

Mr. CALCUTT, though not a citizen of the town, felt a great interest in her welfare, and thought it would be the most foolish thing in the world to not renew the by-law. What we want here to stimulate manufactories, is better egress and ingress. During his canvass in the county lately, he had not spoken to a man who would not vote over the by-law again and again. This section of the country produced a large revenue, and he thought the Government should assist it.

After some further remarks by Mr. CLUXTON, as to the terms of the by-law,

It was moved by Mr. Dumble, seconded by Mr. Stapleton.—That in the opinion of this meeting the Dominion Government should be invited to consider the fact that a small proportion of the money necessary to construct the Georgian Bay Branch of the Pacific Railway, granted to the Toronto & Ottawa Railway, would secure railway connection between Ottawa and Midland City, the best harbor on Georgian Bay, and that Messrs. Scott, Dumble, Carnegie, the Mayor, and Messrs. Burnham and Hilliard be a committee, with power to add to their number, to wait upon the Dominion Government to urge the claims of the Toronto & Ottawa Railway, and of the older and more settled part of the Province, to be instilled in the construction of this much needed and important railway enterprise.

The resolution was carried unanimously, after which the meeting separated.

The Hanlan-Elliott Boat Race.

HANLAN AGAIN VICTORIOUS.

The Championship of England Added to His Laurels.

The Fastest Race on Record.

THE TORONTO BOY THE GREATEST SCULLER IN THE WORLD.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE, June 16.—From seven o'clock this morning the Central railway station was crowded by visitors arriving from the Counties of Durham, and Northumberland, and North of the Tweed. Special trains were run from Sunderland, the Hartlepools, and all stations along the North-Eastern railway, while steamers brought up thousands of people from the riverside towns lying between here and North and South Shields. Throughout the coal mining districts there was a general cessation of labour, for the collieris dropped into Newcastle to witness the performance of their mate and general favorite, Elliott. Towards noon the high banks of the Tyne were lined with sightseers, who occupied every wharf and stage. The river was lined with boats, ranging from the unwieldy coal barge to the dainty steam yacht and tiny skiff. The public were out in full force, the crowd being the largest ever assembled in this city at any previous race. The weather was favourable, the sky being overcast, with a light wind sweeping over the river. The breeze was just sufficient to make a lively ripple on the water's surface, and at the same time not confer any great advantage on the contestant who secured the inside position on the course. At noon, the hour fixed for the start, twenty steamers crowded with spectators were moving to and fro among the river craft, while the bridges crossing the river were crowded with excited throngs. When the men put on their togs there was the interest became intense, rounds of cheers greeting the representatives of the old and new countries.

SPECULATION

ruled early this morning at five to two on Hanlan, but before the start, a strong commission having been issued in favour of Elliott, the odds dropped to 6 to 4 on the Canadian, at which price the race commenced. Altogether it has been one of the heaviest gambling races ever rowed, large sums of money having been invested from time to time since the Hawdon match on May 5th, at odds varying from 2 to 1 to 10 to 4 on Hanlan. Before the start Elliott's level bet of £100, made some time ago, was declared off by consent, but as they took up their positions the English champion made frequent offers to take three hundred pounds to one hundred that he led all the way. The offers met with no response. A few bets, however, of 6 to 4 were laid on the umpire's boat.

THE TOSS

was won by Elliott, contrary to Hanlan's general good luck, and he chose the north side, but the surface of the best side was smooth, and the station conferred little, if any advantage. At ten minutes past twelve the men were seen approaching their stations. Elliott, as is usual with English oarsmen, stripped to the skin, while Hanlan wore his customary dark blue sleeveless jersey, with the magenta band around his head. Both looked cheerful and confident and in the very pink of condition. Having embarked on the south side of the High Level bridge, Hanlan as he came through nodded to his friends on the cutter, who shouted in response. Great cheering rent the air as the men took up their positions. Both took a few preliminary spurts, and returned to their stations amid renewed cheering. The start was by mutual consent. Elliott broke away twice, but at the third attempt they got away on even terms, and cries of resounded on all sides. They did not pull together for an instant, for Hanlan broke into a magnificent rate of speed at forty-two to the minute. He left his man with the greatest ease, and in the first hundred yards secured a full half length to the good. Elliott put on all the steam he could, and worked up to forty, but he could not hold the Canadian for an instant. The English champion seemed literally paralized at the unexpected speed of his antagonist. Looking round to see where he had his opponent, Elliott spurted with all his well known power, but Hanlan kept on with his beautiful style and drew clear when they had gone eight hundred yards. Elliott discovering he could not hold the Canadian for pace, slowed down to thirty eight, intending, if possible, to break him down by staying, but, as a pressman remarked, who recognized his tactics and knew Hanlan's capabilities, he might as well expect to

"THEY'RE OFF!" "THEY'RE OFF!"

"OUTLAST A LOCOMOTIVE."

The Toronto sculler, too, eased a bit, and although now striking nearly six strokes a minute less than he had previously taken, he was going much faster than the English representative, and without much apparent exertion maintained two lengths lead up to the foot of Grindstone quay. To this point, Hanlan kept a good straight course, but he then began to pull too strongly with his right. This he soon remedied, and the American champion held his two lengths lead through Redheugh bridge, Time to the half mile 2 mins, 35 secs. Elliott worked up to the very highest after leaving this point, but as he quickened, so also did Hanlan, and at Cooper's stairs three lengths separated them. Elliott cut round the bend here very finely, but although the Canadian made a wide sweep, his superior pace enabled him to hold his lead of three lengths into the next racing stretch. Hanlan then dropped down even more than he had ever done, but although he had to look round him to see that the course was clear, he still held three lengths advantage at the end of the first mile, which he reached in 6 min. 11½ sec. The shouts from the shores at this time encouraging the Englishman to greater exertions were deafening. Elliott put on all the strength he could muster, while Hanlan also quickened a little in spite of his opponent's exertions increased his lead to four lengths. With this advantage he appeared to be contented, and he did not forge any further ahead as they passed the foot of the Meadows, the time occupied then being 6 min. 32 sec., and the distance covered a mile and a half. Elliott came with a tremendous effort for the next half mile, compelling Hanlan to work up to racing speed, but at Armstrong's platform the Canadian still led by three or four lengths. The time for the two miles was twelve minutes eight seconds. Hanlan here reduced his stroke considerably, was rowing some thirty-four, but in grand form. Elliott now began to haz.g out but the Canadian kept on the even tenor of his way. Gradually he widened the gap between him and his plucky opponent in the rear until at the head of the Meadows he had increased his advantage to fully five lengths. Elliott's steering was now very unsteady, and his rowing unsteady. He had evidently shot his bolt and was a used-up-man. The race admits of no further description, having become a mere procession of two. Silence prevailed on the banks when the spectators perceived the state of things. Off Bentwell boat-house a little beyond Paradise quay, Hanlan stopped rowing and coolly looked round to see how much further he had to go, smiling pleasantly at the bewildered multitudes on shore, who, recovering themselves, broke out into a somewhat feeble cheer, he caught up his oars again and went at it with a will, to make up for lost time. Increasing his lead at every stroke, Hanlan amid the greatest enthusiasm dashed under Scotswood Bridge, having beaten the hope of England as some think, the best man she has ever known, by a full eleven lengths, in 1 min. 1 sec., the fastest championship race on record, and a minute better than the Elliott-Higgins race. It was a sad disappointment, but the crowds forgot their disappointment in ringing cheers whichcame from thousands of throats as the triumphant holder of three championships repeatedly paddled to his boat house, where he over-seen by "Jem" Hamsley was willing to assist him to disembark.

SIGNALS OF DISTRESS,

IT WAS A PROUD MOMENT

for the Canadian gay on the offside of the river here it will be the cheapest investment ever Peterborough made. It is true our taxes are high. But we have never had to pay anything for this scheme, except $2000, and until the road is a building we will not have to pay it, and when it is building we will not feel it. The directors have not done a single act to forfeit your confidence. As soon as the million dollars is secured the road will be built. Although the times are hard, it is most opportune for the work of building railroads. Steel rails can now be purchased one-third less than iron could be a few years ago. As a citizen he was most anxious that the road should be built. The directors had they wished could have sold the charter, and sold the town as well. He could tell those present they (the directors) had been offered tens of thousands of dollars in hard cash for the charter, but they would not betray their trust. He then referred to the prospect of the Dominion Government assisting the road as a part of the Canada Pacific and abandoning their Georgian Bay Branch, by assisting this company to the extent of a million of dollars, which would scarcely be a mite of the cost of the other road, they would have a road from Ottawa to Midland City, the best harbor on the Georgian Bay. Mr. Scott had had recent correspondence with the Minister of Public Works, and during the coming summer delegates from the municipalities from here to Ottawa would present claims before the Government, and, he believed, with success. The Americans are now building a railroad from Boston to cross near Montreal, which would connect with this road when built, so that we would have immediate and direct communication with the sea board. When this was completed he hoped to see the day when a street railway would be running from here to Lakefield with manufactories all along this magnificent stretch of water power, and Peterborough the Lowel of Canada.

Mr. MILLS being called upon said that the members of the Council present had upon consultation determined to take no part in the discussion.

Mr. SCOTT who had entered the room during the time Mr. Dumble was speaking, was called upon, and referred to the application made to the Town Council for extending the time of the commencement of the work. Next week he would make a similar request upon the County Council, to be followed by applications to the Councils of Perth, Lanark, Manvers, Cartwright, Port Perry and Ontario. All these By-laws are perfectly good, if the By-laws in this town and county were renewed. He thought the action of the Council very prudent and sensible in calling this meeting, so as to obtain the feelings of the people. The project of building this road first started here, and other municipalities followed. The question now really was whether to prosecute the work further or let the matter drop. The history of the road was well known. At present 140 miles were surveyed and located. Extremely good progress had been made till the defeat of the Toronto By-law, which was largely due to Grand Trunk influences. He was pleased to say the prospects of the road were as bright to-day as ever. In Ottawa, those Aldermen who formerly opposed the road were now favorable to it, and had assured him, if a by-law were submitted, they would give it their hearty support. By the Cotteau Bridge Connection, they would be placed on the shortest road to the sea board. It would be very inexpedient, he considered, to allow the by-law to lapse. If Peterborough did this, other municipalities would also allow their's to lapse, and the scheme would drop. Formerly, Ottawa followed in the wake of Toronto, but now the Ottawa people said they did not care about Toronto; what they wanted was connection with the Georgian Bay. If this road was built through to the Georgian Bay, Toronto could not do otherwise, in her own interest, than secure connection here. She could not allow Montreal to get the lead of her. He then alluded to the Georgian Bay Branch and said he had submitted a memorial to the Minister of Public Works when in Ottawa, and would, as Mr. Dumble had referred to, endeavor to get delegates from all the municipalities interested, to wait on the Government during the summer, to urge on them the desirability of their assisting this road instead of building the proposed Georgian Bay Branch.

Mr. EDMISON said it was a matter of policy with us whether $150,000 was too much for the road or not. For his own part he would like to see the road built. No doubt it would increase our liabilities. The matter was a grave one. Either it would build up the town or it would ruin it. He had not all the faith in the world in railroads. While this particular one would bring to us trade which we had not now, it would at the same time take away some of the trade which we now enjoy. While he had grave doubts as to the benefits which this road would be to the town, he did not wish to oppose anything for the benefit of the town. If we pay that $150,000 we would have a great burden for a few years, as we could not at once become a city. He believed it was a sum too much for this or any other town to pay.

Mr. CARNEGIE said he believed the grant was not so large as that given to the Midland Branch. That line had cost this town $160,000. It would increase our taxes about one-fourth.

Mr. DUMBLE was astonished at Mr. Edmison's remarks about the benefits of railways, and cited as an instance that Mr. W. The resolution was carried unanimously, after which the meeting separated.

—The Orangemen of the Lakefield District have decided to have a grand excursion and picnic up to Burleigh, next 12th July, in place of going to Port Hope. Both boats have been engaged, music will be also provided, and a good time generally may be expected.

—On Friday last while a number of men in Strickland's employ, were running a canoe over the rapids above Burleigh, it upset. All got out safe except a man called Watson, from this village, who got caught between the canoe and the rocks, fortunately no bones were broken but he got badly bruised and had a narrow escape from an awful death.

LINDSAY.

ACCIDENT.—As a team owned by a man named Neil McCaskill was standing tied in front of Mr. Beall's jewellery store on Friday morning the watering cart came along frightening them and causing them to break loose and dash up Kent street at break-neck pace. In turning at the corner of Cambridge street they ran into the market platform on which Mr. Thos. Clarke and Mr. Shannon, market clerk, were sitting. Before the latter could realize their danger they were hurled between the platform and the wheels of the waggon and both seriously injured. Clark's leg below the knee was badly crushed and it is probable it may have to be amputated. Shannon was a good deal cut about the head, but as yet the extent of his injuries is not known. As he is an old man the case may be serious.

APSLEY.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—Will you kindly allow me, through the columns of your Journal, to express my sincere thanks to those Temperance friends from whom I received so much courtesy and kindness, while I was visiting the different Lodges in the County soliciting aid for our Temperance Hall. I have now handed in my subscription book, and those friends who have not yet paid their subscriptions, will confer a favor by remitting the amount to Mr. Thomas McIlmoyle, Burleigh Post Office, who is chairman of the Building Committee, as they are very much in need of more funds. The gentleman who took the Contract of the Hall requires his money, and as there is considerable of a debt yet remaining, any one who has not yet subscribed anything and should feel disposed to do so, I am sure, the Building Committee would be be glad to hear from them. Thanking you Mr. Editor for allowing this to appear in your widely circulated paper.

I remain, your truly,
JOSEPH LOUSLEY.

Female Pedestrianism.

To the Editor of the Examiner:—

DEAR SIR,—I see by advertisement that two "ladies" have arranged for a pedestrian tournament this week in the skating rink. I hoped our town was going to be spared exhibitions of such a low grade. There is no genuine pleasure or sport in such performances. They bring out the same low feelings in men's natures as were sought to be killed out when prize fighting, bull fights, cock fighting, &c., were forbidden by law. Where the pleasure or sport comes in, in seeing one literally drag oneself along, especially "ladies," I fail to see. Fond as I am of sports of all kinds, I must say that I hope the public will discountenance this exhibition by their absence. The papers in Toronto after the last performance of this kind there, called on the City Council to forbid such exhibitions again, and I hope that our Town Council will see fit to pass a by-law forbidding such performances again.

Yours,
SPORT.

Goods Sold Direct to the People at Wholesale Price.

The Only Business in Canada Conducted on the Same Principle.

Over $200,000 Worth of Boots and Shoes so Supplied Last Year.

The great loss annually sustained by selling to Dealers, first led to our establishing of Branch Stores, where we could supply direct to the people for Cash all the goods we could manufacture, thus giving to the people the goods less the dealer's profit, and saving to ourselves the annual loss. We were the more forcibly impressed into this step from the fact that cheap Eastern-made shoddy goods were being palmed off as our goods. We now sell our own goods, warrant what we sell, use no shoddy or inferior material of any kind, and can and do supply goods of the best quality 25 per cent. less than they can be bought elsewhere.

Everything Marked in Plain Figures. Only One Price.

DAIRY PRODUCTS.

1 CAR-LOAD LIVERPOOL FACTORY FILLED

SALT.

—Expressly for Dairy Use.—

It is packed in pure white linen bags of three sizes,—42½ lbs, 112 lbs, and 56 lbs. (The bags are all of a superior quality of linen and suitable for towelling or other domestic uses.) It is said by persons of wide experience that one cause of inferiority in quality of butter and other dairy products has been the use of common grades of Salt; and the difference in cost is slight when compared with the difference in quality. If dairyman and others will consider that in manufacturing, only 2½ lbs of salt are required to make 100 lbs of cheese, and only 1 oz. of salt to make 1 lb. butter, they will recognize of how small importance must be the first cost of one of the most important ingredients in the manufacture of all dairy products.

Enjoy Life.

What a truly beautiful world we live in! Nature gives us grandeurs of Mountains, plains and vales, and God intended it means for enjoyment, for man desires to pass it when in perfect health; but the many ailments and disorders of mankind like a blight, it up deformities, discouraged and unfitted for work, and even pleasure, unless it be excessive, then labor becomes so every sufferer can easily figure out for himself, by every Green's August Flower will make them as free from disease as when born. The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, JUNE 19, 1879.

LOCAL NEWS.

Holidays.—The Public and High School holidays commence about the middle of July and will continue till the first of September.

An Omission.—In mentioning the names of those who took part at the Teachers' Convention in Lindsay, we omitted the name of Miss Biddell, who gave an interesting "Object Lesson."

Temple Pic-Nic.—The annual pic-nic and excursion of Belmont Grove Temple, Otonabee, will be held on Thursday, 26th of June, to Idyl Wild. The steamer Golden-Eye will convey the excursionists.

Physique.—A meeting of all those intending to take part in the Physical procession on Dominion Day, will be held this evening in the Council Chamber. Members of the Executive Committee will be present to give necessary information.

For Peterborough.—The Cobourg Sentinel says:—"After the inspection on Monday night the members of the Fire Brigade held meetings and decided to go to Peterborough on the first of July. They will go by Harwood and the River Otonabee.

Burglary.—On Wednesday night, the 11th instant, some person or persons entered the school house of School Section Number One, Smith, and prying open the teacher's desk, took therefrom a small sum of money belonging to the Second Line Sunday School.

A New Business.—As will be seen by reference to our advertising columns, Mr. P. D. Doran has opened out a tea and sugar store in the shop next door to the Hoffman House. Dealing entirely in these two articles, housekeepers may rely on having a choice stock at the lowest prices to choose from.

The Press Association.—At the meeting of the members of the Kingston local press, the programme for the annual meeting of the Canadian Press Association, which is to meet at Kingston, on the 22nd July, was arranged. Included in the programme is a sail down the St. Lawrence and a two days' sojourn among the Thousand Islands.

Book Making.—His Excellency the Governor-General's work entitled "Travels in the Dominion," is to be published this season in London. It will be illustrated by the Princess Louise, with whom the Misses Montalba are now sojourning in order that the mutual art studies of those ladies and Her Royal Highness may be renewed.

Veneer Again.—Vennor will keeps at it, with a view of hitting the nail on the head some time. Here is his latest:—"Judging from the appearance of the spring birds, I'm afraid we are going to experience a wet summer, with frequent cold relapses and severe frosts. The same conditions extend through a large portion, also, of the United States. The winter of 1879-80 will be again severe with heavy snow falls."

New Furniture Factory.—T. & W. McKee's furniture factory and planing mill is now in full running order, with the latest improved machinery. The planing department is superintended by Mr. W. J. Rombough, and the furniture department by the junior member of the firm, Mr. Wm. McKee. As both gentlemen are thoroughly practical and experienced workmen, those entrusting them with their orders may rely on getting their work done satisfactorily and at best rates.

Friday's Match Race.—The match race for $50 a side between "Hardware Maid" and Morgan's "J. D.," came off on Friday afternoon last, on the road leading to the Catholic Cemetery and drew together a crowd of four or five hundred. The race was keenly contested. The first heat was won by the "Maid," the horses being neck and neck. The second heat was won by "J. D." by about three lengths, there being a change of riders. In the third heat the "Maid" came in about half a neck ahead, but the Judges decided the race a draw, owing to the rider of the "Maid" jockeying.

Great Crowd.—A great crowd was in town on Saturday; many evidently in to talk over the election news. Politics and wool appeared to be the chief topics of conversation. By the bye, many of the farmers join us in again requesting some of the Tory papers to re-publish their last year's articles UPON WOOL. They would like to see them NOW denounce the Government for not protecting this article to help the "poor farmer." Can the Review not comply with the request—but, hold on, the Times was also an advocate of N. P., probably it will "rise and explain" what the member for West Peterborough has done for the farmer. Ask a farmer who voted for the "N. P." "What's the price of wheat?" and he will never—what, never! well hardly ever, tell you.

The Happiest Season of Life.—And which is that? The generally expressed opinion is that childhood is the pleasantest and the most joyous period of human existence on earth. But this is by no means universally the case. And perhaps the prevalence of the opinion arises very much from the fact that the older we get the more we value youth. The truth is that each period of life has its own peculiar duties. A venerable man of eighty years of age was once asked, "which is the happiest season of life?" He answered the question in this way:—When Spring comes, and, under the influence of the gentle warmth of the atmosphere, the buds commence to show themselves and to turn into flowers, I think to myself, Oh, what a beautiful season is Spring! Then, when Summer comes and covers the trees with thick foliage, where the birds are so happy in singing their pretty songs. I say to myself, Oh, Summer is a fine thing! Then when Autumn arrives, and I see the same trees laden with the finest and most delightful fruits, I cry out, Oh, how magnificent is Autumn! And, finally, when the rude and hard Winter makes its appearance, and there are neither leaves nor fruits on the trees, then, through their naked branches I look upward and perceive better than I could ever do before, the spiritual stars that glitter in the sky.—Exchange.

The 24th in Montreal.—There is little possibility of the troubles which have disgraced the city during the Julys of the two past years being repeated again next month. From prominent members of the Orange Order in that city it is learned that the position taken by the Supreme Grand Lodge of the Order in British North America—to the effect that no public demonstration or members of the Order should take place in Montreal until the legality of the Order is established—will be observed by local Orangemen. The proceedings against ex-Mayor Beaudry are being undertaken at the expense of the Supreme Lodge, and the Orangemen there, it is said, are acting under the direction of that body. The local members of the Order will attend divine service on the Sunday following the 24th.

Visit from the Governor-General and Princess Louise.—The Lindsay Post says:—Mayor Deacon is energetically talking up a reception in Lindsay to the Marquis of Lorne and Princess Louise in September, and we have no doubt but that if the county and town councils should unite in extending an invitation it will be accepted. As will be seen from our County Council report the mayor appeared before the Council and explained the steps he has already taken, and we understand the Council will before adjourning appoint a committee and make a liberal grant. Mayor Lundy of Peterborough and Col. Williams, M.P., Port Hope, are both arranging for a visit from the Governor-General and Princess at the same time. One of the proper purposes is some [illegible] thence to Lindsay per Whitby Railway, thence to Pontefract Falls and per steamer to Bobcaygeon, thence to Peterborough and then by Midland railway to Port Hope. This would give our district a visit, and on a good scheme of making the bank halves. We hope the scheme will be carried out.

Don't forget the Lacrosse Match on Friday afternoon.

Furnished.—The Millbrook Messenger "rooster" was paralyzed on the 5th of June.

L. Robinson & Co. are offering a lot of great bats and caps (not quite fashionable) worth from one to two dollars, at 50c to 75c.

In Demand.—Owing to the popularity of Mr. Peter Hamilton's ornamental implements, he is now besieged with orders from all quarters, and the "Tall Chimney" is now running to its full capacity.

"Fall of Babylon."—We have been requested to announce that the Rev. Mr. Roberts will deliver a lecture on the above subject, in the Union Hall, Auburn, on Monday evening, 23rd instant, commencing at 7:30 o'clock.

Weather.—During the last week the weather has been anything but delightful. The rain has had the field to itself, and has made splendid work of its short stay. Cold winds have been the order of the day and an unusual amount of colds attest the indiscretion of the average hardy (?) person.

Beautiful Aspect.—The country is one vast picture just now. Vegetation has sprung up under the late frequent rains at a rapid pace, and the fields and bushes never looked more flourishing. The foliage is particularly luxuriant, the maples being most healthful. A drive into the country for a few weeks to come will be an entertaining recreation.

Officers Elected.—The following have been appointed officers for the Lakefield Cricket Club:—President, Mr. J. Hall; Vice-Presidents, Dr. Caldwell and A. I. Wright; Sec'y-Treas., Mr. Muller, and a Committee of Management, Mr. R. Strickland has guaranteed a piece of land free of rent for three years, and the members of the club have agreed to put it in good order.

Cricket.—Cricketing is making great strides in the onward march this season. We learn that some first class matches are on the tapis. A friendly match will be played to-day with Cobourg, and afterwards more advanced rivals will be met and we hope overcome. Negotiations are going on with Toronto, and so lovers of the noble game may expect to see some fine playing.

Methodist Conference.—The following are the appointments for the Peterborough District of the Methodist Church of Canada:—Peterboro', E. B. Harper, M.A., John E. Starr; John Sanderson, supernumerated, Ashton Fletcher, supernumerary; Millbrook, Newton Hill; Lakefield, George Washington, M.A., Andrew Stewart, B.D.; Bethany, John C. Ash, Alfred J. Bartrop; Ballyduff, John A. Dowler; Blairton, Thomas Fox.

St. Peter's Church.—Mr. W. S. Cooke has just completed the painting and kalsomining of St. Peter's Church, which lately has been undergoing renovation and repairs and now looks greatly improved in appearance. The ceilings have been whitened, and the walls colored. The outside of the pews, gallery front and pillars are grained in oak, and the inside of the pews repainted in light ash. The work is very creditable to Mr. Cooke.

"Good Bye."—How frequently every day is this little phrase used, and yet how few of the many that use it have any notion of its meaning or origin. "Bye," from the Saxon "by," or "bying," means a dwelling, a habitation or home. "Good bye," therefore, means "good home," i. e., may your home be good, happy, pleasant, and of course encircled with all blessings. What parting phrase so appropriate for one we love! What better wish for our dearest and best friends than the old, the sweet, "good bye."

Cheese Market.—In pursuance of a resolution passed on the 3rd of June, at a meeting of those interested in the manufacture of cheese in this county, a cheese market was opened in the Drill Shed on the 9th instant, when samples from eight factories were brought in. Three lots fit for shipping were exhibited. Only two buyers attended, and as they would only receive on consignment, no sales were effected. It was resolved to hold another meeting on Saturday, 21st instant, when other buyers are expected to be present.

W. W. Farley & Co.—We are informed that this firm have determined to remain in Peterborough for some time, to run off another bankrupt stock of general dry goods recently purchased at forty cents on the dollar. They promise immense bargains in every line. New goods are to be sold fifteen per cent. less than Elder's stock was disposed of, and customers are promised that one dollar will go as far as three in the ordinary dry goods store. A descriptive advertisement and price list will appear next week. The Treasurer has prepared a statement of assets and liabilities, which will show you exactly how matters stand. One item in the list of liabilities I think might be struck out, as it does not appear to be required—that is the sum of $1,586 for bridge at the Narrows of Stoney Lake.

The Grand Junction Railway have made application to me to hand over certain Debentures to them, which they claim they are entitled to receive from this County, and threatened legal proceedings in the event of non-compliance with the demand. I laid the matter before the County Solicitor, and on his advice I notified the Company that I would not deliver the Debentures as requested. No legal proceedings have been taken up to this time.

The Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company desire you to again extend the By-law granting aid to them in the same manner as you did last year. There is no reason why you should refuse to your doing so; in fact, your refusal to do so would destroy the chances of our getting this road, in which the ratepayers of the County take so great an interest, as shown by the liberal bonus granted by this By-law.

The next matters relating to the different matters I have referred to will be laid before you.

JOHN BURNHAM,
Warden.

Council Chamber, June 17, 1879.

Moved by Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr. Rorke,—That the Warden's address be referred to a special committee, to be composed of Messrs. Moloney, Kidd, Golborne, Millar, Sanderson, the mover and seconder, and that they report tomorrow on the same.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Golborne, seconded by Mr. Collins,—That all communications and papers in the hands of the Warden and Clerk be referred to the committees to which they properly belong.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Sanderson, seconded by Mr. Millar,—That the name of T. E. Fitzgerald be substituted on all committees in the stead of Mr. Bell.—Carried.

The Council then adjourned until Wednesday at 10 a.m.

WEDNESDAY.

The greater portion of the day was engaged in committee work, in the afternoon a short session was held, when the following was submitted and adopted.

REPORT ON THE WARDEN'S ADDRESS,

The special committee to whom was referred the Warden's address, beg leave to report recommending:—

1. That the family of the late Christopher Burton be presented with an address of condolence, signed by the members and officers of this Council, and that the Warden and Mr. Pearce be a committee to prepare the same.

2. Your committee approve of the action of the Warden in the matter of the North Bridge at Bobcaygeon, and would recommend that in the event of the County of Victoria persisting in its claim with regard to the said bridge the question, of this county's liability, be referred to the County Solicitor.

3. Your committee approve of the action of the Warden in the matter of the Hastings Bridge.

4. Your committee recommend that the repair of the Indian River Bridge be referred to the committee on Roads and Bridges.

5. Your committee recommend that the furnishing of the Court Room be referred to the committee on County Property, with instructions to report as soon as possible.

6. Your committee hope that the Warden's expectations with regard to the exchange of Debentures may be speedily realized.

7. Your committee are pleased to learn that the Finances of the County are in so satisfactory a position, and that the municipalities have paid up their rents as promptly. With regard to the appropriation for a bridge at the Narrows of Stoney Lake, they would recommend that a By-law be passed, repealing the one making the appropriation, as they regret there is no immediate prospect of the said bridge being built.

8. Your committee fully approve of the action of the Warden in the matter of the Grand Junction Railway Company's alleged claim.

9. Your committee would recommend that the times for commencing work under the By-law granting a bonus to the Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company, be extended for one year as requested.

J. B. PEARCE,
Chairman.

Peterborough, June 17, 1879.

Mr. Scott then addressed the Council, and a By-law was passed through its several readings, extending the time for the commencement of the Toronto and Ottawa Railway as requested by him.

Mr. W. C. Saunders, of Lakefield, was appointed Auditor in the place of the late Mr. Burton.

A Crazy Pedestrian.

HALIFAX, June 11—An unfortunate man named McKenna in Charlestown, P. E. I., has been mined with the pedestrian craze, and has literally gone walking mad. He is a mechanic, and up to a few weeks since had never shown any signs of insanity. A fit of [illegible] apprehowever, he began to act very queerly, and at last left his work, complaining that he was about to engage in a contest with Deddy corner out back. He commenced his self-imposed task about six o'clock every morning and walks till midnight. Thursday was the fifteenth day he has engaged in this manner and the number of miles he has covered during that time must be very great for one who is not a professional pedestrian.

LOCAL MELANGE.

COUNTY COUNCIL.

June Session—Satisfactory State of the County Finances.

The County Council of the County of Peterborough met in half-yearly session on Friday last, at 2.30 p.m.

Present,—John Burnham, Esq., Warden, and all the members of the Council, with the exception of the Reeve of Lakefield, Mr. J. Dinwoodie.

The minutes of the last day of last session were read and confirmed.

WARDEN'S ADDRESS.

The Warden then read the following address:

To the Municipal Council of the County of Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN,—In addition to the usual business of the meeting in connection with the assessment of the several municipalities and making provision for the current expenses of the County, there are several matters in which I feel it my duty to call your attention.

Since we last met the County has sustained a great loss in the decease of Mr. Christopher Burton, one of the Auditors. He had held that position for the last 11 years, and performed the duties of his office in a most efficient manner. As Mr. Burton was appointed by me under the Statute, it will be necessary that I should at this session nominate his successor.

The Legislature, at its last session, passed an Act taking away the portion of the township of Harvey west of Pigeon Lake, and annexing it to the County of Victoria. In accordance with your instructions, a deputation attended before the Parliamentary Committee and opposed the Bill, and succeeded in retaining in this County that part of Harvey known as "big island."

In May last I received from the Warden of Victoria a letter, enclosing an extract from the report of the Committee on Roads and Bridges of the County Council of Victoria, asking this Council to take some action towards repairing or rebuilding the North Bridge at Bobcaygeon. I declined to take any action, as it seemed to me that by the Act detaching that part of Harvey aforesaid to us, we were relieved from any future liability in regard to these bridges. At all events, if we are not entirely relieved, we can only be liable in a much smaller proportion than we have heretofore paid, namely, one-half, and I would recommend that legal advice be taken in regard to this Bridge, and others of a similar character.

In regard to the Hastings bridge, which the united Counties of Northumberland and Durham wish us to repair jointly with them, I have received the opinion of the County Solicitor that we are in no way liable to contribute to its maintenance, and I have accordingly notified the Warden of those Counties to that effect.

The bridges at the Indian River were reported to be unsafe, and I instructed your Engineer to inspect it. I believe some repairs will be necessary.

The repairs of the Court House have been completed, and the Court Room is well worthy of the very favorable opinions expressed by all who have seen it. The repairs have cost more than estimated, owing to a great extent to changes that were found necessary as the work progressed. It will be necessary for you at this session to make provision for furnishing the Court Room. You will not require to make any provision in the estimates of this year for the rest of these repairs, as we can borrow sufficient from the surplus Sinking Funds of the Debenture By-laws; and I hope, before the next session, that the Treasurer will have arranged the exchange of new debentures for old ones, by which a portion of the Sinking Fund will be permanently released and applicable to any purpose you may desire.

While speaking of our finances, I have to congratulate you upon the satisfactory position of our accounts, detailed statements of which will be laid before you. Owing to the action taken in regard to enforcing payment of County rates, they have been promptly paid, and the necessity of borrowing from the banks to a great extent obviated. The Treasurer has prepared a statement of assets and liabilities, which will show you exactly how matters stand. One item in the list of liabilities I think might be struck out, as it does not appear to be required—that is the sum of $1,586 for bridge at the Narrows of Stoney Lake.

The Grand Junction Railway have made application to me to hand over certain Debentures to them, which they claim they are entitled to receive from this County, and threatened legal proceedings in the event of non-compliance with the demand. I laid the matter before the County Solicitor, and on his advice I notified the Company that I would not deliver the Debentures as requested. No legal proceedings have been taken up to this time.

The Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company desire you to again extend the By-law granting aid to them in the same manner as you did last year. There is no reason why you should refuse to your doing so; in fact, your refusal to do so would destroy the chances of our getting this road, in which the ratepayers of the County take so great an interest, as shown by the liberal bonus granted by this By-law.

The next matters relating to the different matters I have referred to will be laid before you.

JOHN BURNHAM,

Council Chamber, June 17, 1879.

Moved by Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr. Rorke,—That the Warden's address be referred to a special committee, to be composed of Messrs. Moloney, Kidd, Golborne, Millar, Sanderson, the mover and seconder, and that they report tomorrow on the same.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Golborne, seconded by Mr. Collins,—That all communications and papers in the hands of the Warden and Clerk be referred to the committees to which they properly belong.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Sanderson, seconded by Mr. Millar,—That the name of T. E. Fitzgerald be substituted on all committees in the stead of Mr. Bell.—Carried.

The Council then adjourned until Wednesday at 10 a.m.

WEDNESDAY.

The greater portion of the day was engaged in committee work, in the afternoon a short session was held, when the following was submitted and adopted.

REPORT ON THE WARDEN'S ADDRESS,

The special committee to whom was referred the Warden's address, beg leave to report recommending:—

1. That the family of the late Christopher Burton be presented with an address of condolence, signed by the members and officers of this Council, and that the Warden and Mr. Pearce be a committee to prepare the same.

2. Your committee approve of the action of the Warden in the matter of the North Bridge at Bobcaygeon, and would recommend that in the event of the County of Victoria persisting in its claim with regard to the said bridge the question, of this county's liability, be referred to the County Solicitor.

3. Your committee approve of the action of the Warden in the matter of the Hastings Bridge.

4. Your committee recommend that the repair of the Indian River Bridge be referred to the committee on Roads and Bridges.

5. Your committee recommend that the furnishing of the Court Room be referred to the committee on County Property, with instructions to report as soon as possible.

6. Your committee hope that the Warden's expectations with regard to the exchange of Debentures may be speedily realized.

7. Your committee are pleased to learn that the Finances of the County are in so satisfactory a position, and that the municipalities have paid up their rents as promptly. With regard to the appropriation for a bridge at the Narrows of Stoney Lake, they would recommend that a By-law be passed, repealing the one making the appropriation, as they regret there is no immediate prospect of the said bridge being built.

8. Your committee fully approve of the action of the Warden in the matter of the Grand Junction Railway Company's alleged claim.

9. Your committee would recommend that the times for commencing work under the By-law granting a bonus to the Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company, be extended for one year as requested.

J. B. PEARCE,
Chairman.

Peterborough, June 17, 1879.

Mr. Scott then addressed the Council, and a By-law was passed through its several readings, extending the time for the commencement of the Toronto and Ottawa Railway as requested by him.

Mr. W. C. Saunders, of Lakefield, was appointed Auditor in the place of the late Mr. Burton.

A Crazy Pedestrian.

HALIFAX, June 11—An unfortunate man named McKenna in Charlestown, P. E. I., has been mined with the pedestrian craze, and has literally gone walking mad. He is a mechanic, and up to a few weeks since had never shown any signs of insanity. A fit of [illegible] apprehowever, he began to act very queerly, and at last left his work, complaining that he was about to engage in a contest with Deddy corner out back. He commenced his self-imposed task about six o'clock every morning and walks till midnight. Thursday was the fifteenth day he has engaged in this manner and the number of miles he has covered during that time must be very great for one who is not a professional pedestrian.

TOWN COUNCIL.

A special session of the Town Council was held on Monday evening last, for the purpose of passing the By-law extending the time for the completion of the Toronto & Ottawa Railway. Present, His Worship the Mayor, and Councillors Cahill, Taylor, Smith, Butler, Deane and Griffith.

The Mayor stated that he had been requested by Mr. Scott to call the meeting, and have the railway By-law passed, so that he might be prepared to go before the County Council to ask that body to renew the County By-law. He also read an opinion from Mr. J. F. Dennistoun, to the effect that the extension of the By-law would not in any way affect the terms of the original By-law as amended.

On motion, the Council went into committee of the whole on the second reading of the By-law, after which it received its third reading and was finally passed.

Petitions were received from James Lytle, Robert Kincaid, John R. Rogers, Wm. Hudson, Irwin Marks, John O'Brien and R. C. Robinson, asking for street repairs and improvements. Referred to the Street and Bridge Committee.

A communication from John McGhee, assistant constable, asking the Council to pay him $13.08, the price of a new uniform, which he had purchased. Referred to the Finance Committee.

Accounts from Toker & Co., one for $14.50, and one for $7.50; and one from J. R. Stratton, for $12, were received and referred to the Finance Committee.

Moved by Councillor Smith, seconded by Councillor Deane,—That the Clerk be instructed to notify the Collector to return his Roll for the year 1878, as required by law within one week from this date.—Carried.

Councillor Smith said he understood there were about $1,800 yet uncollected on the Roll.

The Council then separated.

Foresters' Fete.

The anniversary of the order of Foresters in Canada was celebrated by the members of Peterborough Court on Tuesday last by a procession, athletic sports, and a promenade concert in the evening.

THE PROCESSION.

At half-past one the members formed in procession at their Hall, on Water street, and headed by the Fire Brigade Band, marched to the Market Square and from thence along George to Simcoe, up Simcoe to Rubidge, thence to Hunter, along Water by way of Simcoe to George, and from thence along George to the Agricultural Grounds. The procession presented a very nice appearance, the members all wearing white felt hats turned up at one side, with white and red plumes, sashes, white and green collars, with hunter's horns hanging under the arm. Quite a number of them appeared in bright green velvet tunics, faced with white and trimmed with gold tinsel, wearing knee boots of buff leather with deep red tops. Being the first procession of the kind in this town its advent was anxiously looked for by a large concourse of people who crowded the streets along the line of march.

THE ATHLETIC SPORTS.

Between two and three hundred people assembled in the grounds during the afternoon to witness the sports, which were keenly contested. The following are the names of the successful competitors:—

THE PROMENADE CONCERT.

At half past seven the Fire Brigade and Foresters formed in procession on Water street and marched to the Drill Shed, where a numerous and tastefully decorated with flags, mottoes, evergreens, &c. On entering the first thing to attract attention was an arch erected a few yards from the door, having for its key stone a beaver's head, surmounted with a wreath of evergreens interwined with flowers, and bearing the motto "Welcome to Robin Hood's Retreat." Within the Shed was studded with trees, and at the upper end the band stand was a perfect forest of evergreen, in the centre of which appeared a full figure of a deer, having capacity, also a lynx, with a number of deer heads fixed among the trees. There were about five hundred people present, when, to the strains of the band, commenced the most pleasant of the promenade and enjoyed themselves as best they might. An exhibition of fencing was given by Messrs J. Watson, H. W. Watson, W. Drury and Sergeant Bellas, the first, second and third prizes being won by the first named and third gentlemen. At the conclusion of the entertainment, the prizes were presented by Miss Katie Ulyat to the successful competitors in the sports in the afternoon.

Taking it altogether the entertainment was one of which the members may feel proud, and as the pretty basement either we may expect to see their annual fetes looked forward to as one of the events of the season.

The Toronto & Ottawa Railway.

To the Editor of the Examiner:—

SIR,—The By-law granting $150,000 to this Railway being about to lapse, by effluxion of time, has caused a stir among those more immediately concerned, and an appeal was made to the Council to pass a By-law to extend the time for commencing work on said road to one year from 1st July next. The Council decided to call a public meeting of the ratepayers to express their opinions of the propriety or otherwise of giving the sought-for extension of time. The result of the meeting was the passage of a resolution instructing the Council to pass the By-law asked for. In consequence of the apathy of the cities of Toronto and Ottawa in the measure, many of the ratepayers began to imagine that the entire scheme would fall through and we should be spared from incurring an unreasonable debt and a perpetual taxation for an object of questionable utility. It is a very serious matter to increase the debt of a municipality to nearly as much more. Our debenture debt for 1878 is $186,100. The proposed bonus of $150,000 will make our entire debt $336,300,—a grievous burden for a town of some 6000 souls to carry. If the most sanguine advocate of this scheme will sit down and carefully consider the fearful increase of taxation consequent upon the large amount subscribed, and the benefits to be derived from the construction of the road, he must be aware that the amount subscribed is out of all proportion to the advantages to be gained by the road. There are many people who imagine that the more railways the better. This idea is all wrong. It costs a large per centage of the earnings of a railway to pay the working expenses, and no railway of any length in the Dominion pays its way and its stockholders their dividends. From returns published we find a fearful deficiency of receipts last year, amounting to over $423,000. The following figures show the decrease in the receipts of the roads named, from January 1st to May 31st, 1879, only five months, compared with the same period in 1878, showing—as they certainly do—a great falling off of traffic on the roads named: Grand Trunk, $160,000 less; Great Western, $180,000; Northern, $28,560; Toronto & Nipissing, $28,380; Midland, $15,850; Toronto, Grey & Bruce, $12,000; and Hamilton & North Western, $8,000. In face of these facts, combined with the difficulty of obtaining money for railway purposes, it seems little short of madness to talk about beginning operations just now, or beginning them at all when railroads are showing such a poor exhibit of profit and loss.

There is a view of the injury that will arise if the Toronto and Ottawa Railway is constructed that I have not heard stated, and that is, it will seriously affect the traffic of both the Grand Trunk and the Midland. Both roads are now working at a loss. If the proposed Road is built there will be another losing concern launched out, with such a cloud of witnesses staring the projectors in their face, as we have mentioned before.

Again, if there is any Railway above another that we should be wary not to countenance or not to impair its receipts, it is the Midland.

We have a large interest in this Road. In 1877 it owed the Town some $12,000 or $13,000 for interest due, and some $66,800 of principal matured and maturing. Is it wise in us to do anything that will operate to prevent our realizing our just rights from this Railway. The truth is, the Road is not earning enough to pay bondholders, stockholders or creditors.

When we were about taking stock in the Midland Railway we hesitated to subscribe until we were sure of receiving interest at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum on the amount of our stock. The projectors assured us we should receive our interest without fail. The money was paid by the Town in full, but four years elapsed, ere we received a cent, whilst $28,800 of interest had accrued and were then due. It then transpired that our lien on the Road for the payment of our interest in their opinion was worthless. This came out when we pressed the Company for our money. They then offered if the town would throw off $40,000 worth of our stock they would pay the interest and Principal in monthly payments, which they did for several years, but the payments have ceased, and it is said the present Presidents of the Road

WAITING.

Learn to wait. life's hardest lesson.
Learned, perchance, through blinding tears.
While the heart throbs sadly echo
To the tread of passing years

Learn to wait, hope's new fruition;
Faint not, though the way seems long;
There is joy in each condition,
Hearts, though suffering, may grow strong.

Constant sunshine, however welcome,
Never would ripen fruit or flower;
Giant oaks owe half their greatness
To the raging tempest's power.

This a soul untouched by sorrow,
Aims not at a higher state;
Joy seeks not a brighter morrow.
Only sad hearts learn to wait.

Human strength and human greatness
Spring not from life's sunny side,
Heroes must be more than clothwood,
Floating on a voyeless tide.

Other People's Business.

There is scarcely any thing more unfortunate for a man than the absence of loving women around his childhood and youth. Mark Ripon had never known such women, and I offer this fact as some palliation for his want of faith in them.

He was ignorant of his advantage; he had been found one summer morning on the steps of the Foundation School in Baxtergate, Ripon; and as it was on the festival of St. Mark, he had received the name of the saint and the name of his native city, and been adopted by the institution.

Wholesome food, neat clothing, and a decent trade had been given him by the Foundation, and in many respects he was felt to have done it honor, for after fifty years of creditable citizenship, he was one of the cathedral vestry, sat in the Common Council of the ancient city which had adopted him, and was said to be worth at least £50,000.

But there is a success which the world sees little of—that of the heart—and in this respect Mark Ripon was the veriest pauper. Of the nurse and matron who had been around his earliest years he had not one tender memory; none of them had fed the hunger of his heart. He had no home, no mother, and no sister. The school had been simply a place in which to eat and to sleep and to learn.

Unfortunately, when the lad fell in love, it was with a pretty girl infinitely more heartless than himself. But Mark's love had been cruelly deceived and mocked, and he had come out of his chagrin and sorrow with a confirmed belief in the general and natural unfaithfulness of women. Popular maxims and jests confirmed him every day in his idea, and like most Englishmen, having once avowed this as his opinion, every reiteration of his own idea was a fresh confirmation of it.

But he had many friends among his own sex. Men generally spoke of him as a crusty old bachelor, but otherwise a well-to-do, shrewd, and honorable fellow. Chief among these friends was young George Downes, the child of the only companion his boyhood had ever known, and his own godson. If Mark Ripon loved any human being, it was George Downes, though as the latter grew up to manhood, he gave him a great deal of anxiety. For George preferred the society of women, and would not credit Mark's positive assurances of their universal falseness and unworthiness.

One moonlight night, as Mark was coming from a vestry meeting, he met George in the cathedral close, and on his arm was a very beautiful girl. The old man looked angrily and doubtfully at the pretty face lifted to his favorite's. The bright moonbeams touched her long hair-curls, and made the white veil around them like a glory. Mark remembered just such a lovely, innocent face lifted to his, and he had no doubt whatever that this girl would be just as false to George as pretty Maltby had been to him.

George, however, would not be persuaded to doubt her. Then Mark offered to pay his expenses if he would go abroad and travel for two years, but George said he had just got a place in Butterfield's Bank, and preferred a home.' The young man, in Mark's eyes, was bent on ruining himself, and in a few weeks he celebrated his wedding with an elaborate rejoicing that roused the old man's bitterest contempt.

George fully expected that he would now be ignored, and probably lose forever any chances he might have had of inheriting his grandfather's wealth. But Mark was unlike the generality of men in many respects, and in none more than in his behavior to the young man who had so flagrantly disregarded all his advices and entreaties.

He redoubled his care over him, and watched all his movements with a constantly increasing interest. In fact, he did not blame George at all, he regarded him as one who, in an unfortunate hour, had fallen into the hands of a power which was too great for him. He pitied the happy bridegroom, and resolved as soon as possible to release him from the toils of the woman who had charmed and enslaved him.

In vain George's wife smiled and entertained Mark Ripon. He visited her house, indeed, for it was necessary to watch her movements; but neither her smiles, nor songs, nor attentions moved Mark. He had gone through that delusion once, and was not to be deceived again. It was one great point in his favor that George had taken a house in such a situation that he could keep the young wife under very close surveillance, and he was confident that sooner or later he would prove her all that he believed women universally to be.

But month after month went by, and George was more in love than ever. There had also come to the happy home, over the way, from Mark's, a fine little boy, that had been called after him, and a blue-eyed girl, whom not even Mark could yet find in his heart to regard as false and dangerous. He was even venturing to make Mrs. George Dawns that exception said to be contingent on every rule, when suddenly all his suspicions were forced into active life and prominence.

One day—a very wet one—a close carriage drove up to George's house, and Mrs. George, heavily cloaked and veiled, was driven away in it.

'Very well, ma'am,' said Mark, suspiciously, to himself, "we shall see whether you confess to having been out to-day.'

So he went over to George's, played a rubber or two with his favorite, and tried every way to induce a confession as to the drive in the rain; but the young wife would make no allusion to it. This was on Monday. On Thursday at the same hour, the carriage came again, and George's wife went away in it. The next week she went out on three different days, and twice, the weather being fine, he noticed that she wore her very best satin dress, the rich blue brocade that had been one of her wedding suits.

The affair was beginning to look very black to Mark, for he had satisfied himself that George had been told nothing whatever of these clandestine excursions. On the next Monday he had a carriage waiting, and when the lady went out again he directed his driver to keep her well in sight. In this way he followed her beyond the aristocratic precincts of the city, to a little house set back in a garden quite in the suburbs. A very handsome foreign-looking man met her at the door, and led her with many smiles into the house.

Mark sent his carriage home, and, in spite of the cold, patiently waited. After an interval of two hours Mrs. Downe's carriage returned, the same gentleman put her carefully into it, and she must have driven at once home, for when Mark passed the house she was sitting in her plain merino dress at the window, nursing his namesake. She ran to the door and begged him to come in, but Mark was full of his discovery, and answered, gruffly, 'Ask George to come to me after dinner; I have something to tell him.'

George heard what his godfather had to say, with a face half angry and half incredulous. 'It must have been my wife's sister,' he said.

Mark laughed essentially at such a defence, and, moreover, firmly asserted that it was Mrs Downes, and not Mrs. Downes's sister. 'Come on Thursday, and see for yourself, George.'

'If I do, godfather, it will not be because I suspect my wife, but because I am sure to prove you wrong.'

Still George thought it singular that he could not by the most adroit questioning get from his wife any allusion to these mysterious visits. At length he said, 'Emma,' I will ask for Thursday afternoon, and we will go out to Ardborough Woods, and get the holly and mistletoe for Christmas. What do you say?

'I can't go Thursday, George dear; I have so much to do.'

'What have you to do?'

'More than I can tell you. Is it not near Christmas, and does not that imply all sorts of home-keeping duties? But I will go with you Friday, dear.'

George was a little cross at the refusal, and answered, gloomily, 'No; he had lost the wish to go now.' Then both were silent, and the evening was not a pleasant one. All the next day he told himself that he would not go and watch his wife Thursday; yet when the day came he was sitting with his godfather at the window. At the usual hour the carriage arrived, and Mrs. Downes, with her hair as elaborately dressed as if she was going to a state dinner at the bishop's palace, ran down the steps, and was soon driven rapidly away.

'Well, godfather,' he said pleasantly, 'that is Emma, certainly, and she is very remarkably dressed; but, for all that, I am sure she has some good reason for what she is doing. I believe I will wait until she tells me.'

'Don't be such a fool, George; go and question your servants.'

After a little reflection, George crossed to his own house and rang the bell. The house maid seemed astonished at his appearance, and when he asked where her mistress was, said she had not seen her since she had taken her orders for dinner. Then George went up to the nursery.

'Where is your mistress, Ann?'

'Is she not in the parlour, Sir?'

'You know she is not. Where did she go in the carriage?'

'Indeed, Sir, it is my business to mind the children; the mistress knows her own affairs, without the like of me meddling in them.'

He turned round impatiently, went back to Mark Ripon, and got an accurate description of the house to which he had traced Mrs. George; and in half an hour the half-curious and half-angry husband stopped at the pretty cottage. All was quiet about it, there was no appearance of company, it looked almost deserted in its wintry garden.

An exceedingly lovely woman, though evidently in frail and failing health, opened the door for him, saying, in an inquiring voice, 'You want the signor, Sir?'

"No, I wish to see Mrs. Downes; she is here, I believe?'

'Ah, yes; she is here. If you will please to go up one stairs. I am so weak and tired always.'

She pointed to the stairs, and George went thoughtfully up them. Half way there was a little landing and a door, and here he heard a strange musical voice, and then his wife's merry laugh to its observation. It settled George; he knocked sharply, and before an answer could be given opened the door and went into the room.

'Oh, George, how provoking? What made you come, dear?'

His wife was sitting in all her bridal finery on a little elevated platform, and Signor Sarti was putting the last touches to a very lovely portrait of her.

'I meant it for your Christmas gift, George, and you have peeped beforehand. Is not that too bad?'

"Indeed it is, Emma." But Emma was almost satisfied with his peeping, so proudly and lovingly did he take her home.

"How did you find me out, George?"

"Oh, you are easy to find out, Emma. Of course I knew if you went out in a carriage, that you got the carriage at Morrell's. But how do you come to know this Frenchman?'

"You think all foreigners are Frenchmen, George. He is an Italian, and so is his beautiful wife. He came from London to paint my lord bishop and the cathedral, and the signora was so much better here that he resolved to spend the winter in Yorkshire, and try and make enough to take her home to Italy in the spring. My lord asked me to have my picture done, and papa paid for it in order to surprise you. I think, George dear, you had better not let papa know you have spoiled his surprise,'

George felt more and more sorry, and humiliated as he looked in the pretty, frank face, and thought how cheerfully, after all, she had taken the forestallment of her Christmas secret.

I will do as you say, Emma. Has the signor plenty of work?"

"He is painting many of the principal ladies in the city. The bishop thinks very highly of him. Indeed, I have seen his lordship there at nearly all my visits."

George let the subject drop now as quickly as possible to Emma; but he talked a good deal about it—and in no very good temper—to his godfather. For once Mark had no excuse for his suspicions. He was quite awed by the fact that he had dared to think wrong of interviews which the bishop had arranged and honored with his presence.

He had lost faith in his own penetration regarding the sex, and George and Emma were quietly at some pains to convince him that good and true women are the rule, and not the exception.

And though I can not describe exactly how it came about, I know that the next Christmas Mark was the gayest old bachelor in Ripon, and opened the festival ball at George's house with Signor Sarti's handsome sister—the very same lady whom the bishop himself, very soon afterward, made Mrs. Mark Ripon.

BAILLIEBORO.

COUNCIL MEETING.—At the request of the Reeve, the Council met before organising as Court of Revision, to further consider the advisability of opening a road across the S. E. corner Lot 19 to Lot No. 20, Con. 4, and which was referred to a committee of the whole Council last meeting. Present, the Reeve, Mr. Barnard, Councillors Wood, Lightfoot, Riddell and Rutherford. The minutes of last meeting read and adopted. On motion, Dennis Corkery, owner of Lot No. 19, Con. 4, was then heard and offered to give the right of way for a road across the S. E. corner of his lot to Lot No. 20, on conditions that he receive in lieu thereof the original road allowance between Lots Nos. 19 and 20, Con. 4, and that the Council erect a fence on the west side of proposed road and that a gate be kept at the south end for egress and ingress to the same. Moved by Mr. Rutherford, seconded by Mr. Wood,—That the offer made by Dennis Corkery, be accepted, provided that Josiah Perrin, the owner of Lot No. 20, Con. 4, erect the fence on the west side of foregoing road and keep a gate at the south end of the same at his own expense.—Carried

COURT OF REVISION.—The Council then formed into Court of Revision after taking their oaths of office and filing the same with the Clerk, to revise the assessment roll of 1879. It was then moved by the Reeve, seconded by Mr. Lightfoot,—That Mr. Rutherford preside in the chair. It was further moved in amendment by Mr. Rutherford, seconded by Mr. Wood,—That Mr. Riddell preside in the chair. The Clerk decided in favor of Mr. Rutherford, who then took the chair. The following is a list of appeals from the assessment roll for 1879 and the action taken: Robert Lang, 1 day to be struck off, appeal granted; Joseph Perrin, 1 day to be struck off, assessment confirmed; Wm. By-law 173, empowering the Reeve to defend any law suit that may be entered against the road allowance established by T. B. NOTE—Eclectric—Selected and Electrised

Mitchell's Bellandona Improved India Rubber Porous Plaster.

There never has been a time when the healing of so many different diseases has been treated by outward application as the present. It is an undisputed fact that over half of the entire population of the globe resort to the use of ordinary plasters.

The principal ingredients used in making these Plasters are Gum Olibanum—or better known as the Frankincense of the Bible—Rubber, and Burgundy Pitch which, when scientifically compounded, is full of electricity and when combined with the pure medicinal gums, is found to be one greatest healing mediums ever brought before the human race.

They are acknowledged by all who have used them to act quicker than any other Plaster they ever before tried, and that one of these Plasters will do more real service than a hundred of the ordinary kind. All other Plasters are slow of action, and require to be worn continually to effect a cure; but with these it is entirely different; the instant one applied the patient will feel its effect.

They possess all the soothing, warming supporting and strengthening qualities of all other Plasters. Many who have been relieved of RHEUMATISM, TICDOLOREUX, and various other pains in the KIDNEYS, BREAST or SIDE, and believe it is solely done by the electrical qualities which the Porous Plasters contain, and which is imparted to the system, thus restoring them to a healthy condition.

They are very soft and pliable, still very adhesive; and a sure cure for WEAK BACKS PAINS IN THE SIDE AND BREAST, and are invaluable to those who have a COLD of long standing, and often prevents CONSUMPTION. Some even tell us they believe they were entirely cured by the use of them of a long seated Consumption.

IMPROVED CHURN DASHER.

(Patented July, 1878.)

Is adapted to all the old fashioned Round, Tub or Crock Churns. It will churn and gather the butter in from 4 to 10 minutes, and turn out 10 per cent more butter than anything of the kind in use. Each section or flange is an Air Chamber, which forces a large volume of atmosphere down into the milk or cream at each stroke, the cream or milk at the same time is forced over upward of four hundred inches of surface, and is thrown with such great velocity square against the walls of the churn that it ruptures the globules and frees the butter with a few strokes. It is perfectly simple and easily constructed,—no machinery about it to get out of order.

CATARRH.

Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Cures Catarrh.

T. J. B. HARDING, Esq., BROCKVILLE, ONT.

DEAR SIR,—It is now two years since your "Constitutional Catarrh Remedy" was introduced to me. I have waited this long to see if the cure would remain permanent before doing this, my duty, to you, as at first the happy effects seemed to me to be "too good to be true."

I was afflicted in my head for years before I suspected it to be Catarrh. In reading in your Circular I saw my case decided in many particulars. The inward "drop" from the head had become very disagreeable, and a choking sensation often preventing me from lying long, I would feel like smothering and be compelled to sit up in the bed. My health and spirits were seriously affected. When your Agent came to Walkerstown in August 1877, I secured three bottles. Before I had used a quarter of the contents of one bottle I found decided relief, and when I had used two bottles and a third, I quit taking it, feeling quite cured of that ailment, and have not used any since until of late I have taken some for a cold in my head.

A sense of duty to sufferers from that loathsome disease, Catarrh, prompts me to send you this Certificate, unsolicited, with leave to make what use of it you may see proper. Yours truly,

W. TINDALL, Methodist minister,

Fort Elgin, Ont., Aug. 24, 1878.

Sewing Machine PROTECTION.

Ladies, protect your health by purchasing the WHEELER & WILSON which is proven to be The Lightest Running Sewing Machine in the World!

Natural Philosophy proves it, and Common sense sanctions it, as their motion is Rotating, while that of a shuttle machine is reciprocating. They are more durable than a shuttle machine and far less complicated.

They sew heavier and lighter than any other machine.

They make less noise than any other machine and they do the nicest and prettiest range of work, never soiling the thread with oil or dirt. They also took the Grand Prize at the Paris Exhibition held in France, on the 31st of October, 1878, from all the other machines present, and there were over fifty-two thousand on exhibition.

The above Leading Machines are sold at Peterborough by

IN MEMORIAM.

On the Death of the Late I. J. C——.

There's a request which by me must be upheld,
That my memory shall have a place in the world.
For I've done good deeds in my life as you know well,
And I've left a name that will never fade.
This world, it is full of rules and manners,
Especially Parsons, who preach to sinners,
But I'll be there our lowly friend.

Mischief short years for thee given to us—
It was a gift we thankfully received him;
He was mirth, kind, full of wise.
We as living I honor and cherished.
Then this proud, fair, and accomplished wife;
Thou art heavenly Father, guide us!
And now to Rosedale.

Like a flower we watched him fading,
Every day written in the night,
But as strength and life departed,
Faith and hope strengthened more brighter.
His an hour, by appointed,
Then I've lost it in my face!
Only think, to be with Jesus
In that blessed, holy place.

Jehovah gave, and he has taken,
We will bless his holy name,
He's not lost, but gone before us,
Another voice to praise the Lamb.
Another voice to praise the Lamb.
Another beloved to dwell in heaven forward.
Who will cry, Hosanna, Hosanna glory;
Ye I see Father, thou will guide us,
Thou will lead us by thy love.

THE LATE PRINCE IMPERIAL.

FURTHER PARTICULARS OF PRINCE LOUIS' DEATH.

Official Confirmation.—The Intelligence Broken to the Ex-Empress.—Reports of the Move in France.—Effect of the Prince's Death on the Bonapartist Cause.

LONDON June 20.—The news of the death of the Prince Imperial of France reached here late last night, and was circulated in the lobbies of the House of Commons.

A Cape Town special adds the following particulars of the death of the Prince Imperial. The body of the Prince, when found, lay on its back with eighteen assegai stabs, two piercing the body from chest to back, two in the side and one destroying the right eye. A locket with hair medallions and reliquary was around his neck. The face wore a pallid expression. He had evidently tried to mount and the leather of the saddle flap tearing he ran along the path to where found. Two troopers lay near the body both assegaied. The Prince was very adventurous. His movement of a party of officers from Col. Wood's camp to reconnoitre was his first step in the invasion of Zululand. The Prince had been sent forward by the Quarter Master General to sketch a site for the next camp. When the volley was fired not a single Zulu was to be seen. The party dispersed and sought safety under cover. The Prince was never seen alive again. His horse joined Lieutenant Carey's party on the road back to camp.

Lord Sydney to-day tenderly notified the Ex-Empress, Eugenie, of the death of the Prince. The Ex-Empress received the news with an agonized cry, and sank into a senseless stupor. She remains insensible.

The news of the death of Prince Louis Napoleon Bonaparte will be received with regret by all the countrymen of the brave soldiers in Zululand whose comrade he voluntarily became. By Englishmen at least he cannot be remembered as a "soldier of fortune." The motive which led to his taking part in the war in South Africa was very probably what may be termed mixed ones, but whatever schemes may have been fostered thereby in the ranks of the Bonapartist party in France, Englishmen will remember that he accounted for his determination by the avowal of "comeraderie," which he felt towards those with whom he had been trained. His death will be a heavy blow to the ex-Empress Eugenie, whose hopes were centered in the destiny of her son, and whose careworn appearance and apparent grief at his departure in March last, even then aroused the pitying sympathy of the multitude of people who gathered to cheer the alien who had made their cause his own. He is said to have been respected and loved by the Royal Family, and to have been an especial favorite of the Queen. Napoleon Eugene Louis Jean Joseph, son of Napoleon III. and the Empress Eugenie, was born in the Tuileries, on the 16th day of March, 1856, and was consequently in his twenty-fourth year. He was as a child very delicate, but in spite of this he was very carefully educated. During the Franco-Prussian war he accompanied his father to Metz, and afterwards received his "baptism of fire" at Saarbruck. During this ordeal his demeanor was, according to his somewhat theatrical father, so calm and brave that the French soldiers were said to have been affected to tears on observing it. When the result of the war was no longer doubtful, the young Prince was taken to Belgium and thence to England, where he was joined by his mother and later by his father, who died at Chislehurst. He received a military education at the Woolwich Academy, and passed with high honors. Political consideration prevented him from accepting the service and rank in the army to which he was entitled by his successful examination. In March he embarked for Zululand to take part in the war, and "watch the conflict between civilization and barbarism," an experience which he hoped "might be useful to him," but which he has not lived to realize. His career has not been eventful, as that of either his father or his grandmother, but his end will no doubt be considered by his country as more glorious than that either of the exile of Chiselhurst or of St. Helena.

His death now leaves the political horizon clear so far as the Imperialists are concerned, and it was a matter of doubt whether Prince Napoleon, who would now be heir to the throne in case of its re-establishment, would take any active part with the Imperial party. The news of the young man's death would be made a matter of personal sympathy for the mother in losing her son, whom everyone knew was so dear to her, and on whom all her hopes were centered. While living in exile he was not an exile by law, as he had gone away voluntarily with his mother. The Chancellor regarded the death of the young man as a death-blow to the hopes of the Imperialists.

Nemesis is lame but she is of colossal stature, like the gods, and sometimes while her sword is yet unsheathed she stretches out her huge left arm and grasps her victims. The mighty thing is leveling, but the victim bottom under the dire clutch.

Toronto Methodist Conference.

The following report from the Committee on Ministerial was presented and adopted:

On amusements and church entertainments the Committee recommend the adoption of the following:

1. That the Conference is fully persuaded that the pleasure dance and card-playing are inconsistent with the spirit and teaching of our holy religion, that their encouragement and tendency are evil continually, and that no member of the Methodist Church can consistently countenance or patronize these amusements.

2. That the superintendent minister is responsible for the character of the programmes submitted at all meetings held in our churches, and that we deprecate the introduction of comic readings and songs therein, as incompatible with the sanctity associated with all places of public worship.

3. That notices of motion not connected with our regular Church work, nor with any of the Christian enterprises of the day, ought not to be announced from our pulpits.

4. Funeral Services.—The Committee recommend that all our ministers and preachers be instructed to discourage the practice which prevails in certain localities on funeral occasions, viz., that of unseemly departure from the rules of our discipline on public worship, especially the rule which indicates the Scriptural attitude during prayer.

5. Emigration to Manitoba.—In reference to the fact that large numbers of our people are emigrating to Manitoba and the North-west, we recommend our ministers to furnish them with credentials of their church membership, as the discipline of the Church provides.

7. Class Meetings.—The Committee recommends a vigorous and judicious enforcement of the existing rule on the subject.

The Red River Valley.

This great valley of the North, 500 miles long, and 75 miles wide, is really the wheat country of North America. Such is the language used about it by a special correspondent, writing last week to the Chicago Tribune. It extends from Lake Winnipeg to below Moorhead, Dakota, and 150 miles of it is in Manitoba, 1,329,000 acres of wheat land were taken up in that valley in 1878-8, says this authority, and 2,000,000 acres are said to have been taken up this year, while 6,000,000 bushels is the estimated wheat crop of the valley for 1879 the yield being 25 to 35 bushels per acre. So rapidly are settlers filling up the country that it is seldom in riding the first 300 miles, that you are out of sight of settlers' huts. Beyond that the prairies are specked with emigrant waggons. "I suppose" says the Tribune's letter, "I saw teams breaking up the prairie as often as once in a mile during the entire distance. For about fifty miles beyond Glyndon, where the St. Paul and Pacific Railroad crosses the Northern Pacific, the best wheat land has been taken; then for the next 100 miles, about an acre in four is selected; while for seventy miles south of St. Vincent on the boundary between Minnesota and Manitoba, the country is all a wild prairie. At the south end of the valley and on the Northern Pacific R.R. lies the famous Dalrymple farm of 55,555 acres of rich, black prairie soil." On the Red River and Lake Winnipeg there are now no less than sixteen steamers, all of which seem to be busily freighted with passengers and goods.

Regulations Adopted by Order-in-Council.

The undersigned respectfully begs to report to His Honor the Lieut-Governor in Council the following, respecting the Education Department.

1. The regulation as to second class certificates of qualification to teach in the public schools, are recommended to be amended so as to provide that, in the case of a public school teacher who has successfully taught in a school for at least three years before the 18th day of August, 1877, a second class certificate may be awarded to such teacher non-successfully passing the non professional examination for such certificate and upon satisfactory proof being furnished to the Minister of such period of teaching service, and that it shall not be necessary that any such teacher shall be required to attend a Normal School.

No member of a County Board of Examiners shall be concerned in examining or valuing papers of any candidate who has been instructed by him or in the school with which he is connected, and the presiding Inspector will see that this rule is observed. But it is recommended that all the members of the County Board (having due regard to the above exception) shall be present at the examination of third class teachers, from the first day of the examination, and that such members as are not engaged as presiding examiners shall, as the answers are handed in by the candidates, proceed with the necessary work of their examination.

County Treasurers and other officials are authorized to pay such expenses as are properly incurred by the County Board in connection with these duties.

3. High School Boards may, in pursuance of the amended Act of 1879, impose at the examination for admission such fee, not exceeding one dollar per pupil, upon candidates, being the children of non-residents, who are not liable to pay county or municipal rates for the support of such school, but no fee for examining for admission in other cases shall be exacted by any High School Board.

Respectfully submitted,
(Signed) ADAM CROOKS,
Minister of Education.

Education Department, (Ont.,)
Toronto, 13th June, 1879.

Mr. George Stephens, of Montreal, in a letter to a correspondent in Toronto says:—"It would be a service to the Londonderry Iron Works were the dissensions of its affairs withdrawn from the arena of politics. It could manufacture that a duty of seventy-five cents or seven cent dollar per ton on locomotives and would reduce the cost of coal at the pit's mouth. All the Londonderry Company asks from the Government is that its coal shall be carried by the Intercolonial Railway at the same price per ton per mile as coal is carried for to Quebec. Then for the Midland Railway and the hope of life which is centred, the works would in all probability have been closed a year ago."

How and When to take a Vacation

There are people who do not take a vacation because they conscientiously cannot, there are those who don't take one because they won't; there are those who, taking, make something in the way of health, amusement or enjoyment of knowledge out of their vacation, and there are those who only intensify the inconsequence of their existence by travel. About the only thing to be said is that every one ought to have some enough to know how and when and where to take his or her vacation, and to avoid the idea that the recreation of another is guaranteed that the same place and things will give pleasure to the imitator. Means, tastes, habits, sex, time of life are all factors, and where these coincide the fact of no or hasty and limited acquaintanceship is sufficient with many to militate against the crowd. The law of variety is as universal as any other law. It is beneficial as it is pleasant to get occasionally out of the ruts. But it is not essential that the change should be far in distance or great in kind. The vacation, simply as a vacation from accustomed work and in physical and mental recuperation, may often better be taken at home; that is to say, with such excursions as do not break up the home life; or in many cases the habit of turning daily, for an hour or two, wholly aside from the ordinary routine, and in indulging in reading, study or work of a different character, will be a perpetual and sufficient vacation. One thing is absolutely certain, change of thoughts, of care, of responsibility. Worry among the hills or in Europe is as depressing and destructive as worry in the counting-room or manufactory—even more so, for the distance precludes its alleviation by the endeavor to remove its cause. The formal, fashionable and legal vacation ought to be the occasion for the renewal of strength of body and mind. How far it is so, fortunately, perhaps, we have no statistics to show.—Providence Journal.

A Baby Buried Alive.

(From the St. John's Newfoundlander, June 6.)

A crime of revolting nature was brought to light here on last Wednesday evening. Three or four boys walking on Pennywell road, heard cries resembling those of an infant They then saw, showing over the ground, a tiny hand; and becoming alarmed they ran into town, somewhat over a mile, to call the police, who speedily went with them to the spot. On turning up some sods and earth close by the stump of a tree they then discovered, buried alive, a new-born infant. There was a small opening in the ground admitting air, and through which the little creature's cries were heard. The boys had noticed a woman there a short time before, and had seen her go away, but this was all they observed then. The police had the child, which was quite naked, wrapped up in a shirt and taken away to Fort Townsend, where it was well cared for and was baptised; but it died early yesterday morning. A search has been going on for the discovery of the inhuman perpetrator, who is said to be known, and who, we trust, may not escape justice. We remember no such shocking occurrence as this in our criminal annals.

The Letellier Matter in England

The Montreal Witness publishes what purports to be the result of an interview between Hon. Mr. Jolly and the Colonial Secretary during the former's trip to England. In conversation with Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, Mr. Joly learned that one of the "facts" presented by Mr. Langevin was that the Province of Quebec was on the verge of rebellion or revolution as the result of the action of the Lieutenant Governor-General in dismissing his ministry. When the Secretary mentioned this statement made him by Mr. Langevin, Mr. Joly smiled incredulously, and after some further conversation the Premier advised Sir Michael to wait for the result of the Montreal's evidence to the Governor-General and Her Royal Highness the Princess Louise, which would show whether or not the people were upon the point of rebellion. "One thing I will not discuss," said the Secretary in the course of the interview, "that is whether or not the Lieutenant-Governor can dismiss his Ministers. He has that right." Sir Michael said that Mr. Langevin had, however raised one strong point in favor of the removal of Lieutenant-Governor, and that was the interference of the latter at the elections, which was a great abuse of his position. Mr. Joly replied that that had not been charged against the Lieut.-Governor, and upon reference to the written charges such was found to be the case, whereupon Sir Michael said Mr. Langevin had mentioned the matter in conversation with him and he was surprised it did not appear in the documents. Upon the second point the Secretary spoke decidedly. He said the question would not be referred back to Canada.

Happy Thoughts.

Necessity does the work of courage.

A thousand parties of pleasure do not leave a recollection worth that of one good action

Ambition often plays the wrestler's trick of raising a man up merely to fling him down.

A mother dreads no memories—those shadows have all melted away in the dawn of baby's smile.

In the man or woman whose childhood has known caresses there is also a fibre of memory that can be touched to gentle issues.

Smiles are to life what the sparkle is to wine, or scintillations to the diamond intensifying its beauty and clothing it in all the superb hues of the rainbow.

Few nights are so dark that no stars are not be seen; the thing is to look them out and keep one's eyes on them, and make the most of what light can be discovered.

The golden moments in the stream of life rush past us, and we see nothing but sand; the angels come to visit us and we only know them when they are gone.

By love's delightful influence all the injuries of the world are alienated, the bitter cup of affliction is sweetened and fragrant flowers are strewed along the most thorny path of life.

Gentleness and noble emotions, vivid feelings and active energies in the pursuit of some noble object rarely fail to give pleasure to the companion and a noble desire long cherished to the mind.

Our lives should be like days more beautiful in the evening, or like the spring, spring with promise or like the autumn rich with golden sheaves—for good works have ripened on the field

Toronto in Mexico.

LERDO, June 16.—A St. Petersburg correspondent says:—The northern, commercial and administrative of the last few weeks have witnessed the establishment prevailing in Russia. In all the more important towns hosts of people are told off for police duty. The great object now is to avert strain which is thought unbearable. Letters are regularly opened, telegrams are frequently suppressed, and foreign books on many subjects are either prohibited or else so effectually defaced by the censorship as to render them useless. Passports to foreign countries are only exceptionally granted and even more rarely prolonged. Russia at this moment is almost as completely shut off from Europe as in the days of Nicholas.

Funeral of the Late Miss Buck.

(From the Norwood Register.)

The funeral of the late Miss Minnie Buck—whose very sudden death we briefly referred to last week—took place on Friday morning last. Deserving esteem for the deceased young lady when away so unexpectedly from a family circle where she was deeply beloved; due respect for the mourning parents, and to mark their deep regret for this sudden bereavement, brought together a very large concourse of people from both far and near. PETERBOROUGH, JUNE 26, 1879.

RAILWAY AMALGAMATIONS AND THEIR LESSONS.

The giving of bonuses to railway projects will doubtless be conducted in the future on somewhat different principles to those which have prevailed in the past. A great lesson has been taught municipalities and the people composing them by late amalgamations of lines, aided by popular bonuses in order that they might be competing lines, with those into competition with which they were supposed to enter. The people of North Simcoe not very long ago voted very considerable bonuses to the Hamilton & Northwestern Railway in order that it might enter into competition with the Northern Railway, and secure to them lower freight rates than they had been paying to the single line, which formerly held a monopoly of the carrying trade, and could consequently charge what it pleased. The same reason led several of the municipalities in Victoria County to bonus the Whitby, Port Perry, and Lindsay Railway, as a competing line to the Midland road. Now both these new lines have been virtually absorbed by the old ones to which they were to have been rivals, amalgamations of both pairs of roads having been lately effected under a mutually accepted plan of pooling receipts. The granters of the bonuses naturally feel much aggrieved at being thus again left at the mercy of the carriers through the desertion from their cause of those whom they had aided by their means. The older companies are not blamed for looking after their own interests in the best way they could; but great indignation is expressed at the conduct of the newer corporations, the members of whom are looked upon as having been guilty of obtaining money under false pretenses.

Of what direct interest are these amalgamations to Peterborough? Merely as a warning to be careful in the granting of bonuses to any undertaking; to be sure of the terms on which any such aid may be granted, and of the security and permanence of such terms. Peterborough has been before this laughed at by over-clever towns because of her greater prudence in dealing with railway bonuses, when other localities were recklessly voting money to schemes which now turn out to be worse than useless in the way they were intended to be a benefit. The idea of competing lines is a very taking one; but where is the use of a competing line unless there is an assurance that it will continue to be such for more than a few short months? The people of this Town and the municipalities of this County might easily vote bonuses to either the Toronto & Ottawa project or to the Grand Junction line, in order that they might become competitors with the Grand Trunk and Midland Railways; but some security is needed that these new lines will not amalgamate with the very corporations against which they were helped into existence. The older lines have the benefit of longer establishment, and consequently, of existing contracts and of established custom of shippers; consequently in the event of an amalgamation within anything but a very long period it must be the new line that will be absorbed into an older one. Then those who aided the establishment of the newer project are looked upon as enemies of the older corporation that once more gets the upper hand, and they are treated accordingly. If they ask any favors the ready reply will be: "You tried to work against this Company, which therefore owes you no tender considerations!" It is a case in which no fight at all is better than an unsuccessful one.

The actual proposal of an amalgamation of the Grand Junction with the Midland road indeed as long ago to look with little favor on the line to Belleville; the same feeling prompted us to denounce a proposition that the Toronto & Ottawa Company should use the Grand Junction line for a part of the distance toward Ottawa; and we cannot say that we are greatly enamoured of the idea that the new through line project shall be dependent in any degree, or other than on equal terms with the Midland Railway. But whatever be the ultimate result of this railway project to which we yet look with hope, the security of the people voting their money in its aid must be our first consideration. It will not be with the connivance of THE EXAMINER if Peterborough be taken in by mere railway speculators, as have been other localities. We want to see the Toronto & Ottawa Railway built; we are anxious that it should be begun; but it must be carried out, from the first in a thoroughly business-like way and with bona fides of an unquestionable character.

RAILWAY POOLING.

We learn that the managers of the Midland, and Whitby, Port Perry and Lindsay Railways have entered into freight arrangements by which the trouble and expense hitherto necessary through want of such arrangements will be greatly lessened and the public better served. The competition of these two roads and their relative positions compelled each of them, under certain circumstances, to carry goods very much out of the direct way, before delivery, as a glance at their respective lines will show. The Midland in taking goods to places west of Port Hope from Lindsay had to do so at greatly increased costs, on account of increased distances compared with the Whitby road; and on the contrary, the Whitby road was similarly situated in forwarding goods east of Port Hope or even Newcastle.

On account of these disadvantages both roads were losing money, it is stated, and to prevent this continued loss, the two companies have agreed to what is known as "pooling" freight. By these arrangements the goods will proceed on either road by the shortest route to their destination, which, it is believed, will be in the interest of the public. The two companies will receive fixed percentages annually of the freight earnings, the Midland it is said 79 per cent. and the Whitby 21 per cent.

These arrangements, it is believed, will be in the interests of the companies by providing for delivery by shortest routes, preventing wear and tear on long distances and unnecessary handling of goods. They are made for twenty years with the condition that they may be withdrawn in three. Mr. Cox, President of the Midland, is chairman of the committee for carrying out the agreement and freight arrangements. He has directed his energies to lessening the costs of running the roads, and has succeeded in saving large sums to his company in this way. In these times of general depression of trade, retrenchment of outlays is the only remedy likely to prove potent in ensuring a return of prosperity, and he is wise who, as a private individual or President of a railway sees this and commences lopping off unnecessary disbursements and expenses. It is to more economy in living and business arrangements the people must look for better times, for very evidently the National Policy is not likely to do much for the country.

THE GRAND JUNCTION.

Messrs. O. S. Bickford, President of the Grand Junction Railway, and Hector Cameron, as Counsellor, or in some representative capacity, visited this town on Saturday last to sound the council in the matter of giving a bonus to bring the road from Hastings village to this town. We understand they left without much hope of getting anything from Peterborough. We have already a way to the Grand Trunk by the shortest route; why should we pay for another which would be double the distance? They talked of getting their road via Keene, to the Cobourg road, and thence to Peterborough and Mud Lake. It is not best to be too sanguine over such matters lest we meet disappointment, but it is quite easy now to get to Mud Lake by rail, and not wait for the building of about twenty miles of a road, while no one knows where the money is to come from

GRANT TO THE BURLEIGH ROADS.

We understand that the Commissioners of Crown Lands has signified his intention to spend $2,000 this year on the Burleigh road, and the road leading through to Muthune from it. The work is to be done under the supervision of Mr. J. B. McWilliams. This sum will put these roads in a good state of repair, and will materially benefit the settlers in that section of the country, by giving them good roads and the opportunity to earn a little money which is very desirable these hard times.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Sir S. L. Tilley, sailed for England on Saturday.

Why do not Messrs. Hilliard and Burnham now call meetings of their constituents to congratulate them on the great benefits secured by the N.P.?

A writer in the London Times is authority for the statement that the expenses of the Zulu war cost England $2,500,000 a week.

Lieut.-Col. Blanchet, Speaker of the Dominion House of Commons, and the members of the Canadian Wimbleton team under his command, took their departure for England on Saturday last.

Sarnia Observer:—Tories who before the 5th of June walked the streets with the air of men who held a mortgage on the best half of the Dominion, now slide along as demurely as if their whole worldly possessions consisted of a quarter claim on a small lot in the suburbs.

Hon. Mr. Joly has gained another great victory. Roseville, which was last session represented in the Quebec Legislature by a Conservative but who was unseated by the judges, on Wednesday elected Mr. Boutillier, Liberal, by a majority of 259.

The Cobourg Sentinel blames the Catholics for putting the Mowat Government in power for the next four years, for electing Mr. Blezard in East Peterborough, Mr. Ferris in East Northumberland, Mr. Field in West Northumberland, and Hon. Mr. Wood in South Victoria. "It's greatly to their credit."

According to recent insurance statistics the losses by fire in the U. S. and Canada for the first four months of the present year were $21,000,000, while from 1875 to 1878 inclusive, the losses in the same period ranged from $13,800,000 and $14,000,000. No cause is assigned for this extraordinary increase of nearly 50 per cent.

The Quebec Legislature was opened on Thursday afternoon last by His Honor Lieut.-Governor Letellier, whose recent illness, though occasioning considerable anxiety to his friends a few days ago, has almost vanished. It is stated that two or three members of the Legislature who supported the Opposition last session have promised this session to support the Government.

The London Times, referring to a recent speech of Sir Stafford Northcot and the probable early dissolution of Parliament, trusts that when the electors come to consider how the Ministers have discharged their trust with regard to England's foreign relations they will consider the difficulties which they had to encounter.

Mr. Joly's Government in Quebec now controls the House with a majority of three, and there is promise of a still greater accession of strength. The confidence with which the Ministry proposes new and important measures is anything but a sign of weakness. The Joly Government evidently has the people of Quebec at its back.

If other farm products be protected, why should not wool? Or, if wool be free, why should not all other productions? These are questions no fellow can understand. But every fellow, even the formerly enamoured Tory protectionist, can now understand that the thing called a National Policy is a fraud, a delusion and a snare, by which the country was caught, taken in and done for at the Dominion elections last September.

Hanlan will sail for Canada on Dominion Day. A correspondent in the Globe suggests the propriety of calling after Hanlan the island on which his home is, and which has never yet had a name of its own. The Ottawa Free Press asks for Hanlan to be knighted, and the Globe wants him appointed an official assignee, and a correspondent of another paper suggests that it would be a graceful act on the part of the Dominion Government to offer Hanlan (no matter what his politics may be) some good position under the Marine Department.

The Review having been forced to take back its charge against Mr. Cox, of having tried to spirit away voters on election day, tries to let itself down easy by indulging in a little empty bluster of what it could tell if it would. Now, we are fully persuaded that it has always the will, if it only had the opportunity and the courage to be malevolent. We therefore ask that it will free itself from anything like restraint, and give what it calls "the true version of the facts," by which it acknowledges that it has already given an untrue version—just what we accused it of doing.

The Review professes now that it would like to be an independent journal, after the manner of the Times, perhaps! But then it says the naughty EXAMINER will not allow it. Thanks again for an acknowledgement of THE EXAMINER's influence! It seems we have done wrong (1) in accusing the Review of being "on the fence," (2) of having "become a Reform paper," and (3) of being a bigoted Tory. If the Review is not on the fence, and neither Reform nor Tory, what is it anyway? It is probable that since the 5th of June its managers don't quite know themselves.

The following despatch was cabled to the Globe on Friday last:—"The decision of the Imperial Government in the Letellier case will be given next Wednesday. The feeling in the Colonial Office is against sanctioning the dismissal of Lieutenant-Governor Letellier, but impressed with the idea that this is a constitutional question, they hold that it is not proper for the Government here to deal with the matter. It is assumed as probable that both political parties in Canada might take umbrage at such interference with Canadian internal affairs. Further it is held that the Canadian Government has constitutional authority to deal with the matter. It is understood that interference with the question will be declined.

Says the Toronto Telegram:—Speculation is rife as to who will be Speaker of the next Legislature. It is taken for granted that Mr. Wells will not be a candidate again. It is only fair to say that during the tenure of the Speakership he discharged the duties of his office ably and with great acceptance to both sides of the House. The most likely member to succeed him is Col. Clarke, of Centre Wellington. Col. Clarke has frequently been spoken of as a likely member of the Cabinet in the event of redistribution of portfolios; but as a redistribution of portfolios is not at present looked for, he will probably be chosen Speaker. His long experience as chairman of committees of the House will stand him in good stead in the Speaker's chair.

A New Brunswick Shooting Case.

SACKVILLE, N.B., June 19.—As Mr. Israel Atkinson was returning home last evening about 10.30 from a friend's, going by the road to the Baptist chapel, and had gone about half-way to the street leading to the cemetery, a gun was fired and Atkinson was shot. He exclaimed, "My God you have shot me." He did not fall, but turning around saw a man running off. Atkinson was so badly wounded that he fell, and with difficulty dragged himself to Dr. Fleming's office, who took him home, and on examination found that he had been shot with double "B" shot, and had been very seriously, if not fatally, wounded. The shot had penetrated the lungs and kidneys. Atkinson spits blood, speaks with difficulty, and is now lying in a very critical state. There are forty wounds from his shoulders to his thighs. He did not recognize the man and has not the slightest idea of the cause of the outrage. Dr. Fleming, who was in bed, heard the report of a heavy shot and got up, and hearing a person coughing went out and met Mr. Atkinson. No clue has been found to the perpetrator of the assault. There is much excitement in the village.

Home Rule in Ireland.

Mr. Justin McCarthy, who is generally looked upon in England as the coming chief of the Home Rulers in Parliament, contributes to a current number of Time a very strong and earnest article in which he takes the ground that Home Rule for Ireland is a necessity of sound legislation as well as a sentimental demand of the Irish people. "Home Rule," he says "is alive." It by no means died with Mr. Butt.

"It will be heard of again and again. No Home Ruler is in the slightest degree disheartened by the assurance, coming from whatever seat of authority, or seeming authority, that Parliament will never grant a National Legislature to Ireland. We have heard this sort of thing too often to be in any way impressed by it. Every great reform carried in Parliament is heralded by emphatic declarations that it never shall be carried. Within recent recollections how often have such declarations been made, and how often have they been made ridiculous by events! A Tenant-right bill, the disestablishment of the Irish Church, the ballot, compulsory education—how many times did great Ministers of the crown, cunningly in possession of almost unlimited power, declare that it would be simply impossible the English Parliament and the British Constitution could endure any of these things! And now they have all become parts I suppose of the British Constitution themselves and are held by some persons to be good reasons why no other reform should ever be adopted. Not one of these measures had a better case to make out than has Home Rule. I am unable to see why any Englishman should not regard the Home Rule movement with respect, even though he may be unwilling to see it carried to success. The mere assertion on the part of the people that they are capable of managing their own affairs for themselves, and the demand to be allowed to do so, ought to command themselves naturally to the manhood of the Englishman. I should not even feel under any necessity to show that actual and severe grievance comes of the present system in order to justify the demand of Ireland for self-government in the affairs which every people best understands for itself. But a centralized system, with an overwhelming power in the hands of English majorities, must always in the nature of things, inflict injustice and grievance on Ireland."

With a good deal of tact Mr. McCarthy attaches Home Rule as a principle to the policy of Mr. Gladstone. This may not help the Liberals in their effort to regain power. But when the hour of their return to power strikes they will find clearly themselves under the necessity of counting with the Home Rulers.

Steel Rails Again.

(From the Globe.)

One by one the falsity of the cries of the Conservative party, when in Opposition, is being demonstrated, and to-day a cry, perhaps more well-known than any other save that of protection, has received from Sir Charles Tupper himself the coup de grace. The following advertisement appears in the Government's local organ:—

TENDERS FOR STEEL RAILS.

Tenders addressed to the Honorable the Minister of Railways and Canals will be received at the Canadian Emigration Office, 31 Queen Victoria Street, E. C., London, England, until July 15th next, for steel rails and fastenings, to be delivered at Montreal as follows:

5,000 tons by October 1, 1879.
5,000 tons by June 1, 1880.
5,000 tons by October 1, 1880.

Specifications, conditions, forms of tender, and all other information will be furnished on application at this office, or at the Canadian Emigration Office, 31 Queen Victoria Street, E.C., London, England.

By order,
J. BRAUN, Secretary.

Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, 13th June, 1879.

What can the Government want to do with steel rails? Surely everybody who read the Tory press on Sep. 16th last, or listened to Tory Declamation on the platform, knows well that it was alleged the Mackenzie Administration had purchased thousands and thousands of tons of steel rails that would not be required for years to come, and were now rusting away. Tory mathematicians computed that the country would from now to Judgment Day have to pay a large sum annually as interest on a wasteful and needless expenditure; indeed, basketfuls of rust from the rails were exhibited for the edification of the faithful in the various constituencies. True, the Reform press ventured to dispute the charges made, but the Tory press were positive as to their truth. Now it lays on the Minister of Railways to show what has become of the rails that he should have to purchase more.

A Man Deliberately Murders his Three Children.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., June 22.—John Kemmler, at South Holyoke, yesterday, shot his three children—Annie, aged 6; Lucinda 4, and Amy 1, because he was unable to support them. He has been out of work since February. He sent his wife on an errand, and called the eldest child into the house and tried to poison her with prussic acid, but she threw up the dose. Kemmler then took the second child into the front bedroom and shot her through the head with a pistol. He then took Annie into a rear bedroom and shot her in a like manner. The youngest girl lay on the bed, and he shot her also behind the ear. He left the house and told the saloon keeper what he had done, and was arrested. After his arrest he was cool, and said he was ready to let the law take its course. He said he could not support his children, and feared they would grow up and enter houses of prostitution, and thought they would be happier in heaven. He had planned it for ten days to kill them. He is collected and apparently sane. Mrs. Kemmler is completely overcome.

COUNTY COUNCIL.

WEDNESDAY.

THE principal proceedings of Wednesday were done in committee. The report of the special committee on the Warden's Address being adopted, and the appointment of the County Auditor and the passage of a by-law extending the time of the Toronto & Ottawa Railway being fixed, the salary of the was reconsidered. It was moved by Mr. MILLER, seconded by Mr. MOLONEY,—That a By-law passed by this Council in 1878, agreeing to pay D. G. Hatton, Esq., P. M., $100 for certain services, be repealed.

Moved by Mr. COLLINS, seconded by Mr. GOLBORNE,—That the question of continuing the grant to D. G. Hatton, Police Magistrate, be referred to the Finance Committee.

The original motion, on a division was carried.

EQUALIZATION OF APPEALS.

Moved by Mr. PEARCE, seconded by Mr. ROSEBURGH,—That whereas, a change in the manner of appeals from the equalization of Assessments was made at the last session of the Legislature of the Province of Ontario, it is enacted, under chapter 31, section 32 of the Act entitled an Act to amend the Municipal Act, that the County Judge jointly with the Sheriff and such third person as the County Council may appoint, shall constitute a Court of Appeal in respect to the equalization of Assessments, and in accordance with the above provisions, this Council name P. M. Grover, Esq., of Norwood, as such third person, and that a by-law be passed confirming the same.

Moved in amendment by Mr. MILLER, seconded by Mr. KIDD,—That Wm. Lang Esq., of Keene, be appointed such third person.

The original motion was carried on a division.

The Council then adjourned.

THURSDAY.

The Council met, all the members being present except the Reeve of Lakefield.

The minutes of the day previous were read and confirmed.

Mr. Sanderson presented the following report of the committee on

COUNTY PROPERTY:

The Committee on County Property beg leave to recommend that the following articles be purchased for and work done in and about the new Court Room, viz:—

Three dozen chairs. A new carpet for the Judges' Room. A new table for the legal profession. That Linoleum or Kamptulecan be put on the main passages, and the floor in front of the Judges' desk, Cocoa Fibre Matting on the other passages, and between the seats.

Your Committee would recommend that the Sheriff insist upon his officers putting a stop to the expectoration of tobacco between and on the seats, and also that they be instructed to prevent any one standing on the seats.

They would also recommend that two hot air furnaces be procured for heating the Court Room—the putting in of said furnaces to be let by tender, and performed under the direction of the County Engineer, and that the Court Room be lighted with gas.

They also recommend that slat blinds be placed on the windows of the Judges' Chambers.

All of which is respectfully submitted. The report was adopted.

COMMITTEE ON SCHOOLS.

The following report was presented by Mr. Moloney on behalf of the committee on schools, which was adopted:—

The Committee on Schools beg leave to report:—Recommending that no action be taken with reference to the communication of the Warden of the County of Victoria in reference to the exchange of the Board of Examiners, as it would necessitate additional expense.

They would also recommend that the usual by-law be passed for the purpose of raising the County equivalent to the Government grants to the Public Schools for the current year.

With regard to the establishment of a Model School in this County, your Committee cannot recommend that any additional action be taken with regard to the same.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

JOHN MOLONEY,
Chairman.

REPORT ON APPOINTMENTS.

Mr. COLLINS presented the report of the Committee on appointments, which recommended that Messrs. Houghton, Dixon and Peters, be appointed members of the Board of Examiners for public school teachers, for this County.

RECOMMENDATION

Moved by Mr. GOLBORNE, seconded by Mr. HICKS,—Whereas it appears, that out of the appropriation for Poor Schools in this County for the current year, not a dollar is granted to the schools in the municipality of Berleigh, &c., and only nine dollars to the schools in the municipality of Harvey, and whereas these municipalities are amongst the poorest of the County and have to maintain between them twelve schools, and it is the opinion of this Council that they should be placed on the same footing as the schools in the municipality of Belmont and Galway, and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Minister of Education.—Carried.

The Council then adjourned.

FRIDAY.

The Council met, all the members except Mr. Dunsmore being present.

The minutes of yesterday were read and confirmed.

REPAIRS ON BOBCAYGEON BRIDGES.

Mr. Fairburn, Warden of Victoria, being present in reference to some repairs in connection with the Bobcaygeon Bridges, the Warden read an opinion from W. H. Scott, Esq., to the effect that this County is relieved of the responsibility and cannot be compelled to join in their erection or maintenance. The Warden suggested that a committee be appointed to consider the matter, in order to show Victoria that they did not desire to act otherwise than friendly towards them.

Moved by Mr. PEARCE, seconded by Mr. BURGESS,—That the Warden name a committee to consider the position of this County in relation to the Bobcaygeon Bridges, such committee to take such action as they think fit in the interests of the County.—Carried.

The Warden then named Messrs. Miller, Collins and Sanderson, as such committee.

A By-law confirming the appointment of Mr. Grover as a member of the new court for hearing assessment appeals was passed.

The Warden read a letter from the Warden of the County of Victoria, calling attention to the bad state of the approaches to the Pigeon Creek Bridge, and offering, on behalf of that County, to repair the west approach if the County of Peterborough would repair the east approach.—Received.

ROADS AND BRIDGES.

Mr. MILLER presented the report of the Committee on Roads and Bridges, which was on motion referred back to the Committee to be amended. After being amended the report read as follows:—

1. That the Engineer prepare plans and specifications for a bent bridge over the Indian River, on the boundary line between Otonabee and Douro, using so far as possible the old cedar, and that the contract therefore be let by tender, and that Messrs. Moloney and Lang be commissioners for the same.

2. That the County Engineer get the necessary repairs done on the Nassau and Lakefield bridges forthwith, and sell the old flooring of the Lakefield bridge.

3. They recommend that no increase of salary be made to the caretaker of the Wallace Point Bridge.

4. That a grant of $25 be given to repair the crossway at Burleigh bridge, and that the County Treasurer pay the same on the certificate of the County Engineer that the work has been done.

5. That the Reeve of Harvey be requested to get the necessary flooring done on the Buckhorn bridge, and that the County Treasurer pay for the same.

6. That the repairs of the bridge over Union Creek, on the Bobcaygeon Road, be done at the joint expense of the two counties interested, and that Mr. Clark be commissioner for the same.

7. That Mr. Dean be given $35 to assist in replacing Mud Lake Bridge, the said grant not to prejudice the existing bond.

8. That the eastern approach of the Pigeon Creek Bridge be repaired under the direction of Mr. Costello.

9. That three hundred dollars be expended on the boundary lines between the Townships of Otonabee and Douro, and Asphodel and Dummer, in equal amounts, and that the Reeve of Douro, and the Reeve of Asphodel and Dummer, be commissioners for the expenditure of the same. For the road through Douro from the Red Mills to Young's Point, $70; through Ennismore, $70; from Young's Point to Burleigh Bridge, $60; on the Galway boundary, $60; from the 14th con. of Smith to Buckhorn, $30; and to Burleigh, North Monaghan, Harvey, Belmont, Ashburnham, Lakefield and Norwood $50 each.

The report was adopted.

MR. HATTON'S ALLOWANCE.

On motion of Mr. COLLINS, Mr. Hatton was heard in reference to the allowance given him last year as compensation for judicating upon County cases. He referred to the Ontario and Dominion Laws, and quoted from them to prove that he had the power of two Justices over cases coming from the County as well as the Town. He also had the power to summarily try misdemeanors occurring in the County and at once dispose of them, instead of putting the County to the expense of having them sent up for trial. He would not give his time to outside cases unless compensation was made him for the time lost.

Mr. COSTELLO moved, seconded by Mr. KIDD.—That the resolution passed in the early part of this session, rescinding the grant of $100 per annum to Mr. Hatton, for his taking County cases, be repealed.—Carried.

SCHOOL REPRESENTURE.

On the motion of Mr. MOLONEY, the following amounts will be levied on the several municipalities for the current year, as an equivalent to the Government grant to public schools:—

Asphodel	$200 00
Belmont, &c.	451 00
Burleigh, &c.	156 00
Douro	275 00
Dummer	200 00
Ennismore	200 00
Galway	178 00
Harvey	161 00
Monaghan	350 00
Otonabee	600 00
Smith	300 00

Moved by Mr. BURGESS, seconded by Mr. PEARCE,—That the County Treasurer be authorized to get advice from the County Solicitor, regarding certain lands held by the Mercer Estate, which J. D. Edgar claims to be wrongly sold for taxes, inasmuch as the said lands have reverted to the Crown.—Carried.

EQUALIZATION.

The report of the committee on equalization, presented by Mr. Pearce, recommended the equalization of the Townships at the following rates per acre with ten per cent. added for personal property, viz:

Asphodel, $23; Belmont, $4; Methuen, $1.25; Berleigh, $1.50; Anstruther, $1.60; Chandos, $1.75; Dummer, $3; Douro, $23; Ennismore, $35; Galway, $1.50; Harvey, $4.50; Monaghan, $34; Smith, $30; and Otonabee, $90; and Ashburnham at $220,000; and Lakefield, at $135,000; and Norwood at $90,000.

The report was adopted.

VENTILATION IN SECRETARY OFFICE.

The WARDEN read a letter from Otonabee, with reference to the ventilation of the Registry Office.

Moved by Mr. GOLBORNE, seconded by Mr. FITZGERALD,—That no notice be taken in the matter, as the Council is of opinion that it is not warranted in making any change in the Registry Office, without the recommendation of the Inspector.—Carried.

POLICE COURT.

Moved by Mr. MOLONEY, seconded by Mr. MCCLUSKEY,—That Messrs. Pearce, Golborne, Kidd, Moloney, Sanderson, and the Warden, be a Committee to investigate the number of cases disposed of by D. G. Hatton, P. M., which arose outside of the Town of Peterborough from the 1st of July, 1878, to date, and report at this session on the amount of saving to the County by his action, and the number of cases disposed of by him in which no fees were chargeable; and also whether it is his duty to act in County cases, and if necessary take legal advice on this last point.—Carried.

THE WOLF BOUNTY.

Moved by Mr. KIDD, seconded by Mr. ROBBE,—That the Treasurer be requested to prepare a statement, giving the names of the persons who have received the wolf bounty, and also the name of the Magistrates from whom the certificate was obtained since the 1st of January, 1873, the said statement and Magistrate's certificate to be open for inspection to any ratepayer.

Mr. KIDD in moving the motion said that it was not aimed at anyone in particular, but was moved in consequence of a letter that appeared in the EXAMINER of 10th of April last. As the amount which was paid out during the last six years was very large, nearly $900, if there was any irregularity in the matter it should be attended to. If not those concerned would be free from suspicion.

The WARDEN and Mr. PEARCE wanted the charge in the EXAMINER read out.

Mr. KIDD did not think it was necessary to read the article.

Mr. GOLBORNE said there was no use for Mr. Kidd to beat around the bush, the motion was aimed at him for political purposes.

The WARDEN and several members of the Council again expressed a desire that the article should be read.

The readers of the EXAMINER will remember a communication that appeared signed "Apsley" in a late issue, the following being the part referring to the "wolf bounty":—

"While I am writing, I would like to refer to another matter which is causing no little excitement and comment, viz: the number of wolves that have been caught in the neighborhood of Apsley which have only a scalp. For notwithstanding the number of scalps (which are worth $6 at the County Treasurer's office) that have been captured in this locality, a sufficient number of wolf skins cannot be obtained to make a coat to present to the gentleman who has been causing such havoc among the wolves. In other parts of the country it is usual for the wolves to run down the deer, but here the order appears to have been reversed, the deer run down the wolves, and then destroy all but the scalps, which they are kind enough to leave for the benefit of those who are only blessed with two legs. Would it not be advisable for the members of the County Council at the next meeting to prepare a list for publication, having the names of the persons who have received the wolf bounty for the past five years, and also the Magistrate or Reeve who gave the certificate. If such list is prepared, it will be read with great interest.

The motion was carried.

THE COURT HOUSE GROUNDS.

Moved by Mr. GOLBORNE, seconded by Mr. FITZGERALD,—That the matter of the caretaker of the Court House and grounds duties be referred to the County Property Committee to report thereon.—Carried.

The Council then adjourned.

SATURDAY.

The Council met, all the members except Mr. Dinwoodie being present. The minutes of yesterday were read and confirmed.

Mr. GOLBORNE, chairman of the Finance Committee, on motion reported, recommending the payment of a number of accounts. They also recommended that in view of the loss sustained by the contractor and sub-contractors for the new Court Room that the following sums be paid them respectively, viz: J. W. Alford, $300; Jno. Richardson, $250; and W. Whitehair, $50.

The total resources of the County for the current year will be about $3,791, and there will be required for expenditure the sum of $23,331.92, which will require a rate of two and a quarter mills on the $. to be levied and collected on the equalized value of the County.

In the matter of Debenture Rate the committee recommend that as a sum largely in excess of the amount required would be levied under By-laws Nos. 375 and 378, the Clerk be instructed to levy such an amount only as will be sufficient to meet this years sinking fund and interest, and that only one-half of the rate provided under By-law be collected for the reason that only one-half of the Debentures authorized to be issued thereunder have been so issued.

The report was adopted.

A By-law confirming the equalization report was passed.

A By-law to levy a sum of money for County purposes was passed.

The Committee to whom was referred the drafting of an expression of sympathy to the family of the late Christopher Burton, reported.—a copy of which will be found in another column.

The Committee on the benefits derived from the Police Magistrate by the County, asked, and were allowed further time to report.

The Council then adjourned.

DAIRY PRODUCTS.

JUST RECEIVED:

1 CAR-LOAD LIVERPOOL FACTORY FILLED

SALT.

—Expressly for Dairy Use.—

It is packed in pure white linen bags of three sizes,—56 lbs, 112 lbs, and 224 lbs. (The bags are all of a superior quality of linen and suitable for towelling or other domestic uses.) It is said by persons of wide experience that one cause of inferiority in quality of butter and other dairy products has been the use of common grades of Salt; and the difference in cost is slight when compared with the difference in quality. If dairymen and others will consider that in manufacturing, only ½ lbs of salt are required to make 100 lbs of cheese, and only 1 oz. of salt to make 1 lb. butter, they will recognize of how small importance must be the first cost of one of the most important ingredients in the manufacture of all dairy produces.

PETERBOROUGH, JUNE 26, 1879.

LOCAL NEWS.

Returned.—Mr. Chas. Kompt returned last week from Manitoba where he has been for the past few months. He speaks favorably of the country, but says those immigrating should have capital to start business with.

The Golden Boot.—Shakespere has said "he is truly valient that can suffer wisely," but no wise man will suffer from a poorly fitting pair of boots or shoes when such excellent fits can be obtained at R. White's. "The Golden Boot" is noted for the best of fits.

Jewelry Repairing.—Mr. F. Clark has opened a shop on Simcoe street, west of George street, for the cleaning and repairing of clocks, watches and jewelry. His motto is neat work at cheap rates All orders attended to with promptness.

Personal.—Mrs. G. B. Sproule, Mrs. Bowman, Miss Emily Parkinson, pianist, Toronto, Mr. Galletly, Mr. J. Ormond, Mr. O. Dixon are announced to take part in an entertainment, at Bethany last evening, together with a number from Port Hope and Millbrook.

Destitution in Manitoba.—Mr. W. Weld, editor of the Farmer's Advocate, telegraphs from Emerson, Manitoba, giving a discouraging account of affairs in that region. He says: "Government should aid deceived Canadians to return, and stop pauper migration."

Plate Glass.—Messrs. Bertram & Co. have lately received from England a quantity of plate glass for Messrs. George A. Cox and Elias Burnham—that of Mr. Cox's being for the stores occupied by Messrs. Long Bro's, I. Robinson & Co., and Mrs. Kenapt; and that of Mr. Burnham's for the stores occupied by Messrs. Dolan & Co. and Rush & Elliott.

On Broadway, New York, the great thoroughfare, a prominent feature of even that famous street, convenient to all places of interest, and noted for its luxurious appointments—is situated the Grand Central Hotel, which is now kept on both plans, the American at $2.50 to $3.00, and the European at $1.00 and upwards, per day. An elegant Restaurant, at moderate prices, is conducted by the Grand Central.

The Crops.—From all parts of the surrounding country we have the most satisfactory accounts of the growing crops. The recent ample rains have given hay such a start that it will be one of the heaviest crops gathered for years, whilst grain of all kinds and roots promise equally well, and the pastures are luxuriant. Fruit also shows remarkable growth, and an abundant harvest may now be looked forward to as a certainty.

Ontario Bank.—The annual meeting of the shareholders of the Ontario Bank was held on Tuesday of last week. The paid-up capital of the bank is $3,000,000, besides a rest of $100,000 and a balance at credit of profit and loss of $72,507. The profits of the fiscal year just closed amounted to $230,625, of which $177,980 was expended in two half-yearly dividends of three per cent. each, and the balance of $50,207 carried to profit and loss account. The deposits amount to nearly $2,500,000, and the note circulation to $600,000.

Grand Complimentary Pic-Nic.—A grand complimentary pic-nic in honor of the Hon. S. C. Wood will be held to-day at Sturgeon Point by his friends and supporters in Victoria County. With commendable tact, this gathering is not so much of a political character as it is a reunion of his friends in the riding, many of whom are unacquainted, through separation by distance. It will furnish an opportunity for social intercourse and, no doubt, greater amicability hereafter will reward the efforts of its promoters Press Association.—The following are the arrangements for the annual meeting of the Press Association, which will take place at Kingston on the 22nd of July:—The party will visit the Penitentiary, Rockwood Asylum and Military College; the next morning the party will go down the river, probably to Alexandria Bay, stopping for an hour or two at Brockville; a couple of days will be spent at the Thousand Island Park, or one of the Islands adjoining, in fishing or other amusements. The arrangements are not definitely completed, but it is not likely there will be any very great departure from the above.

Important Changes.—Municipal clerks and others will do well to bear in mind that important alterations have been made in the Voters' List Act, and that those alterations affect the lists about to be got out for the present year. The most important of these alterations is that hereafter the post office address of each voter must be given, and that all of said voters qualified to act as jurymen must have the letter "J" appear in connection with their names. The difficulty in giving the amendments in full arises from the fact that the Act has not been as yet distributed to the general public; but the alterations alluded to above embrace the principal features of the additions made to the Act.

Cricket Match.—A large assemblage witnessed the cricket match last Thursday between Peterborough and Cobourg. The home team winning the toss, the visitors were sent to the wicket from which they retired after making the small score of 49, due in a great measure to the excellent bowling of Rutherford and Hartley. Peterborough then began to handle the willow, and at the offset it was easily seen that careful practice was wanting. This deficiency was especially noticeable in the fielding, where many comparatively easy catches were missed and wild throwing was the order. On Cobourg again entering, the magnificent score of 195 was rolled up. Messrs. Hill, Oaler and Gardiner respectively contributing 11, 37 and 15 in good form. In the second innings of Peterborough the batting was more free. Hartley and Rackham especially distinguishing themselves, and 79 runs were quickly run up. Should our home eleven only practice more frequently before the next match there will be, no doubt, a far different issue. The following is the score:—

No More Circus Shows.—Owing to the heavy duty imposed under the N.P., it is stated that there will be no more circus shows exhibited in Canada this year.

Bargains, If you Please!—Ladies who may feel disposed, to present bequests to the Dinner Committee of Dominion Day Celebration, for table decoration, will please inform Capt. Moffat, at Mr. Adam Halls Store, and they will be called for on Tuesday morning.

Removal.—Mr. James Little, photographer, who has for some months past been conducting a branch studio in Bobcaygeon, has closed his business there and returned to head-quarters. Its pleasing to note that his shadow has sensibly increased under the influence of the salubrious climate of Claypoon.

Removal to an Asylum.—We regret to learn that Mr. William Larkin, who for some time has been afflicted with mental aberation, through softening of the brain, has become so badly affected that he has to be removed to an asylum. The Sheriff received the writ for his removal yesterday, and he will be conveyed to the Hamilton Asylum to-morrow.

Decorations.—We are requested by the Executive Committee of the Dominion Day Celebration, to ask the citizens and especially the merchants on the principal streets to assist the Brigade in making the First a gala day, by decorating their premises with flags, bunting, etc. in a becoming manner. As probably the largest concourse of people visiting Peterborough for years will be here on Tuesday. We trust for the appearance of our town that the request may be carried out.

Dr. Jeffers, the eloquent and esteemed pastor of the Canada Methodist church in this town, and the lady members of the congregation intend to avail themselves of the opportunity of showing their appreciation of and esteem for the Rev. Dr. and his estimable wife by presenting them with a handsome silver tea set, purchased from E.E. Henderson & Co. The set comprises six pieces and is of elegant design and very superior quality. It was imported expressly for the occasion from the manufacturers, and is creditable to the taste and liberality of the ladies making the presentation. The presentation will take place this evening.

ST. PETER'S CHURCH.

A Visit from Bishop O'Brien, of Kingston —His Lordship's Address on Sabbath Evening—The Rite of Confirmation Administered—An Inspection of the Separate Schools.

Bishop O'Brien, of Kingston, made a visit to Peterborough parish during last week, and on Sabbath last conferred the rite of confirmation on 230 recipients of the first communion, in St. Peter's Church. The auditorium of the church on this occasion was filled to overflowing, and many were turned away, unable to get an entrance. After the performance of the sacrament, His Lordship addressed the recipients, impressing upon them the sacredness of the rite which they had just received, and urging them under its influence to live purer and better lives. He also referred to the duty which was incumbent on them of venerating, loving and honoring the Blessed Virgin. His Lordship's remarks throughout were delivered with simplicity, warmth and deep earnestness.

THE BISHOP'S ADDRESS.

In the evening, after vespers, which were conducted by Father Stafford, of Lindsay, His Lordship delivered an eloquent address on the subject of the devotion paid by Catholics to the Virgin Mary. His Lordship began by saying, that, he had uttered a short instruction in the morning to the children to foster a tender devotion to the Virgin, and in order that they might do so more effectually he would make that the subject for the evening. St. Paul had said, "If any one love not Jesus Christ, let him be accursed." If we loved not Him, what could we love? And it seemed that without loving the Virgin, His mother, it was not possible to love Jesus Christ. She was not a goddess, but a servant of God, who had been highly honored by Him. Let them examine the grounds for this

DEVOTION TO THE VIRGIN MARY.

He would point out three periods in which she had figured:—Eternity; the dawn of time; and the birth of Christ. From all eternity it was ordained that God would create man, that he would fall, and that the Son of God would become man; and in order that he might become man it was necessary that one of the daughters of Eve should be chosen to bear Him. When time began in Eden; when man sinned and brought death and suffering into the world; Court in the matter of the erection of sheds in when the eternal portals of heaven were closed against him, and man became an outcast and a wanderer through the earth; then it was—in the dawn of time—that, in the love of God, He promised His son to man. He said to the serpent, "He shall crush thy head." Thus, four thousand years before the dawn of Christianity, the Blessed Virgin was intimately connected with God in His counsels. He would pass over those four thousand years and come down to that

GRANDEST EPOCH THE WORLD HAS EVER SEEN.

The world had seen the rise and fall of many an empire and nation—had seen Babylon, Greece and Rome crumble to the ground—but this was the grandest and most momentous event that had ever transpired before or since. The world had seen the sceptre fall from the hands of tyrants, and enslaved nations set at liberty; but this was not a question of restoring liberty to one nation,—of granting freedom to one people; —no, it was a question of the breaking down of the bonds of slavery that bound the whole of humanity,—a question of reinstating, of redeeming the whole world,—of opening the eternal portals of heaven to man. For four thousand years all but one nation—the Jews—had forgotten God and lived as idolators. Then it was, in the language of Paul, "in the fullness of time" that the Son of God came down to die. As God he could not suffer; and that he might bear the sins of man he had to become man. He said, "Let them not be lost; have pity, O Father, on the fallen. I will go forth, O Father, and be bruised for their sins; I will place on my shoulders their burden." And he came down. Where was he to find one in whose womb he could be conceived. There were many great women in the world, of luxury, opulence and power. He beheld the Arch-angel coming down from the courts of heaven. Would it be to one of these that he would go? No; he went to an humble virgin. Therefore their respect for the Blessed Virgin. They did not adore her. If he were asked why he honored her, he would answer that, if he was wrong, God gave him the example. They honored her because God had honored her; because she was exalted beyond all others; because she was the only one that was honored.

THE SALVATION OF THE HUMAN RACE

then hung in the balance. If we had received all through Jesus Christ; if we had received the glory of heaven that is in store for us, through him, we should remember that Jesus Christ came through Mary,—the immaculate Mary. If they had been redeemed through the blood of Jesus Christ, it had been through Mary, and, therefore, while they bowed down in lowly adoration before the Saviour, they loved, honored and respected the Blessed Virgin. When in thought he stood over that crib and beheld the shivering babe and its mother in the manger, and the shepherds from the plains, and whom he heard the heavens sing "Glory to God, peace on earth, and good will towards men," he must venerate her as the mother of Jesus Christ. Some had said that the honor they paid the Virgin Mary, detracted from that which was due to her son. He would ask such a one this question:—"If any one honored your mother, would you think he was thus detracting from the honor due to you." No; you would not. When her Divine Son had accomplished the work He had come to perform; when He had spent thirty-three years in the world, in that last moment, when His lung upon the cross, when His enemies thought they had triumphed, when all nations bore testimony to the divinity of Christ, then it was that he looked down in agony upon her who had nursed Him in her arms, and said, "Son, behold thy Mother." Amongst the last words of the Saviour, the last had been his mother. While they adored Jesus Christ, let them love the Blessed Virgin: and if they loved and honored her, in the hour of temptation she would come to their aid and stay the arm of her Divine Son, and bring them on step by step to the end. Might they all be the children of God and of the Church! His Lordship concluded by imparting his blessing on the congregation.

AT THE SEPARATE SCHOOLS.

On Friday last the Bishop paid a visit to the Separate Schools of the town, and, we learn, expressed himself as highly gratified by the knowledge gained by his inspection.

His Lordship's visit to the town was one of much interest and profit to the parish, and his earnest and courteous appeals to the congregation for an increased interest in their reverence for the Church and for its objects were effective, and will not readily be forgotten by our Catholic fellow-citizens.

DOMINION DAY CELEBRATION

Immense Preparations for a Grand Display.

The arrangements for the celebration of the 1st of July, are becoming more complete every day, and from present appearances the celebration will be the grandest and most extensive yet witnessed in Peterborough. The Cobourg Brigade which turns out about 150 men, have chartered all the available boats running on Rice Lake and the river, and will bring one of the largest excursion parties to town that has ever came by this route. They will be accompanied by the Fountain, Hose and Alnwick Bands. The Lindsay Brigade, though not so large in numbers, are determined to make a good show, and as an excursion train will run in connection, a large number of visitors from that section of country may be expected. They will be accompanied by the Omemee Band. Upon the arrival of the Brigades they will be met by the members of the Peterborough Brigade and escorted to the new Skating and Curling Rink where dinner will be furnished them. Immediately after dinner, a grand procession will be formed, comprising we are informed by the committee of management, the Fire Brigades of Cobourg, Lindsay, Ashburnham and Peterborough, Peterborough Court of Foresters, Trades' Procession, Knights in Armour, Cavalcade in Costumes, band of mounted Indians, to be followed up by the physigog. After marching through the town, they will repair to the Drill Shed and Agricultural Grounds, where some of the best features of the day's sports are promised, including a grand baby show, for which a number of prizes are offered, athletic sports, trick horse performance, &c., In the evening there will be a torchlight procession. The day's celebration will close with one of the grandest display of fireworks ever witnessed in Canada, by Prof. A. L. Due, of Hamilton, who will be present and set off the pieces, among which will be a wind mill, roses, Niagara Falls, real bomb shells, flying pigeons, stars, maltese crosses and masonic emblems, the whole to conclude with a large set piece in the shape of a star, fifteen feet in diameter, surrounded by revolving wheels and runners of stars and serpents in beautiful colors, with a very handsome motto for a centre piece.

The Clerk announced that the Collector wished another week for the returning of the Roll. Granted.

PETITIONS.

Villiers.

(From our own Correspondent.)

—Pic-nics are all the rage.

—The late rains have knocked down a good deal of grain and hay in this section.

—The school children of this neighborhood are going to have a pic-nic on the first of July, on Mr. Burnham's place at Rice Lake shore. A splendid time is expected.

Apsley.

(From our own Correspondent.)

—News items are scarce.

—The severe frost of two weeks ago, destroyed all early vegetable plants in this part of the country, but did not do much damage to the grain crops, wheat was injured a little but nothing to speak of, and it is fast recuperating, we are now having beautiful weather, with a good supply of rain, and everything gives a fair promise of a bountiful harvest.

—Mr. Joseph Kinner of Chandos was burnt out a few days ago. The house caught fire from the woods, and by hard labor they managed to get most of the household goods removed to the barn and stable, and the old man was quietly taking a smoke of his pipe to soothe his excited nerves, thinking everything was safe, when all at once he thought he discovered a dense smoke in the barn which did not come from out side, and on going out he found the barn one mass of flames. Exhausted from the previous exertions, the old man was not able to do much and they lost nearly everything, even his watch was melted, he not having time to get out his vest, and the only place of shelter left them was the root-house. Mr. Kinner got his hands and face very badly burnt. The neighbors collected together a few days after and put up another dwelling for him, but it will be a sad loss for the old folks.

—Irwin & Boyd's drive of logs and timber is now going past the village.

Lakefield.

(From our own Correspondent.)

—Hot.

—Dry.

—Dusty.

—Lots of wild strawberries coming in.

—Two scows were run over Burleigh all safe last week.

—The cow-bells are again making sweet music at night through our streets.

—We learn that Lakefield is still to be left out in the cold in regard to railway accommodation, as we are to have no evening train this summer. If the noon train waited there two hours on her way up in place of when going down, we would have some little time to do business in town, and would prove a great advantage to all. The only difference it would make would be our mail would be two hours later, but very few answer letters here the same day they are received, as the time is now too short.

—Messrs Wm. Graham and Saunders went up the lake last week to examine the different places so as to select a spot for the Orange pic-nic, and decided on "gin island," as the most suitable and pleasant for the purpose.

—The Burleigh road is in a very bad condition, more especially that portion between Burleigh Falls and Haultain, P. O., the crossways being broken down and almost in an impassable state, we hope that a grant will be made and the necessary repairs undertaken before long.

—Messrs. Sheeppe & Gordon have purchased a scow in Lindsay, to use for taking excursions parties, which are too large for the "Cruiser" to accomodate, up the lakes. It will be run over Buckhorn and Burleigh this week, and no doubt the gentlemen will reap the benefit of their enterprise by an increased number of excursions from Peterborough.

Hamilton Races.

The races in Hamilton on Saturday, June 28, Monday, June 30, and Tuesday, July 1 (Dominion Day) will be of unusual interest. Horse owners from all parts of Canada and the United States have signified their intention of competing for the $1,400.00 offered in purses. The management this season has undergone an entire change, and is composed of gentlemen whose names are a sufficient guarantee that every feature of the meeting will be carried out in good faith. The programme is attractive and well arranged, and is composed of 12 purses, 6 for trotting and 6 for running.

Supposed Murder near Ottawa.

Ottawa, June 20.—About seven miles out on the Russell road and within a very short distance of Taylorsville, Gloucester township, resided in a small shanty on the farm of her brother one Bella Hood, a semi-idiotic woman of some 25 or thirty years. She lived alone, being supported by her brother. The shanty is close beside the roadway, and this morning as farmers were coming into market they observed the door of the building open and the woman lying on the steps partly within the house. Some thought she was sleeping but finally blood was observed on the roadside when an examination was made, and a most horrible spectacle met their view. Around the yard were blood stains, and within the shanty on the floor was a great pool of blood. The indications made it appear as though a struggle had taken place. first inside the shanty and then around the yard and on the roadside. The woman, as she lay on the doorstep, looked as though she might be having a sleep, but the bare leg and foot protruding beneath her dress were streaked with blood while one of her hands and arms were also covered with it.

At the inquest the following verdict was returned:—"That the deceased came to her death from hemorrage from a punctured wound in the vagina, whether inflicted by herself or some unknown party or by accident is unknown to the jury."

The medical evidence went to show that the girl was enceinte, and that the wound could have been caused by a fall.

VEGETINE.

I MADE UP MY MIND TO TRY THE VEGETINE.

BOSTON, Dec. 27, 1878.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:—

DEAR SIR,—I reside at No. 705 Niagara Street, of this city. I am 69 years of age. For several years past I have been in feeble health. My complaint is what the doctors call CHRONIC DEBILITY of the System. At times I suffered severe pains in my side and back. I used a number of remedies without receiving any relief. My attention was called to your advertisement of Vegetine in our paper. I made up my mind to try the Vegetine, and bought some. It seemed to help me from the first, and in a short time my health improved. I have used a number of bottles, and am now enjoying better health than I have for a number of years. I have recommended the Vegetine to my sister and also several acquaintances, and they have used it with equally good results. It is the best medicine for Weakness and General Debility of the System that I know of, and I do with great confidence recommend it to all my friends as a good medicine. I would also state that for a great many years I have been a sufferer from Rheumatism, and since I commenced using the Vegetine I have had but very little trouble from it.

Yours, very respectfully,
MRS. SAMUEL GREENE.

I am personally acquainted with Mrs. Greene, and know her as a reliable and honest lady, and also know that the above statement is true.

Yours, respectfully,
DR. B. SMITH,
Dispensing Druggist, 329 Niagara street.

VEGETINE.

MORE VALUABLE THAN GOLD.

Sciatica Rheumatism, Kidney Complaint.

McGREGOR, IOWA, Nov. 11, 1878

MR. H. R. STEVENS:—

DEAR SIR,—About the first of November, 1876, I was attacked with what is termed *

The Sword of the Lord and Gideon.

(For the Examiner.)

"Put on the whole armour of God."—EPHESIANS, IV, 11-18.

Gonst forth to the Christian conflict,
O soldier, the foe to meet,
On an arm of flesh solely trusting
Most certain is thy defeat.
Beware of the idle, who only
Would cry "The sword of the Lord"—
'Tis they, who stand firm and o'ercometh,
Shall gain the promis'd reward.

But forting thy weakness and crying
To Jesus to make you strong,
Like Miriam, "Jehovah hath triumph'd"
Shall be your victorious song.
Then forth to the conflict, clock'd in Celestial panoply,
Shout "The sword of the Lord and Gideon."
In practical harmony.

Let Truth, or sincerity godly,
Like a girdle circle thee,
And heart-holiness be a breast-plate
Of righteousness unto thee.
Things warring, thy feet must ever
The gospels of peace have on;
Take the shield of Faith to shatter
The darts of the Evil One.

In hope certain of life eternal
Salvation's helmet wear,
God's word in your mind dwelling richly
The sword of the spirit shall bear.
Vain, vain thy armor and valor
If watchfulness stops prayer
Is not ever thy ceaseless watchword
Thy loving peculiar care.

Sound the trumpet of gospel warning.
Let thy torch with steady flame
Through a holy example witness
To the power of Jesus' name.
With Christ for your leader, then never
Shrink though life's battles rage hard,
Do not think He will let His escutcheon
Or crown by one failure be smear'd.

A Seat for Mr. Blake.

(From the St. John, N. B., Telegraph.)

We take it for granted that a seat in the House of Commons will be secured for Mr. Blake before the next session of Parliament. It is strange that a man like him should be beaten out in a general election, even though the causes which led to that result were entirely exceptional. It appeared to us that there was not sufficient earnestness in the attempts put forth some time ago to procure a constituency for Mr. Blake, though our political system placed serious obstacles in the way of getting a vacancy. These do not now exist. The House of Commons has a Speaker who could very soon enable any M. P. of a retiring disposition to exercise the virtue of resignation. It is strange if in all Ontario there is no Liberal who would be willing to help the party in that way.

There can be no doubt that Mr. Blake's presence in the House of Commons, at its next session, would be most desirable. Even the members of strong Governments usually profess their wish to see a strong Opposition. His own party would much more earnestly desire to see Mr. Blake in the House. When he sat there he had no superior. His character is unblemished. His social influence and family connections are of the highest, and such things count for something in certain circles. His powers of oratory and of debate are surpassed by none and recognized by all. Learned in the law and in the constitution of of the country, restored in health, admired by the people of Ontario, his proper place is in Parliament. The history of our parliamentary system shows that more than numbers are required in order to sustain a Ministry, and that an Opposition relatively strong in intellect, in convictions and in debating power, will soon begin to tell upon the ostworks of the Government. For these and other reasons we think that the Liberals of Ontario should, at an early day, take steps to have a consultation opened up to Mr. Blake, trusting to his success in carrying it against any Conservative opponent who may offer, and not doubting that when Mr. Blake re-enters Parliament, he will give a good account of himself.

Appearance of the Crops.

The Guelph Mercury says:—The soaking rains of last week has done incalculable good to the country. The ground had become so dry in heavy clay that large slabs had been made. This always takes place during long-continued hot weather, which is the result of expansion caused by heat. The ground fairly oozed and drank up water like unslacked lime. Notwithstanding the volume of rain that came down, the land had completely soaked it up a short time after it had ceased. Farmers had almost lost all hope, and were bitterly lamenting the prospects of bad crops. Their despair now has turned into fervent hope that there will be good crops, increased prices and better times. Our farmers often lose faith in the Divine promise, that there shall be seed time and harvest as long as the world stands, and unreasonably complain and grumble if the weather is not just cut out to suit them. A large number from the country were in the city on Saturday when the rain commenced, and their faces beamed with radiant joy on the future prospects of good crops. This feeling, no doubt, was shared by other classes, whose existence depends upon the prosperity of the farmer. The welfare of all classes in a Province like Ontario, depends solely upon the prosperity of the farmers. One or two bad crops would have a most paralysing effect upon all kinds of trade. There need be no serious apprehension, however, about our crops, as taken all over the country there will be a good average. This drought has not extended to all parts, but has been to a certain extent confined to certain isothermal zones.

The Catholic Vote in Ontario.

In a very sensible letter on the subject of the Mail's recent attack upon the Catholic voters of Ontario, Mr. Cornelius Donovan, writing to the Hamilton Times, as follows, charges certain friends of the Government with stirring up Catholic prejudices by circulating the speeches made against the Orange Bill. Dare the Mail editor say that these same speeches were not used in stirring up Protestant prejudice? Dare he deny that the friends of the Opposition travelled far and wide through the Province, appealing to Orangemen to revenge themselves by voting against a Government certain of whose supporters 'so shabbily treated a Protestant organization?' He dare not. For the proof remains evident in the fact that for one Catholic who supported the Government, at least two Orangemen opposed it.' Mr. Donovan goes farther. Among the concluding sentences of his communication is the following: 'The Catholics of Ontario are not an 'isolated factor' in politics, nor do they want to be. We wish to take our part as citizens of Ontario, and to be approached as such in all political matters. If politicians choose to approach us in any other way and get their fingers burnt like the Mail editor, they have themselves to blame. We would feel extremely thankful to political agents and canvassers if they would cease this jargon about the 'Catholic vote.' We are quite competent to form our own opinion on public matters, and we don't want persons who understand very little about our religion and care less for it, to influence our votes by trying to show us which of the political parties is our greatest enemy, and which our best friend. We simply want to be left alone to be Reformers or Conservatives as we see fit, and to be approached only as citizens of Ontario. When our interests are infringed upon, when we see that we do not obtain equal rights (and we ask neither more or less) we are quite competent to state our grievance and demand the remedy. With regard to the 'factoring' charge it is entirely on the side of the Mail. As a factor of falsehood and distortion it has on the present occasion proved itself a complete success. In conclusion, I might say that this communication is directed entirely against the Mail. I have no quarrel with either of the political parties. I write as a Catholic who has felt his religion insulted by an unprincipled editor, and not as a Reformer or Conservative.

PORT HOPE.

12TH OF JULY CELEBRATION.—The Orangemen of this District intend having an unusually large number of the members of the Order assist them in celebrating the anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne, in Port Hope on the coming 12th of July, the Lodges from Lakefield, Peterboro', Omemee, Smithy, Cavan, Hope, and Cobourg having accepted an invitation to be present, while the Lodges of Lindsay, Manvers and Clarke are also expected. This will make one of the largest turn-outs that has ever been held in Port Hope, and we have no doubt a very large number of people will be attracted to the town in consequence. The Port Hope Orangemen are making very complete arrangements, and doubtless a pleasant day will be spent Distinguished members of the Order from abroad have been invited, and several are expected to accept We will give full particulars in a future issue.

A NEW TIME CARD will shortly go into effect on the Midland Railway. Close connections will be made with the Grand Trunk Express trains, and a night train will run through to Peterborough.

APPOINTMENT.—The vacancy of the solicitorship of the Bank of Montreal here, caused by the death of N. Kirchhoffer, Esq., has been given to D. Chisholm, Esq.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—On Sunday evening last Mrs. John Lytle, of Hope, met with a serious accident, resulting in the breaking of one of her arms, and two of her ribs. She with her husband had come in to town to hear the Rev. Mr. Potts preach, and was stopping until the hour of service at the residence of Mr. R. Glass, over his store on Walton Street. Opposite the stairs leading to the front street is another leading to the rear of the premises, the landing at the top between the two not being very wide. As Mrs. Lytle came out, accompanied by one or two others, another party was met coming up the stairs. To make room on the landing for these she stepped back a few paces, not noticing the rear stair, and fell down these from top to bottom, resulting as stated in a broken arm and two broken ribs. She is progressing favorably.

Terrible Murder in Arthur.

George Antiekmap Supposed to Have Brained His Wife.

ARTHUR, June 19.—A horrible murder was committed here this Wednesday morning on the person of Mrs. George Antiekmap. Her has been arrested on suspicion. At day-break he arose and kindled a fire in the stove, after which he went out of the house. Mrs. Antiekmap, the unfortunate woman, went out shortly afterwards to milk the cows about six rods from the house. There she was found about an hour afterwards with her skull just above the right ear literally smashed to pieces. It was supposed at the time to have been done by a kick from a cow. Medical aid was sent for which arrived shortly afterwards but could do nothing for her as she was dying. The husband in the meantime was no where to be found, so a search was commenced for him He was found about a quarter of a mile down the T. G. & B. R. track under a tree. On his person was a razor with which, it is supposed, he meant to commit suicide.

Shocking Tragedy.

A Man Shoots his Wife in the Street at Wolfville, N. S.

HALIFAX, N. S., June 19.—About half-past eight last evening the people of Wolfville, Kings Co., were startled by hearing two pistol shots in quick succession in the vicinity of Brown's store. It was found that a young woman about 20 years of age, named Bessie Harris, was lying on the ground, blood streaming from her neck. She was carried into the store but never spoke. Medical aid was procured but she died in about three-quarters of an hour. A Coroner's jury found a verdict that deceased had come to her death by a pistol shot fired by Dr. Albert DeWolfe. Deceased was married to Dr. DeWolfe about two years ago, but immediately after the ceremony he changed his mind and they agreed to separate. A short time since he wished her to come back and live with him, but she refused. DeWolfe was arrested about two hours after the shooting. He expressed himself gratified to know that she could not recover. Dr. DeWolfe is an M. D., and graduated at Harvard in 1867. Two years ago he was an inmate of the Lunatic Asylum here, but since has been considered in full possession of his senses. Wolfville is thrown into intense excitement over the tragedy.

Manitoban Politics.

In the Prairie Province the two parties in the Legislature seem to be divided more on the questions of nationality and tongue than on principal or policy. Prior to the recent crisis, the Government was composed of five members—three English and two French. Of these four were Conservatives and one Reformer. The French-speaking members refused to give their support longer to the government unless the Reformer were displaced and his portfolio handed over to a Conservative. The Premier and his English-speaking Ministers refused to accede to the demand, and one of the French Ministers was dismissed and the other resigned. In the meantime, a caucus of all English-speaking members was held and the following was unanimously agreed upon as a general policy:

I. A redistribution of the seats.

II. The abolition of the French printing.

III. Extensions of the boundaries of the Province.

Upon this policy the English-speaking members have united to a man, and are now the Government party, while the French are the Opposition. So the matter stands at present.

"She's Out."

'Didn't you know you were lying when you said your mistress was out?' asked the Judge of a servant girl in a New York court. 'Yes, I did,' was the reply, 'but it is the custom with all ladies; they are always out to some people.' It would have been most unfair had the servant been held in any way responsible. It was not her lie at all, and it is doubtful if the lie was anybody's. Lie is not the word for it. Being 'out,' means often simply engaged. It is a necessary equivocation. Without it we would be 'at sixes and sevens' all the while. Refuse to see a visitor and you make her your enemy. Say you are out and she is not offended. She may suspect the race, for she penetrates it herself, but she cannot know it. The uncertainty saves her feelings and keeps your friend.—Forney's Progress.

MILLBROOK.

INCORPORATION.—We are in a position to inform the public that "Incorporation" has become a fixed fact,—the By-Law, incorporating the Village of Millbrook, having been passed at the recent sitting of the Counties Council. Mr. John Hunter, Clerk of the Division Court, has been appointed Returning Officer, for the holding of the first election on the first Monday of January, next. Till that day, we will have to go as we are. Mr. John Beaty, Jr., was appointed to take the Census, and we understand the figures reached 1176. We were under the impression that there must have been some three or four hundred more, judging from the appearance of the thousands of children on the streets, especially about four o'clock in the afternoon.—Messenger.

England's Commercial Outlook.

A writer in the Nineteenth Century points out that the continued prosperity of England depends on her continuous progress. With a population increasing at the rate of one per cent. per annum, industrial production must increase in the same ratio if the condition of the people is to remain as at present. The value of the yearly imports is rising, and to maintain a solvent position the value of the exports must also increase. The writer of the article we have been reading is evidently not a believer in the Protectionist doctrine that the regulation of a country's trade is in the power of Government of the day. Hard times is not in his opinion to be taken as reflecting discredit on the ruler.

"I doubt whether the Government is specially to blame for the depression of trade and the consequent suffering of the working classes and of others more highly placed in the social scale, except in so far as we might be entitled to except from them a clearer and quicker perception of coming circumstances than from others less eminently placed, and, under those circumstances, a curtailment instead of an enhancement of expenditure. The truth is that all classes have been to blame, and to blame much in the same way—the upper ten thousand probably more than the humbler ranks, as having wider means of knowing facts and more trained habits and capacities of thought. I doubt if any one of the coaches societies has special right to throw stones at the others in reference to the calamity that has come upon us all. Reckless, self-indulgence, extravagant expenditure, determination to enjoy the present and leave the future to take care of itself, have been characteristic of all alike. All have 'made haste to be rich' few comparatively to store up their riches. Five years of prosperity, nearly five years of sudden and astonishing profits, excited the spirits, often turned the heads, of masters and men alike in most of our largest industries and in several branches of commerce; but the gains of those years, in place of being hoarded up to carry British artisans and merchants through the reactionary and disastrous years which were to follow, were too often lavishly and unprofitably squandered, as if reaction was not to be dreamed of—so that when the turn of the tide came it took most of our productive classes unawares, and many, both high and low, unprovided and in danger."

The Horse.

"Of the great number of animals under the control of man, the horse is unquestionably the most serviceable;" but is it not strange that so many who own horses, and who are dependent on their labour for a living, should neglect to give them that care and attention which their own interest no less than the safety and comfort of the horse demands. The best remedy for horses is "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy;" of this their can be no doubt—it is safe and easily given. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package, Northrop & Lyman, Toronto, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers.

On motion the petition of Robert Wigmore and 23 others was received and laid over, and Messrs. Kidd and Wigmore were appointed to examine the road petitioned for, and report to Council. Mr. Wigmore was appointed to contract with P. W. Wilkins, to survey side road between lots 15 and 16 in 9th concession, provided the parties interested bear all the other costs. Henry Mustard was appointed Pathmaster in place of Wm. Grattan, and George Little in place of Robt. Brown. On motion $3 50 a month, to commence June first, 1879, was granted as aid to Mrs. S. Robinson, under the superintendance of W. Wason, Councillor, as long as she is in her present helpless condition. The Great Shoshonees Remedy

The Great Shoshonees Remedy is an Indian vegetable compound composed of the juices of a variety of remarkable medicine plants and herbs; the various properties of these different ingredients, when combined as so constituted as to act simultaneously upon the Blood, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys diegestive, Organs, Nervous System, &c. restoring their functions to healthy action, and being purely vegetable, is as harmless as nature's own beverage. This medicine is a decided benefit in all, and a permanent cure in a large majority of diseases of the blood, such as Scrofula, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum Canker Pimples, &c. In prescribing this medicine we do not claim that it always performs cures; but this we do say, that it purifies and enriches the blood, permanently curing a large majority of diseases arising from its impurities. It stands far ahead and unequalled among the hundreds of competing medicines of the day It has stood the test of ten years, and is to day more popular than ever. As a summer restorative it stands unrivaled; it enables the system to bear up against the constant drain to which it is subjected by a high temperature. Persons who are subject to Bilious Colic, Dysentery, Indigestion, &c., should take the Shoshonees Remedy. Price of the Remedy by pint bottle $1; Pills, 25 cts. a box. Sold by all medicine dealers.

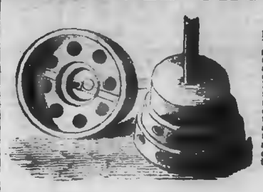
IMPROVED CHURN DASHER.

(Patented July, 1878.)



Is adapted to all the old fashioned Round, Tub or Crock Churns. It will churn and gather the butter in from 4 to 10 minutes, and turn out 10 per cent more butter than anything of the kind in use. Each section or flange is an Air Chamber, which forces a large volume of atmosphere down into the milk or cream at each stroke, the cream or milk at the same time is forced over upward of four hundred inches of surface, and is thrown with such great velocity square against the walls of the churn that it ruptures the globules and frees the butter with a few strokes. It is perfectly simple and easily constructed,—no machinery about it to get out of order.

CATARRH.

Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Cures Catarrh.

T. J. B. HARDING, Esq., BROCKVILLE, ONT.

DEAR SIR.—It is now two years since your "Constitutional Catarrh Remedy" was introduced to me. I have waited this long to see if the cure would remain permanent before doing this, my duty, to you, as at first the happy effects seemed to me to be "too good to be true."

I was afflicted in my head for years before I was recommended to use Catarrh. In reading your Circular I saw my case decided in many particulars. The inward "drop" from the head had become very distressible, and a choking sensation often preventing me from lying long, I would feel like smothering and be compelled to sit up in the bed. My health and spirits were seriously affected. When your Agent came to Walkerton in August 1877, I secured three bottles. Before I had used a quarter of the contents of one bottle I found decided relief, and when I had used two bottles and a third, I quit taking it, feeling quite cured of that ailment, and have not used any since until of late I have taken some for a cold in my head.

A sense of duty to sufferers from that loathsome disease, Catarrh, prompts me to send you this Certificate, unsolicited, with leave to make what use of it you may see proper. Yours truly,

W. TINDALL, Methodist minister,

Fort Elgin, Ont., Aug. 24, 1878.

PROTECTION.
Ladies, protect your health by purchasing the WHEELER & WILSON which is proven to be
The Lightest Running Sewing Machine in the World!
Natural Philosophy proves it, and Common sense sanctions it, as their motion is Rotating, while that of a shuttle machine is reciprocating. They are more durable than a shuttle machine and far less complicated.
They sew heavier and lighter than any other machine.
They make less noise than any other machine and they do the nicest and greatest range of work, never soiling the thread with oil or dirt.
They also took the Grand Prize at the Paris Exposition, held in France, on the 21st of October, 1878, from all the other machines present, and there were over fifty-two thousand on exhibition.
The above Leading Machines are sold at Peterborough by
G. A. MITCHELL,

Lines on the Death of Miss Minnie Buck, of Norwood.

A sister dear has left her home,
Who unexpected died,
She is sleeping in the grave we know
Among the silent dead.

She was but a tender flower
That bloomed here and there,
The youngest of her father's dear,
Their darling and their pride.

She did not suffer long below,
For Jesus called her home
To join the heavenly choir above
That sing around His Throne.

We know her parents will feel sad,
When they think of the days gone;
But yet we know that they can say,
"Oh, Lord, Thy will be done."

We would not call her back again,
For she is better far;
From sin and sorrow she is safe,
Within the gates afar.

Then, brother, sister, parents, friends,
Let us for death prepare,
That when we are called to worlds on high
We will meet our sister there.

Among the distant realms above,
Where sorrow is unknown,
We hope to meet dear Minnie there
When we arrive at home.

—Miss. J. McL.
Norwood, June 16, 1879.

"Real Young Ladies."

'No, ma; they were real young ladies, for they wore long trains.'

The speaker was a young Miss of sixteen. Well, thought I, here is a revelation, so 'long trains' constitute a 'real young lady.' I wonder why peacocks would not fill the bill? Surely, they wear long and variegated trains, and can spread and manage them as well as the most fashionable girl in the city.

Heaven help the country where a 'real young lady' is known by the length of her train! For my part, I have known and seen some of the most senseless, idiotic, bedaubed, walking show-cases, who wore 'long trains,' and who might be classed by the many as 'real young ladies;' but by the few—well, we are not supposed to be judges.

Would it not be well when a girl makes a speech like the foregoing, to offset it by the following:—

My dear, you are mistaken. A young lady to earn the appellation in its truest, fullest sense, must be well developed physically and mentally; must give equal parts of her time in this world to the care of her body, as well as mind, for no flower can expand or blossom in a dry, unprofitable soil; neither can the soul of any young lady, or any one else's—reach out into the far-off fields of learning and life, trammelled by an unhealthy, sickly physique. To keep the pendulum of a clock swinging evenly to both sides, insures correct time—that is, if it is first set in running order. So the body must be in harmony with the spirit—the spirit with the body—if we would keep time—correct time—through all the vicissitudes of this busy world.

But a young lady who sits up every morning till two or three o'clock, gets up at nine or ten the next day, swallows a cup of coffee, rushes up stairs, throws herself on a lounge with the latest novel, reads an hour or two, then eats a lunch, toddles back to her room, takes her back hair from the drawer where it has lain since she retired the night (or rather morning) before, brushes, combs, curls, frizzes, and adjust it on the top of her senseless head, to be followed by the never-ending and tiresome work of getting herself up, donning the said long train, taking the usual promenade to be joined by some brainless fop who pours into her ears, in the space of a few moments, his catalogue of knowledge which consists of a few compliments, for the 'young lady,' a few for himself, the state of the weather with the remarks that, it is confounded dull in the city. An invitation to some of the places of amusement, a late supper, a drive or walk home, to be allowed the privilege of sitting up as early as they please. This, to be kept up every day and night, only more so.

Is this to constitute a 'real young lady?' Is this kind of girls to be the future wives and mothers of our country? Phaw! it is preposterous. There must be a new order of things, or these things will bring a new order to us, and that will be an order from above that will show us plainly we are fitting our girls for death—death for the soul as well as body—death, and not life.

The N. P. in Meyersburg.

(Campbellford Herald Correspondence.)

The old barn, which had reached a high antiquity, has been pulled down by the ruthless proprietor. Let us hope to see a succession worthy of it soon rising under the fostering influence of the N. P. on the crops.

One of the oldest houses in the village has been plastered. This can be directly traced to the N. P.

A good frame building, somewhat airy, has been erected over the stave-cutter, and a fine smokestack has been quite recently set up. The connection between this and the N. P. may be somewhat difficult to trace, but sufficient ingenuity could accomplish it.

A very fine field of fall wheat greets the pilgrim's eye as he wearily toils along. We used to have good crops before the deposition of King John; why not now?

The celebrated potato pug must soon gather its prosperity together and fly to some unhappy land where they have no panacea in the shape of an N. P. All you ghosts that have so long haunted our land with your hard-times—producing pressure, begone. The sun prosperity must now shine with unclouded splendor. Sir John said it should, and it must.

Fishermen were about as numerous as fish on the Queen's Birthday. There was a regular hum of industry all day.

All the humming industries were closed on that day, and not on the 26th as you prophesied.

The clock of the stave-cutters tells of one industry revived since the happy (?) 17th.

But the greatest of all hums is that of the mosquito. He is not very busy through the day, but at night and all night you hear his hum and feel his bite. The truth is he can beat the N. P. on humming as easily as it did the Revenue Tariff last September.

The Ballot and Compulsory Voting

Says the Toronto Telegram:—Much is due to the Reform party for the introduction of the ballot. Under the ballot a man may vote as he deems best, and without regard to party or personal considerations. As one writer has put it, the voter can break faith with the wire-puller and keep it with the country. Mr. Blake's idea is that we should have compulsory voting—that in fact, compulsory voting is the next logical step after the ballot. This word, compulsory, has an uninviting sound, for people do not like to be told that they must vote whether they like to or not. But they ought to vote. It is a duty that every man owes to the State, and he should discharge it. Those who refuse to discharge it ought to be disfranchised. One very good effect of the ballot is that it has shown the uselessness of canvassing. If we had compulsory voting there would be no use of canvassing at all. That would be a great blessing to thousands of people at election times. Election canvassers, however worthy they may be, have come to be a great nuisance, and nobody would shed tears if the race were suddenly to become extinct. They have very little reason for existence under the ballot, and they would have a great deal less if the idea of compulsory voting were adopted and put into practice.

The New York Murder.

THE MURDERER OF MRS. HULL ARRESTED —HIS OBJECT WAS ROBBERY.

Chastine Cox, the supposed murderer of Mrs. Hull, at New York, was arrested in Boston on Sunday night. He is a coppercolored negro, who had been employed as a waiter for a year and a half in the neighborhood of the Hull residence. Cox appeared in Boston a week ago, and at a pawn broker's shop disposed of a canoe set of jewellery which the superintendent of pawnbrokers afterwards found. The pawnbroker furnished a description of the prisoner, and search revealed the fact that Cox, after getting rid of the jewellery, went to New York and remained there two or three days, and in the meantime made some alterations in the character and colour of his clothing. Cox was discovered and suspected on the street by a newspaper reporter, who had a description of him. The reporter accosted Cox, and the latter's ignorance of the city confirmed the former's suspicions.

The reporter followed Cox till the latter entered the colored church, and then informed the police, who were sent, and Cox surrendered without resistance. Mrs. Hull's watch was found on him, and he was thoroughly indentified. He was not reticent, and said in answer to questions, that he had lived for a long time opposite Mrs. Hull's house, and at the time of the robbery he entered through a lower window and went up stairs to her room.

He said his purpose was robbery alone, and he did not intend to kill her.

Officers from New York, and also one of Mrs. Hull's boarders, recognised him.

A Shocking Suicide.

(Winnipeg Free Press, June 18.)

A melancholy event happened in the Little Saskatchewan country on Wednesday of last week—a young married woman, accompanying her husband to her new home, taking her life while labouring under a fit of temporary insanity. The particulars of the sad affair are as follows:—

A young man named James McDougall, from the township of Wellesley, Waterloo county, Ontario, was on his way with his wife and some friends to land he had taken up on the little Saskatchewan. Mrs. McDougall during the trip was very low spirited, and frequently expressed her disinclination to go west, even at one time saying to her husband:—"Shoot me and then shoot yourself, and let us go together."

Similar expressions to others are also attributed to her, but it was believed that her down-heartedness merely arose from being homesick, and none suspected that there was any danger of her committing the rash act, which consigned her to an early grave. At Winnipeg, it is said, she desired to return home to Ontario—a wish repeated at the Portage. But the party pursued their way westward. Last Tuesday night they camped about twelve miles from Hare's Crossing, on the Little Saskatchewan. In the tent were Mr. and Mrs. McDougall, and a little boy. The next morning, between 4 and 5 o'clock, Mr. McDougall arose and said to his wife "You get up and prepare break fast, and I'll get the horse." She replied, "Yes, in a short time." He then went out, and while washing himself just outside the tent was startled by the report of a pistol from the interior of the canvas. He rushed in, to find his young wife lying senseless, in her hand a pistol, with which she had sent a bullet into her brain. The stricken husband grasped her in his arms, but he could not recall her to consciousness, and she shortly afterwards died, without uttering a word, after having committed the fatal deed.

The unfortunate woman, whose maiden name was Miss Ellen Ferguson, had only been married about three months.

Her parents, who are very respectable and well-to-do people, resided in Mornington township, Perth country, Ontario. She was not over twenty or twenty-one years of age, and was highly esteemed by all who knew her.

An inquest was held on Thursday by the Stipendiary Magistrate at Here's Crossing, to which place the body was removed, when a verdict of "insanity" was returned. The body was taken to the homestead of the disconsolate husband, where it was interred.

Loss of Appetite in Horses.

Horses lose their appetite from various causes, but most frequently by the approach of some disease, this circumstance ought not to be overlooked by those who own horses, but should be immediately attended to as by so doing the disease may be checked, and the life of the horse saved. To do which we are positive there is nothing equal to "Darley's Condition and Arabian Heave Remedy;" it purifies the blood, corrects all derangements of the digestive organs, and as a necessary consequence the appetite is restored, the skin becomes soft, and the coat assumes a soft and shining appearance. People are apt to fall in love with those who are beautiful at sight. But to retain love, one must have truth, tenderness and constancy.

Some persons move through life as a band of music moves down the street, flinging out pleasure on every side, through the air to every one, far and near, that care to listen.

If all were as willing to be pleasent and as anxious to please in their own homes as they are in the company of their neighbors, they would have the happiest homes in the world.

Humors of the Day.

A man who made a business of writing obituaries, epitaphs, etc., used to solicit patronage far and near. Hearing of the death of a man in a distant part of the country, and business being a little dull, he made a journey there. Finding the widow of the deceased person he stated his occupation, and asked if she wouldn't like a few lines about her husband, "Lines about him!" she said, wofully; "he had all the lines he wanted. If he had had one line less, he would have been alive to-day." "What ailed him, madam?" "He was hung."

There was much sound palpable argument in the speech of a country lad to an idler who boasted his ancient family. "So much the worse for you," said the peasant; "as the ploughmen say, 'the older the seed the worse the crop.'"

STERN, BUT TRUE.—"Young man," said a stern old professor to a student who had been charged with kissing one of his daughters—"young man, don't get into that habit. You'll find that kissing is like eating soup with a fork." "How so, Sir?" asked the student. "Because," answered the stern old professor, "you can't get enough of it."

WANTED STRENGTH.—A boy had always declined to eat oatmeal, although his mother had urged it upon him as a strengthening diet. Suddenly he surprised her by one morning eating liberal plateful and calling for more. When she asked for an explanation, he replied, "I am bound to eat oatmeal till I get strong enough to whip George Scott."

The latest reports from Chiselhurst give cause for well-grounded fear that the ex-Empress will not recover. She has been unable to obtain any sleep save that induced by opiates since the news of the Prince's death, and is daily losing strength owing to sleeplessness and grief. Her mind wanders, she talks irrationally at times, fails to recognize those around her, and unless some favorable change soon takes place, her death appears almost inevitable.

PETERBOROUGH, JULY 3, 1879.

THE LETELLIER CASE.

When Sir John Macdonald, as leader of the Opposition in the House of Commons, tried to make dishonest party capital among the extreme Bleus of the Province of Quebec, by assuming a position of open hostility to Lieutenant-Governor Letellier, he entered upon a path that has led him and the party he leads into no small amount of difficulty and political disgrace. The DeBoucherville party in Quebec, discredited at the polls by the electors, in spite of their utmost efforts to retain the reins of power by every corrupt means, came so near being successful in their attempt that they did not lose all hope of turning the tide in their favour by the most gross and cowardly abuse of the Queen's representative, hampered by his position in such a way as to prevent his acting freely in self-defence. The late Ministers in Quebec called to their aid the Tory leader in the Dominion Parliament; and he, seeking all means of embarrassing the Mackenzie Government, lent himself and his party only too readily to the plots of the discarded and dishonored DeBouchervillians. His action in opposition was, naturally enough, demanded of him when he surprisingly became again the leader of the Dominion Government; and the repeated resolution for the interference of the House of Commons in that which did not concern it, namely: the censure of a Lieutenant-Governor, was easily passed by his too willing majority. The next step was for the Dominion Ministry, in pretended obedience to the will of the House of Commons, which they had themselves provoked, to advise the dismissal of Lieut-Governor Letellier. This can only be done by the Governor-General in Council, and the Marquis of Lorne, for readily imaginable reasons, refused to sanction such dismissal. This, it will be remembered, led to a loud outcry by the rabid Quebec Tories against the Governor-General, both in the House, and in the press. It came out that the case was referred to the decision of the Imperial authorities; and those of Sir John Macdonald's followers who denounced such reference, supposing the Marquis of Lorne to be personally responsible for it, had the chagrin of discovering that Sir John and his colleagues had advised the sending of the case to England. Not long ago it was ascertained that the British Government also declined to sanction the dismissal, thus sustaining the presumed action of the Governor-General; and it has lately been learned that the Imperial authorities refuse to interfere in a matter entirely within the power of the Dominion itself to deal with, by its Governor-General in Council. This is exactly in accordance with the view of the case taken by THE EXAMINER when discussing it when it was known reference was to be made to England. In our forecast we had the clear light of the principles of responsible government, which were cast behind them by the Conservatives in the House of Comsons when they presumed to interfere in the concerns of the Province of Quebec.

The Lieutenant-Governor can only be dismissed for cause, and so far no cause has been advanced for his dismissal. If there were such cause, the Governor-General and his Council should at once have dismissed Mr. Letellier. If there were not cause, Mr. Letellier has been gratuitously and quite unjustifiably persecuted, to gratify the spite of a few malicious persons whose evil deeds brought just punishment upon them. Mr. Letellier's reason for dismissing his ministers,—the act for which blame is attempted to be cast on him from outside—is, that they were doing what was against the interests and good of the people of the Province. He readily found new ministers willing to assume the responsibility of such a view; and the people endorsed it by sustaining these new ministers at the polls by a Reform vote far beyond all precedent in the history of the Province. The majority of the new ministry, as narrow as possible at first has since been increasing, till now the Government is able to force a favorable vote of the House against the utmost efforts of its opponents, as was the case last week. It is evident that the people and the Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec are quite in accord upon the propriety of dismissing the late ministers. Mr. Letellier stood by the people then; and they stand by him now, and that too in a way that shows his dismissal would not be in accordance with their popular will, however well it might please a few fanatical partizans.

The case as it now stands rests just where it did immediately before the reference to Britain,—for the decision of the Governor-General and his Cabinet. His Ministers have by their action as members of the House of Commons already publicly committed themselves to favor the dismissal of Mr. Letellier. If the Governor-General had agreed with them in the first place the dismissal would undoubtedly have taken place at once. It is therefore fair to presume that the Governor-General did not approve of dismissing Mr. Letellier on the grounds submitted.

It is not likely, in view of the tacit endorsation of his position by the British Government, and of the result of late elections in the Provinces of Quebec, that His Excellency will be any more ready to agree to the dismissal of Mr. Letellier than he was before. The Dominion Ministers must then do one of two things:—resign their positions because of disagreement with the Crown on an important principle; or take back in the most abject manner possible the views they, in the position of representatives of the people, have expressed on the floor of the House of Commons. We do not think any two highly of them to doubt that they would do the latter were it possible for them to do so and retain their positions. It only remains to be seen whether they will be permitted to so disgrace themselves and the Dominion.

The utterances of their own party organs encourage the belief that they will not resign if they can possibly avoid it, honor or dishonor, ; but according to our view of the situation there must inevitably be the resignation either of Mr. Letellier or the Dominion Government. It has been authoritatively announced that the Lieut.-Governor of Quebec has no intention of resigning, and will not resign; therefore nothing but his death can save the Macdonald-Tilley Government from appeal to the country. It would not be wise, in such circumstances, to prepare for another general election and a reversal of the 17th of September last.

THE MIDLAND RAILWAY.

The new time table of the Midland Railway for the summer, came into operation on Tuesday, 1st instant, and from it we learn that excellent arrangements for Peterborough have been made. Mr. Cox, the President, has been mindful of Peterborough interests, and has secured them this time, without doubt. He has provided for five inward and four outward trains daily. He has also done away with delays or waiting over at Millbrook which were generally so vexatious to travellers. In future trains will proceed direct to the Port Hope Grand Trunk station in connection with Eastern and Western trains on that road, saving passengers the trouble of "bus" hire and annoyance about baggage—besides removing uneasiness through fear of missing the train—and all the annoyance of cabs and carters. We have seen a letter to Mr. Cox, President of the Midland, from Mr. Hickson, Managing Director of the Grand Trunk, from which we learn that Mr. Cox, and the Grand Trunk have made very favorable arrangements for Peterborough. By these arrangements the passenger car on the Midland, leaving at 6:45 a.m., will proceed direct to Toronto without change at Port Hope; arriving at Toronto at 10:52 a.m., then leaving Toronto at 4:15 p.m., will come direct to Peterborough arriving at 10:10 p.m. The Grand Trunk car leaving Toronto at 7:12 a.m., will arrive at Peterborough at 11:50 a.m., and will leave here at 6:15 p.m., and proceed without change to Toronto, arriving there about 11 p m. This affords every convenience to travellers that they could have, if on the line of the Grand Trunk, and will enable them to remain about five or six hours in Toronto doing business, and return home the same day; doing away with stopping at Port Hope and all the consequent costs and delays—which have been no small items to merchants and others compelled to travel.

Mr. Cox has also made permanent arrangements by which return tickets to Toronto will be only $4, or about 50 cents more than return tickets from Port Hope, and equal to, if not a little less than it costs a person living at the same distance from Toronto on the Grand Trunk, that Peterborough is.

The people of Peterboro may now congratulate themselves, that they have a President who will look after their interests. These changes will prove a saving of not less than $3.50, every trip to Toronto—a no small sum these times. We are also now as favorably provided for as if we were on the Grand Trunk line, considering distances and consequent circumstances, and Mr. Cox deserves the praise of every citizen of the Town for thus attending to our interests, and procuring such advantageous terms for us. In the past, we have had directors in Peterboro, but they saw after their own interests first, those of the town next. In this case we hope that while the people of Peterborough are being benefitted the company will also. The following letter from the General Manager of the Grand Trunk Railway Company to the President of the Midland Railway, removes the impression that always existed in Peterboro, that the Grand Trunk people were unwilling to make any arrangements by which Peterboro might be better provided with train accommodation:—

GRAND TRUNK R.R. OF CANADA.
General Manager's Office.
Montreal, June 24, 1879.

Dear Sir,—

About two years ago, I made an effort to improve the train arrangements between Peterborough and Toronto. Circumstances which I need not refer to prevented the success of the effort. I considered then, as I do now, that the people of Peterborough have great cause to be dissatisfied that they cannot get to and from the capital of Ontario, which is within a comparatively short distance of their town, in less than a couple of days.

If your company is in a position and willing to make such an arrangement, the Grand Trunk Company will run through cars between Peterborough and Toronto on two trains each way daily, and supply their necessary quota of cars for the purpose, the arrangement to commence from the 1st July.

Your Company being prepared to make such an arrangement, we will attach the cars to our trains, and passengers will be enabled to get into a car at Peterborough or Toronto and remain in it until they reach their destination at either the one place or the other.

I have already explained to you that the fault does not in any way lie with us that such an arrangement was not made long ago.

Yours truly,
J. HICKSON,
General Manager.

GEO. A. COX, Esq.,
President and Man. Dir.
Midland Railway,
Peterborough.

It is understood that Senator Haviland is to be appointed Lieut.-Governor of Prince Edward Island, to fill the vacancy which will be created by the present occupant of that position when term expires on the 4th of July.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The value of Canada's fish produce for 1878 was $12,215,678, being a million and a quarter more than for the previous year.

A protest has been entered against the return of Dr. Barr, on the grounds of personal bribery as well as bribery by his Agents.

A correspondent of the Toronto Telegram, in rebuking Goldwin Smith for his attack upon Mr. Blake, expresses his confidence that the time is not far distant when Mr. Blake will be placed at the head of the most powerful and intellectual Cabinet this country ever contained.

It is now stated that the Hon. Mr. Masson is in much better health than he has been for some time, and has no notion of retiring from the Cabinet; that Mr. Langevin is to be sacrificed by appointment to some office in London, and that Mr. Caron will reign in his stead. It is given out that Sir John will leave for Quebec next week, but it is not added that he is to embark for England.

The return of Mr. Prefontaine for Chambly by a majority of sixty-one, ought to convince Sir John Macdonald, as it certainly will convince the people of of the Dominion and the Mother Country, that the usefulness of Mr. Letellier has not been impaired in the Province over which he presides as the Queen's representative. It also settles the question as to the popularity of Mr. Joly's Government, which has now a clear working majority in the House.

Archbishop Lynch occupies over two columns of small type in the Globe in a criticism of Dr. Sweatman's first charge to the Toronto Anglican Synod. Dr. Lynch takes exception, as he has a perfect right to do, to certain remarks of the Bishop considered offensive to the Roman Catholic Church. But the general public will protest against the introduction of religious controversy into secular newspapers.

About 60 men employed on a gravel train near Millbrook, on Wednesday last notified the President that unless their wages were raised on Monday to $1.25 a day, they would quit work. They were receiving $1.00 per day. The President Mr. Cox, immediately paid them off and discharged them. This shows conclusively the position the road is attaining under its present management.

Poor Mr. Rykert, member for Lincoln, has again got himself into trouble. He is accused of hampering with a nice little bribe of $10,000, to secure a contract on the Pacific Railway for Andrews, Jones & Co. Fortunately for him, the contract was given to another, and he was not allowed to claim his reward. The evil intention remains the same, but we doubt if Mr. Rykert is very sensible on points like this.

The Toronto Telegram says the Mowat Government has been a fortunate one. If it lives out its present term, it will be one of the longest-lived known in political history. During the century there have been only two longer ones—Pit's seventeen years' Ministry, which died in 1801; and Lord Liverpool's which existed from 1812 to 1827. The shortest-lived in England was Canning's, which only lived 121 days, and in Canada, the grand old Reformers, which passed peacefully away after an existence of three days.

The Orangemen of the Dominion intend holding a monster procession in Ottawa on July 23rd, in honor of the Triennial meeting of the Orange Grand Council. An address will be presented to Mr. Mackenzie Bowell, Minister of Customs, who, when in Opposition three years ago, was elected Grand Sovereign of the Orangemen of the universe. It is understood that Mr. Bowell will be in the North-west in July in connection with Departmental business, but whether he will be able to return in time to receive these honors and preside over the deliberations of the Council in person by virtue of his office is not known.

The London Sportsman says Hanlan left Newcastle on Thursday. He received an enthusiastic farewell. He thanked the people for their kindness and said he was ready to meet all comers to contest for the cup. Elliott shook hands warmly with Hanlan on parting. On his arrival in Manchester a tremendous crowd assembled, and cheered Hanlan loudly. In the evening he was presented with a valuable diamond solitaire by his Manchester admirers, and made a suitable reply. The stage of the theatre where the presentation took place was decorated with British and American flags. The Sportsman's Challenge Cup and Hanlan's boat were also displayed.

Hanlan.

Hanlan's easy victory teaches a lesson not only to the English but to all mankind. It is about the same lesson that Wilkie Collins tried to teach in his novel 'Man and Wife.' Collins endeavored to show that it was possible to over train a man; that an athlete might be apparently in the best of trim while in reality he was on the verge of physical disaster. Ponderous muscle on arms, or legs, or back, or chest, is not an indication that a man is in splendid condition. The heart may be weak or the lungs overstrained, and consequently the abundance of muscle is of small account. By a strange coincidance just as this book was being discussed, a practical illustration of its truth was given in the case of Renforth, the sculler, who, in American waters, gave way and died at the supreme moment, just as Collins' man had done. Any person who sees Hanlan walk the streets of Toronto, would not from his appearance pick him out as the champion oarsman of the world. Dozens of other young men are more athletic as far as appearance goes. But Hanlan's prowess lies in the even balance of his anatomy. No part of him is developed at the expense of any other part, while all his powers are educated to do their best. He is sort of 'one horse chaise,' whose thills were as strong as the sills, and every part just equal to the rest, and therefore no function could ruin the others by an untimely failure. One such man in the best crew in the world, as, for instance, the 'Shoes,' will cause them to lose a race; so it is with one defective organ in the body. A man or a machine is just as strong as his or its weakest part. The fact that Hanlan has no particular organ particularly strong and none at all weak, is the secret of his success.

Niagara Falls.

Bodies found in the River.

CLIFTON, June 27.—The body of Madame Rolland, the lady who was carried over the Falls last Friday, was found early this morning, by a fisherman named Stewart under what is known as Stuppon Rock, situated on the Canada side of the river a few hundred yards below the Falls. The body was stripped of all clothing except one shoe and one kid glove. The husband of the unfortunate lady left the Falls a few days ago, but it is said, offered a considerable reward for the recovery of that body. A verdict "found drowned" was returned by the Coroner's jury this afternoon.

NIAGARA, Ont., June 27.—The body of a man was found in the river this morning, with the throat cut and one leg off.

MURDERED WITH AN AXE.

The Result of a Drunken Spree—A Woman's Head and Hand Hacked Off and Thrown in a Wash-tub—The supposed Murderess Arrested.

"I have been in the British army from '54 to '62," said constable John Bolster this morning, "and I never seen a sight like this." The constable was on duty at No. 242, William Street, Griffintown, where one of the most repulsive murders ever chronicled occurred some time yesterday.

Last night a boy notified me that a woman was dead in the house of Susan Kennedy Myers, and in company with sub-Constable Cuge we went to the house. Meeting some policemen we brought them along, and they watched the doors while I went up-stairs. I found the body of the unfortunate woman, Mrs. Conly, lying on her breast in the back room, and

and thrown into a bucket. No axe was to be seen. I then went into the front room, and lying on the bed, pretending to be drunk, was Susan Kennedy Myers. There was a candle burning in the kitchen when I went in. I asked Susie how the murder occurred. She said a man came into the house and gave her (Kennedy, some money, which, arousing the jealousy of the deceased, the latter and the man had a quarrel and the man killed her. She said she saw the man and clear out. Before going he warned her not to tell the police. She did not know the man's name, and was glad he had escaped, because he was a good looking-fellow."

WASH THE BLOOD FROM HIS HANDS

The Police came upstairs and they arrested the woman. Three dresses had been found on her.

ALL STAINED WITH BLOOD.

The outside dress had but a few spots. Under this was an apron over a second dress, both of which were much bespattered with blood, and under these again was a third dress, also bearing spots of blood. One of these dresses and some of the clothing, he had been told, belonged to the murdered woman.

After the interview with the policeman our reporter sought the premises where the tragedy occurred, and where policeman John Bolster was using his utmost endeavor to check the stream of people pouring into the rickety old building to witness the repulsive sight. The house is a rickety two story building, and it was in the upper tenement the body lay. Passing up a shaky staircase of seven or eight steps, our reporter entered at once into the main room, and such a sight as presented itself will never be forgotten. The headless trunk lay prostrate on the floor. The jags in the neck showed that a score at least of blows had been struck by some clumsy hand before the head had left the body. The maimed arm lay underneath the body, while the legs were extended in a perfectly natural position. A thin cotton dress with apparently little undercloching were on her. In a large bucket or wash-tub near by were the ghastly head and severed right hand. The grey hair could hardly be distinguished owing to the clots of blood on it, while several gashes across the forehead would indicate that she had received the first blow on the head. The blood had evidently been washed up.

The two rooms were almost

the only article of any value being a stove in the back room where the body lay. The rusty stove pipes had been left in a corner of the room, and from the appearance of things the only cooking that was done was in the fire-place.

WHEN THE MURDER OCCURRED.

It seems somewhat strange that a murder of this kind could have occurred in the heart of so thickly a settled district as this and the police be ignorant of the facts until about ten hours after. Our reporter to investigate the matter further sought out the occupants of the lower tenement, one of whom, a rather intelligent young woman, expressed her belief that the murder took place yesterday at noon. She said that while they were at dinner about half-past twelve, they heard a pounding up stairs, and it was so heavy as to knock down the ceiling in two places, and she pointed out where the ceiling had been knocked off. They heard no screaming or talking of any kind at the time. She said a man was seen coming into the house at six o'clock yesterday morning in company with the deceased Mrs. Conly. They entered the common doorway at the front, and when asked by the man in the lower tenement what they wanted, said they wanted to go upstairs. They could not get in the front way, whereupon deceased Mrs. Conly went around the back way and forced an entrance, opened the front door and let the man in. The man who was a stranger to her, was not seen to go out of the house. That was all she knew about the matter. From neighbors it was learned that the woman Myers was a

DISTURBER OF THE PEACE.

She is a tall, powerful woman, and when under the influence of liquor talks in a silly manner, and some believe her to be insane. Her husband Myers has worked for Mr. Clendinneng, and is declared an inoffensive man, who is rarely if ever under the influence of liquor. 'He would not hurt a fly,' said one, and this seemed to be the prevailing impression, but the woman was evidently regarded with terror. This impression extended also to police circles, where Susie Kennedy is well known. Several policemen stated she was a most difficult character to arrest.

Jacob Myers, the husband, was arrested this morning. The neighbors account for his absence by saying that he tried to get in yesterday and Susan would not admit him.

who tried to get admission this morning to the building was very great. The policeman would admit no women or children, and some of the ringeaes were mad enough to tear him to pieces. The men did not stay in the room long; one look was generally sufficient, and with an exclamation they turned away from the subject before them, and yet—incredible as it may seem in view of Sir Charles Tupper's denial—an Order-in-Council, of which Parliament and the country knew nothing, had been sent off to British Columbia on the 26th of April, naming Esquimault as the terminus of the Pacific Railway. A single glance at the map of British Columbia will convince any man that Esquimault cannot by any possibility be made the terminus of the Barrard Inlet line, or indeed of any line but that by Bute Inlet, and yet Sir Charles Tupper had the consummate assurance, the brazen impudence, to tell the House of Commons two weeks after this Order-in-Council had been adopted on his own recommendation, that the Government had not settled the question of route. Had the existence of this order been known, the resolutions he submitted would not have been allowed to pass so easily; and being well aware of this fact, he did not scruple to set, if he did not actually utter, an audacious falsehood.

Now that the Burrard Inlet route, fixed upon by the late Government, has been rejected, and the Bute Inlet route adopted, let us see what extra expenditure this section entails upon the country. As our readers well know the Pacific Railway is a load under which this Dominion will stagger for ever, if it does not utterly sink, even if it is constructed on the cheapest possible line. What madness and folly then, to add unnecessarily not only to the cost of construction, but also to the expenditure for working and maintenance for all time to come! The Bute Inlet route is the longer of the two by 287 miles, and has the additional inconvenience of a long and dangerous ferry across the Gulf of Georgia. It is the more difficult of construction, and Mr. Combie, who was specially deputed to report on the subject puts the difference of the first cost at no less a sum than twenty millions of dollars. Leaving aside the great loss and inconvenience to shippers and passengers from the lengthening of the route, the cost of maintaining the longer line is estimated at $600,000 a year than that of the shorter line, and this on a small traffic. The real loss thus entailed by the choice of the Bute Inlet route is, therefore, $20,000,000 in construction, and and at least $700,000 a year for ever. And all for what? For nothing else that we can see except to fulfil promises made to the people of Victoria to induce them to find a constituency for Sir John Macdonald when he was repudiated by Kingston.—Advertiser.

Roasted by the Sun.

An Indian named Maracle, living on the Tyendinaga reserve, Belleville, was literally roasted to death by the sun, on Wednesday last. He partook freely of whiskey until he became drunk and then lay down in the sun near his dwelling. His daughter tried to arouse him but could not, and on visiting him some hours afterwards, found that he was not sleeping, but dead. In taking off his clothing, parts of his flesh came off with it.

The Mansfield Murder.

(From the Becton Chronicle.)

On Friday evening, between the hours of 6 and 10 o'clock, the quiet little village of Mansfield was thrown into intense excitement by the report that Thomas Cook, a young man, had been fatally shot by Chester Monroe, and the report proved to true. It seems that Monroe and Cook had been drinking together all day, and in the evening Monroe invited Cook home to supper. While at the table Mrs. Monroe rose to pour more tea into Cook's cup, whereupon he took hold of her, at the same time telling her he did not want any more tea (some say he made free with her), when Monroe, who was crazed with liquor, arose and ordered Cook to take his hands of his wife or he would shoot him. Mrs. Monroe affrighted at the threat which came from her husband, ran out of the house to call in some of the neighbors to quiet the two men, who at that time were very angry; but before she had reached the other side of the street the fatal deed had been accomplished, and Thos. Cook, the murdered man, fell out of the front door, having been shot through the heart by Monroe.

An inquest was held by the coroner, at which the jury rendered a verdict of manslaughter. The prisoner was conveyed to Barrie to await his trial at the Assizes.

Credit Valley Railway.

The following is an explanation of the Credit Valley Railroad difficulty in Toronto, in a nut shell:—The Credit Valley Railway is meeting with strenuous opposition from the Grand Trunk and Northern Railway Companies in their endeavors to enter the esplanade at Toronto. The Esplanade, it seems, belongs to the city, and these companies are mere squatters, but having possession, they seem determined to monopolise the right of laying down tracks. The Credit Valley is desirous of having an independent track, while the other two railways wish to allow it the use of theirs for a consideration. The matter has been referred to the Privy Council which met last Thursday and after going into the preliminaries adjourned for two weeks, in order to give the companies an opportunity to effect a settlement. The C. V. R. has rights as well as the other companies, and their rights should be respected.

Murdered in Bed.

St. Louis, Mo., June 29.—On Friday morning Mrs. Agnes Dieckmann was murdered in her bed at Bluffbridge, being shot in the head. Her husband went to market early, leaving her in bed, and Joseph Stockli, a neighbor who had been helping him at the house. Three hours later Mrs. Dieckmann's brother Fred, came to the house, and found Stockli and a negro named Lyle there.

Not finding his sister, Fred, accompanied by Stockli, went to her room, where she was discovered lifeless in bed, saturated with blood. The affairs has caused great excitement. Dieckmann, when he returned home expressed the belief that Stockli had committed the murder. The latter was arrested. Dieckmann was also arrested. Mrs' Dieckman's infant, a year old, was found nearly smothered with its murdered mother. The deepest mystery surrounds the whole affair.

Presentation to Hon. J.C. Currie.

The Reformers of Welland County are starting a movement to give a testimonial to Mr. Currie, late M. P. P. for that County, and formerly a member of the Legislative Council of old Canada. The Berlin News, a Conservative journal says: "We know Mr. Currie intimately, and notwithstanding the fact that through financial pressure he has got himself into trouble and humiliation, we believe firmly, with a leading Conservative paper in St. Catharines, that he never prostituted the confidence of his party for personal gain. We know of numerous instances in which he might have stepped into lucrative offices and be comfortable for life, but he struggled on with a heavy debt on his shoulders, said debt having been incurred many years ago by endorsing for supposed friends. Mr. Currie did what few public men in this country would do. He was opposed to the principle of life membership in the Senate, and proved his honesty by resigning his position in that honorable body.

The Midland Railway.

(From the Guide.)

We are glad to observe what appears to be the dawn of an era of prosperity for the Midland Railway. The line is now complete from Port Hope to Midland, thanks to the indomitable energy of the President, Mr. Cox, and the contractors for the extension, Messrs. Dickson & Gibson, of Port Union. A pooling arrangement with the Whitby, Lindsay & Port Perry lines put an end to a possibly disastrous competition, and a newly arranged plan of close through connection with the Grand Trunk, gives promise of increased passenger traffic. The Company is relieved from any immediate financial embarrassment and is in such a position as to be able to effect certain improvements, that will facilitate traffic and conduce to an increase of freights.

The completion of the line to Midland is an event, the importance of which can hardly be overestimated. Midland Bay offers not only one of the best harbors on the Lakes, but perhaps the very best. It is said, in fact, to rank among the great harbors of the world. It is capacious yet perfectly land-locked; safe, yet easy of access; deep enough for the largest vessels, and yet contains the best of anchorage. Its importance is still further enhanced by the fact that nearly all the harbors of the Georgian Bay are unsatisfactory, and mariners show an inclination to avoid them. Easy communication is thus opened up with an extensive lumbering district, beyond that previously within the scope of the Railway. The mills at Midland alone have a capacity of nearly 30,000,000 feet, Mr. W. H. Cook's mill alone producing at least 18,000,000 feet in the season. There are large numbers of mills about this portion of the Georgian Bay and within a short sail of Midland such as those of the following places: Parry Sound, Byng Inlet, Penetanguishene, Sturgeon Bay, Wye River, Hog Bay, etc., all of which combined produce annually well on to 150,000,000 feet. A large portion of this must eventually find its way over the Midland as the most direct route to many parts of Ontario and the United States, and much of this will be in addition to what has been heretofore transported over this line.

This will give the reader a general idea of the vast extent of the lumber trade that is in store for the road, more especially, when the business at some future day is relieved from the somewhat depressed state in which it now is; and this is leaving out of account the trade in square timber, which may yet also assume very considerable proportions by this route. There is, however, another very important consideration in connection with this route to which we desire to more particularly to draw attention, and that is the facilities it offers to the through grain trade. A writer in the Montreal Gazette, a short time since, showed most conclusively that grain could be carried from Chicago to Midland by water, transhipped there and taken thence by rail via the Midland and G. T. R. to Montreal fully as cheaply and with much greater despatch than by the all water route. Now, this being the case, how to prevent the same thing being done in the future transport of grain from Manitoba and the Northwest! The completion of the Pacific Railway between Thunder Bay and Selkirk on the Red River, will bring Manitoba within 400 miles of Lake Superior by rail, and it is by that route, as soon as completed, that the principal part of the surplus grain of the Canadian Northwest will find its way out. Wheat can be carried on that route from Selkirk to Fort William for six cents per bushel at the outside and four cents more will carry it to Midland and pay for its transhipment. Thence to Montreal by Midland and G. T. R. will probably cost another six cents so that at the outside rates the cost of transporting a bushel of grain from Manitoba to tidewater will not be more than sixteen cents. This is, doubtless, the cheapest route that will be available for many years, as it is the shortest. It is considerably shorter than any of the existing mixed rail and water routes and is more than 500 miles shorter than the all-rail route. If this route were once well established, with a good line of steamers, it would soon become a popular one for passenger travel during the summer months; and the return freightage would gradually increase to such an extent as to materially lessen the cost of providing for down freight.

Another very considerable source of revenue to the Midland is that to be derived from the pleasure-seeking community. There is, perhaps, no line in Canada that, in proportion to its length, offers so many attractions to tourists; and when the present depression throughout Canada and the States shall have passed away and the numbers of this class shall have increased again to their former dimensions and beyond, this line ought to come in for a very considerable share of their patronage. But independently of those from a distance who come to enjoy the advantages and attractions of the tour the people living along the line itself would do well to avail themselves of these opportunities for enjoyment that he almost at their doors, and which many less favorably situated are compelled to seek at a considerable outlay of time and money.

We might say, before closing, that the position the road occupies to-day and the prospects that lie before it are in no small degree due to the energy and efficiency of its officers, both present and past. Mr. Hugel fought earnestly to overcome difficulties that seemed insurmountable, and everybody agrees, and the facts all go to show, that Mr. Cox, since his acceptance of the position of President, has been the right man in the right place. He has able and indefatigable assistants in Mr. Taylor, as Superintendent, and Mr. White, as General Traffic Agent, and we trust that the near future will show that the efforts of all who have had connection with the road in its darker days have not been in vain.

Fenelon Falls.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—On the afternoon of Saturday last an accident happened in Grenee & Ellis's mill, in this village, by which a French Canadian named Fabien Denis lost his life. The chain which draws the logs from the water to the mill having broken, the machinery connected with it was stopped, and Mr. Armstrong, the foreman, directed Denis to hold a wheel in the lower storey, while he (Armstrong) went upstairs and repaired the chain. The better to resist any motion which the handling of the chain might impart to the wheel, Denis passed his arm through the latter and grasping a post which stood close to it, and was in this position when the foreman, having done the few minutes' work required, seized the lever and put the machinery in motion. The unfortunate man below,—who must either have received insufficient instructions or have misunderstood them,—when he felt the wheel begin to turn, thought it was the weight of the chain which caused it to do so, and, instead of letting go, clung to it with all his strength and the result was that the bone of his arm was broken and the flesh fearfully lacerated between the wheel and the post above mentioned. When liberated he was carried to the boarding house and placed under the care of Dr. Wilson, who was afterwards joined by the other medical men of the village, and all were of opinion that amputation could not be resorted to and that the case was almost hopeless, which proved to be true, for the injured man died on Sunday afternoon, although everything possible was done for him. He was about 28 years of age and came from near Montreal, where he had a wife and two children, whom he had written to a short time ago, to come to him. In consequence of reports that the foreman was in some measure responsible for Denis's death, Coroner Bryson resolved, we think very properly, to institute an inquiry into the circumstances of the accident, and held an inquest on Monday morning at the boarding house. Only four witnesses were examined, whose evidence went to show that the deceased came to his death by accident attaching no blame to any one.—Gazette.

—Expressly for Dairy Use.—

It is packed in pure white linen bags of three sizes,—56 lbs, 112 lbs, and 56 lbs. (The bags are all of a superior quality of linen and suitable for towelling or other domestic uses.) It is said by persons of wide experience that one cause of inferiority in quality of butter and other dairy products has been the use of common grades of Salt; and the difference in cost is slight when compared with the difference in quality. If dairymen and others will consider that in manufacturing, only 2½ lbs of salt are required to make 100 lbs of cheese, and only 1 oz. of salt to make 1 lb. butter, they will recognize of how small importance must be the first cost of one of the most important ingredients in the manufacture of all dairy products.

—'Tis the resolved, with its delicate blush, that now adorns the beppet of the well young gent. He would like to convey the impression to us when placed there by some fair hand that pleasant is them to bask while yet it sparkled with the morning dew. This is not the case. It is one that he emptied across the fence and stole from a front yard on his way down town.

The Latest Swindling Operation.—The following description of the latest swindling operation is going the rounds :—A person left a plough at a farmer's with a verbal consent to use the plough, and if not liked to return it. He also left a printed advertisement of its merits. The farmer, being over it, found a note to sign in due form, stating that where a trial is made of a plough the agent must be notified within two days, and given a chance to regulate the workings of it. Many farmers will not see this notice, but will take the advertisement heedlessly, and then through failure to notify in two days will be compelled to keep the plough, inasmuch as the agent can swear that the farmer was duly notified, and the farmer cannot deny receiving it.

A Terrible Prediction.—Now that we have reached the end of the month and we have apparently escaped the dire predictions set forth below, we have become bold enough to publish a bit of prophecy akin to those of Mother Shipton. Speaking of the weather, etc., the seer in this case says :—"In June we are to have a fortnight of total darkness, followed by a fortnight of intense heat so that everybody under tweaty and over forty-five is to die of it." A waggish writer thus comments on this matter : "If the prediction turns out to be true, we shall learn some new and interesting facts with regard to those ladies whose age is supposed to be between twenty-five and thirty, but if any of these ladies should die, I shall believe that they are under twenty and not over forty-five."

Mouth Beauty and Handsome.—We understand, says the Lindsay Post, that in the course of some changes now being effected in this Catholic diocese of Kingston, Rev. Father Horan will be removed from North Emily and Eanismore to the palace, Kingston. While congratulating Father Horan on his promotion, the announcement will be received with regret by the people amongst whom he has labored since the death of Father Coyle, and to whom he has endeared himself by many amiable qualities as well as by his ability and eloquence. The parish has been divided, and Father Connolly, of Cardan, placed in charge of Emily, and Father Kealty, of Ketilby, in charge of Eanismore, the parish being too large for one. Father Fitzpatrick succeeds Father Connolly in Cardan.

Closing Concert.—The hall of the De Notre Dame Convent was filled on Friday evening last for the purpose of witnessing the entertainment given by those connected with the Convent. The weather was very warm, but the interest in the proceedings was so great that had the mercury climbed several degrees higher, the "melting feeling" would have been more than counterbalanced by the very excellent entertainment. The programme consisted of vocal and instrumental music, dialogues, etc. The address by Miss Annie Delaney was eloquently responded to by Bishop O'Brien, of Kingston, who was in town. The closing entertainments in connection with the Convent are always looked forward to, not only by the pupils and their friends, but by a large circle of well-wishers of the institution. The tableaux were exceedingly beautiful.

Colors in the Flower Bed.—Much of the beauty of a flower bed depends on such an arrangement of the colors as will secure a harmonious effect. It is very much as with a tasteful selection of colors for a lady's outfit. Some with expansive material always fail to produce a pleasing impression for want of taste and judgment as to colors; so with a flower bed. Costly plants are often got, and yet the bed does not look pretty. Among the rules to be observed are the following

1. Avoid placing rose-colored next to scarlet, orange or violet.

2. Do not place orange next to yellow, nor blue next to violet.

3. White relieves any color, but do not place it next to yellow.

4. Orange goes well with blue, and yellow with violet.

5. Rose color and purple always go well together.

Walking Grass.—An individual last Monday was in Port Hope endeavoring to obtain the use of the Drill Shed for the purpose of exhibiting the pedestrian powers of two girls and a boy, but we are happy to say, notwithstanding the wonderful feats promised, Col. Williams very properly refused to allow the use of the Shed for such a purpose, and if the authorities at other places will adopt the same measure, such exhibitions will cease for want of support. —Times.

These "go as you please" pedestrian matches are not merely tests of physical endurance; they are pitiable exhibitions of physical exhaustion. To watch the used up plodding machines towards the close of the match, hobbling round the course, is anything but an invigorating sight. It is rather a sickening display of suit-inflicted torture, and the sooner it is ruled out of the category of manly sports the better, and Col. Williams is to be commended for his act allowing the use of the Drill Shed for such sickening exhibitions as were lately given in this town.

Harper's Magazine.—The July number of Harper's Magazine is a worthy successor to the beautiful June Numbers. The social gaieties of a fashionable sea-side resort are presented in vivid colors in the leading article on Narragansett Pier. Howard Pyle's delightful and interesting gossip concerning life on the Eastern shore is concluded in this number. William H. Bidding contributes a charming article on "The Land of Barns." This Number contains the first of a series of papers covering the fifty years of American Art from 1829 to 1879, by S. G. W. Benjamin. James T. Fields contributes a heartwoven poem. There is also another Illustrated poem. The Illustrated short story in this Number is "A Romance of Rappahannock." Henry James, jr., contributes one of his very best short stories. "The Diary of a Man of Fifty," Edward Everett Hale is the author of another short story, "The Happy Island." Miss Malock's beautiful love-story, "Young Mr. Jardine," is continued. E. P. Whipple contributes a very interesting paper.

Changed Pulpits.—The Rev. Messrs. Terrance and Matthews changed pulpits on Sunday evening last.

Collegiate Institute.—The closing exercises in connection with the Collegiate Institute and Public Schools take place on Monday next.

S. White is still manufacturing the "Canghnawaga" Shoe, now so popular among those who appreciate a light, easy article for summer wear.

Ladies, if you require a really nice Kid Shoe or Buttoned Boot, call at W. J. Larmour's where an excellent assortment is now being shown at exceedingly low prices.

Strawberries.—Mr. Maxwell Hall is receiving choice lots of strawberries. Parties wishing to purchase for preserving are offered special terms. Give him a call.

Young Canadians L. C. L.—A special meeting of Young Canadians, L. O. L. will be held this Thursday evening in the Orange Hall. A full attendance is requested.

Personal.—Mr. R. J. Lee has been appointed representative of Peterborough Lodge I.O.O.F. to the Grand Lodge of Ontario, which meets in Hamilton on the second Wednesday of July.

Clearing Sale.—The week Messrs. Hackett & Shirley commence a clearing sale of their immense stock of Umbrellas and Summer Dress Goods at sweeping reductions. Call and secure some of the bargains.

Registered.—After great inconvenience and unnecessary delay, the sidewalk on George Street, opposite Mr. Graxton's property has been renewed. The sidewalk was in a very dilapidated condition and required speedier attention.

New Boat.—The Boating Club with their usual energy, have increased their stock by the addition of a new four-oared shell, built by Jewett of Newcastle. Should boating continue to prove popular, we would not be surprised if the conqueror of Hanlan should spring from our rustic suburbs.

For Manitoba.—Mr. Geo. A. Stewart and party, (eleven in number) left on Monday evening for Manitoba, where Mr. Stewart has been entrusted with the survey of a portion of the prairie province. The tickets for the party were obtained from Messrs. Wilson & Davis, who have done a large business in tickets since opening.

Drowned.—A young man named Fitzgerald, who formerly resided in Peterborough, but who was until lately living near Montreal, was drowned last week while bathing at Burnham's point, with some others. He got beyond his depth, and his companions being unable or afraid to give assistance, sank to rise no more. He was found next morning and buried in the Roman Catholic Cemetery, at the expense of the village of Ashburnham.

Carnwall Lodge Pic-Nic.—The annual excursion and pic-nic of Carnwall Temple was held last Thursday. Quite a large number attended, and, of course, enjoyed themselves, as the energetic members of this Temple are always on the alert in making their patrons feel at home. A very pleasant time was spent, both on the steamer and at Burleigh, and the party arrived home in good time well satisfied with the days pleasure.

"Truth lies in a nut-shell," and "brevity is the soul of wit." To be brief, when the shell is broken, the truth will be discovered, that, the Grand Central Hotel, on Broadway, New York, now keep on both plans, the American $2.50 or $3.00, and the European $1.00, and upwards, per day, gives more satisfaction for the same money than any other first-class house in Gotham. An elegant Restaurant, at moderate prices, is conducted by the Grand Central.

Sawdust.—It is a matter of regret that the proper authorities do not take measures to punish those who are destroying our river by allowing sawdust to fall in. The sawdust bank at the Cemetery Point does not improve the beauty or impart a more delightful fragrance to the neighboring country. Proper precautions should be taken at once to remedy the evil before it has risen to greater proportion, and by its very magnitude invite negligence through their being no available remedy.

Personal.—We see by the Prince Edward Island Patriot that Mr. E. E. Bowie, of this town, is acting as general agent for the Joseph Hall Manufacturing Company, of Oshawa, for the sale of the "Champion" at that place. Mr. Bowie is well known in this county in a similar position made many friends by his candid and straightforward dealings, and we have no doubt but that he will be found to be a reliable, trustworthy and painstaking agent on the island, and worthy of the confidence reposed to him.

How to Preserve a Bouquet.—When you receive a bouquet, sprinkle it with fresh water; then put it into a vessel containing soapsuds, which will nourish the roots, and keep the flowers as good as new. Take the bouquet out of the suds every morning, and put it in fresh water; keep it there a minute or two, then take it out and sprinkle the flowers lightly by the hand with pure water. Replace the bouquet in soapsuds, and the flowers will bloom as fresh as when gathered. The soapsuds need to be changed every third day.

Pic-Nic.—A well patronized pic-nic was held last Thursday by the Balsam Grove Temple of Otonabee. A fair number left Peterborough in the morning, which was increased by parties stationed along the river, until the large number of three hundred were gathered together on the boat, to which a palace boat had been attached for dancing. Arriving at Idyl Wild the usual time was spent in boating and promenading, after which the "Golden-Eye" returned reaching town unusually late through frequent stoppages to let off passengers. All express themselves as highly delighted with the arrangements and consequent harmony which prevailed. The officers of the lodge exerted themselves and were well rewarded by the success of the excursion.

Accident.—Holidays generally have a fair complement of accidents—Dominion Day was no exception to the rule. While driving to Mr. Haddan, placed in charge of Emily, and Father Kealty, of Ketilby, in charge of Eanismore, the parish being too large for one, Father Fitzpatrick succeeds Father Connolly in Cardan.

Wednesday Excursions.—As will be seen by advertisement, a special train will leave Lakefield every Wednesday, commencing next week at 5 p.m., for the accommodation of ex. cursion parties. On the same days the Steamer Cruiser will run excursions to Stoney Lake, Burleigh Falls, &c. Fare for the round trip, 50 cents.

Colleen Bawn.—On Friday evening last the members of the Peterborough Fire Brigade Band, assisted by local amateur talent, gave their first production of Dion Boucicault's Irish Drama, "Colleen Bawn." Through various causes they did not receive as large an attendance as was expected, but a tolerably well-filled house greeted them. The playing of all the leading characters was very good, especially worthy of mention, being Miss Reynolds, Miss Brown and Miss Martin, and Messrs. T. Kennedy and S. Henthorn, who took their respective parts in a manner not often excelled by members of travelling theatrical companies. As might be expected the first night's appearance was accompanied by a few "hitches" towards the end, but taking it all in all, the company can congratulate themselves on the manner in which they acquitted themselves throughout. To-morrow evening they give a second entertainment, when any defects that may have appeared before will be remedied. Between acts Miss Martin, whose singing met with so much applause last Friday evening, will appear in several songs. As the Band are under obligations for the purchase of some new instruments, we hope they may receive that patronage which they deserve.

DOMINION DAY.

The thirteenth anniversary of the Confederation of the British American Provinces was celebrated in a right loyal manner on Tuesday by the citizens of Peterborough. For the past decade or two of years the celebration of our national holidays has in a great measure depended upon the members of the Fire Brigade, and although the personnel of this body is continually changing, the spirit of patriotism and loyalty remains intact, and is apparently handed down as an heir-loom. This year being the first since Confederation on which the first of July was a legalized holiday, the members of the Brigade deemed it an opportune occasion for a grand celebration, and set to work with energy and willingness to do honor to the birthday of our young nation. In their efforts they were liberally assisted by the citizens, who at all times take a pride in the success of the Firemen's demonstrations.

From an early hour the streets were alive with those bent on doing justice to the day, and as the morning advanced the principal streets of the town were thronged with pleasure-seekers from the town and adjacent vicinity. At 9.15 a.m. the Lindsay Firemen were expected to arrive but the deputation appointed to meet them at the station found on the arrival of the train but nine members had responded to the invitation,—the remainder of the Brigade "backing out" at the last moment. Those who arrived were escorted to the Rink for breakfast.

At 10.30 the members of the Ashburnham Fire Company and the Peterborough Brigade proceeded to the wharf to receive the Cobourg Brigade and party who arrived shortly after 11 o'clock. After a short delay the several companies were formed in procession and marched to the Skating Rink, where a sumptuous spread had been prepared for them. The rink was handsomely decorated with banting, mottoes and evergreens, and the tables with bouquets of flowers. After ample justice had been done to the eatables the procession was reformed and marched along Hunter, Water and Murray streets, meeting the Indians and Physiogs, who took up their positions, when the procession of the day was formed in the following order :—

Union Jack.
Chiefs of Fire Departments.
Fountain Hose Band.
Fountain Hose Company and Reel.
Ever Ready Hose Company and Reel.
Victory Hook and Ladder Company
Peterborough Fire Brigade Band.
Ashburnham Fire Company.
Protection Hose Company.
Protection Hook and Ladder Company.
Herr Paul Brunner, Generalissimo of Physiogs, and Aid-de-Camps.
Knights of the Red Cross, in Armour.
Indians.
Grand Army of Physiogs.

After a short march through the principal streets the procession returned to the Drill Shed and Agricultural Grounds, where the afternoon sports took place. The line of march was crowded with spectators and the appearance of the firemen and especially the handsome Reels of the Cobourg Companies were much admired. The physiogs were, however, in numbers not nearly up to those of former years, being confined to seven conveyances. Lack of finances, we are informed, was principally the cause of the meagre display made. Besides, the attention which the Brigade found it necessary to devote to the proper reception of their visitors, prevented them from undertaking this part of the day's proceedings on as extensive a scale as formerly.

THE AFTERNOON PROGRAMME.

The first event on the programme was the

which took place in the drill shed. Entries to the number of eight were made, and the youthful aspirants for honors were arranged on a bench on the platform. Messrs. W. Helm, Chas. Robinson and John Bird were chosen as judges, and immediately proceeded with the air and manner of perfect connoisseurs to perform their onerous duties. To observe the profound gravity with which they inspected the subjects before them, was refreshing indeed, and the lucid manner in which they discussed the pros and cons of each showed them to be experts of the "first water." It was interesting to note the varying expressions that wrought the maternal face as the judges passed their consideration of the offspring. The Judges, after due meditation, awarded prizes as follows :—For babies under two years and 18 months, 1st, Everitt Hall; 2nd, George Troate. Under one year, 1st, John James Cocks; 2nd, George Earle.

THE TRICK PONEY.

After the conclusion of the baby show, Mr Harry Winch made an exhibition of his trained poney, "Little Tommy." The tricks which he was made to perform, were surprising, and received the repeated applause of the audience.

THE ATHLETIC SPORTS

were next proceeded with on the ground adjoining the drill shed, under the direction of Col. Poole, Mr. A. D. Braithwaite and Mr. A. McNeil. The following is a list of the prizes taken in the various events :—

HITCH AND KICK,—1st, S. Cairns; 2nd, H. Ashe. Height of Kick, 7 feet 8½ inches.

100 YARDS RACE.—1st, J. Kee; 2nd, J. Billington.

HOP, STEP AND JUMP.—1st, Geo. Mather; 2nd, J. Billington.

MILE RACE.—1st, J. Sheabey; 2nd, W. Bird.

BOY'S HANDICAP RACE.—1st, M. Orde; 2nd, J. McKissock.

RUNNING JUMP.—1st, Geo. Mathers; 2nd, J. Billington.

MILE WALKING MATCH.—1st, J. Lynch; 2nd, D. Hartley.

PUTTING HEAVY STONE.—1st, J. Garvey; 2nd, Geo. Mather.

The athletic sports concluded the programme for the afternoon.

IN THE EVENING

the drill shed was again densely crowded with spectators. After the distribution of the prizes won at the various contests in the afternoon, an exhibition of clog dancing was given. Music was furnished for the dancers from a violin and harp, and the trippers of "the light fantastic" acquitted themselves in good form, as was evidenced by the outbursts of applause that frequently greeted them. Next came an acrobatic and gymnastic performance by local athletes. Some excellent work on the horizontal bar was performed, and the tumbling was of more than ordinary merit.

TORCHLIGHT PROCESSION.

At 8.15 a torch light procession was formed at the Drill Shed and marched along George, Hunter, Aylmer and Simcoe Sts. to the Market Square, where preparations had been made for a display of Fireworks. A large number of transparencies were borne in the procession, during the progress of which myriads of rockets were sent off, presenting a very brilliant and pleasing appearance.

DISPLAY OF FIREWORDS.

This display was undoubtedly the grandest that has ever been witnessed in Peterborough, being conducted by Prof. A. L. Dea, of Hamilton. The market square and all other places in the vicinity that commanded a view of the display was densely crowded with spectators, and it is estimated that not less than between fourjor five thousand were present.

DEPARTURE OF VISITORS.

A few of the visitors left by the afternoon boat, but the larger portion waited till Wednesday morning. All appeared well satisfied with their visit and were loud in their praise of the manner in which the Peterborough men had treated them.

CRICKET.

Our cricketers, no doubt roused by the general tone of admiration and unwilling to detract from the day's triumph were crowned with success, and are determined once again to chamber up the encyclopedia of victory. The match was between a strong and well-practised eleven of Trinity College School, Port Hope, and the Peterborough Cricket Club. On the visitors taking the bat the modest score of 164 was put together, Haighton, Strathy, Allen and Jones contributing their fair quotas. The home team in the first innings were not so successful. The underhand bowling of Wood seemed to balk their efforts, compelling them to retire generally with small scores. Mr. Kirchoffer contributed 25 (not out) in splendid style, and was loudly cheered. In the second innings Trinity did not bat in so good form—only making 25 runs, after which the Peterborough eleven entering quickly pat together the handsome score of 81 with three wickets to spare. Rutherford, Hartley and Kirchoffer made double figures. Hartley especially distinguishing himself with 28 neat outs. The fielding on both sides was well up to the average. The following will give a connected view of the score :—

COMPLIMENTARY SOCIAL.

On Friday evening last the members and friends of the Methodist Church met in the school room of the George-street Methodist Church, on the occasion of the farewell of the Rev. Mr. Wallace, who is departing to a charge in Toronto. A large number were present, showing their high estimation and appreciation of Mr. Wallace, who, during his short sojourn here, has evidently made many friends. The first part of the evening was spent in friendly chatting, and the cordial relations of acquaintanceship of the visitors and members were no doubt considerably improved. A splendid lunch had been prepared by the ladies, who are to be complimented on the tastefulness and good order with which the proceedings were carried out. The pleasure of the entertainment was increased by admirable selections from the choir, and by a duet from Mrs. Chambers and Mr. Davis, entitled "What are the Wild Waves Saying?" The Rev. Messrs. Bell, Torrance, Muldhern, Roberts and Harper were present to pay a tribute to their fellow-worker and friend. On calling the meeting to order Mr. Harper, in a few neat and appropriate remarks, dwelt on the departure of their friend, wishing him much success in his new sphere of labor. Mr. T. W. Robinson on behalf of the Quarterly Board then presented the following address :—

To the Rev. F. H. Wallace, M.A., B.D.:—

REVEREND AND DEAR SIR,—The Methodist Church of Peterborough, through its Official Board, on the eve of your departure for a new field of labour, would give expression to the feelings of high esteem in which you are held by the members and adherents of the Church.

Your kind, courteous, and Christian deportment; your faithful labours in the discharge of your pastoral duties; your clear, scholarly, and pleasing pulpit services, have secured for you the respect of all, and endeared you to those who have had the best opportunity of appreciating your character and abilities.

While submitting to the necessity which deprives us of your continued ministry at the present, it is to be hoped that at some future day the turn of events may bring around again that relationship of pastor and people which has so happily existed for the last year.

We hope for you, in your new field of labour, all that success which the heart of the faithful pastor yearns for, and for yourself and Mrs. Wallace, that peace which God has promised to all who love and fear Him.

On behalf of the Quarterly Board,
Yours in Church fellowship,
E. B. HARPER, Chairman,
T. W. ROBINSON, Rec. Steward.

The Rev. Mr. ROBERTS, on behalf of the Ministerial Association, also presented the following resolution :—

"In consequence of the presidential remova from our community of the Rev. Mr. Wallace, B.D., to another sphere of labour in the vineyard of our common Lord and Master, we the members of the Peterborough Ministerial Association wishing to give expression to our views and feelings in regard to our beloved brother, have cordially and unanimously passed and recorded the following resolution :—

Resolved,—That we regard Brother Wallace as a scholarly man, a devoted and consistent Christian, and a worthy and faithful minister of Jesus Christ; that we deeply regret to part with him as a brother minister with whom our intercourse has been most pleasant and edifying, and while the Master has assigned him another field of labour, we earnestly pray that He may abundantly prosper him in his future work; and, that he and his excellent wife may enjoy every needful blessing from the God of all peace. Our recollections of our beloved brother will always be most pleasant, and if in the good providence of the great Head of the Church we ever meet to labour together again in any part of the vineyard, it will be a pleasant renewal of brotherly love and if not, we hope, through divine grace to meet above, where our joy will be unmixed and parting for ever unknown."

Rev. Mr. WALLACE gracefully acknowledged the addresses, and in an elegant and fitting speech, spoke of the cordial relations which had existed between himself and congregation; of the pleasure his ministry among them had afforded, and thanked his many friends for their kind wishes on behalf of himself and wife.

The meeting broke up about half-past ten, all congratulating themselves on their presence at so happy and entertaining a meeting.

FAREWELL SERMON.

On Sabbath evening last the Rev. Mr. Wallace preached the concluding sermon of his pastorate here, prior to Peterborough, in the George Street Church. The rev. gentleman took for the text of his discourse the 1st verse of the 133rd, Psalm,—"Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!" He began by pointing out the beauty of the whole Psalm, and the applicability of the text not only to the Church, but also to the operation of all other institutions. The sermon throughout was an earnest appeal for more unity of action and harmony between members of the same Church, as well as between those of different denominations. We regret that an extra amount of matter for to-day's issue prohibits our giving a full report of the discourse. The congregation was one of the largest that has gathered for a considerable time past.

Off the Line.

We need not wait till the long, lank hair
Hangs white 'round the furrowed brow,
Or falls from its place as, in Autumn time,
Leaves drop from the sadness bough;
We need not wait till the wrinkles
Are well-kissed leaf by leaf,
To know the grief of these joyless days,
When the heart [illegible] fails:

For oft in the morn of joyous youth,
When its hopes are warm and bright,
The breezes blow, and the storm-clouds come,
And day is wrapped in night;
And the fondest heart chills with the drops of grief
Which fall on life's darkened plain,
And eager looks to the parting clouds.—
But the clouds succeed the rain!

Ah, brother! beneath a lowering sky
Thou walkest in sadness now;
A wreath of roses, like a crown of thorns,
Encircles thy fevered brow.
But think,—and the way will seem less dark,
And the cares will cause less pain,—
Oh! think of the sunny field above,
Where there are no clouds or rain!

A Matrimonial Romance.

May with December.

The sequel to an interesting matrimonial romance has come to light at Burlington village, near Hamilton. The gentleman is Thos. Burke, now 87 years of age, and one of the pioneers of the Cobourg district. He is wealthy, and has been living in retirement for a number of years. By his first wife, who died many years ago, he had a round dozen of children, all of whom are now grown up, and in not a few instances have large families of their own, as in the case of the Widow Wright, of Hall's Corners, who is a daughter of his, and whose family numbers fourteen. He has no fewer than four sons-in-law in the ministry. Mr. Burke married his second wife at Cobourg, some fifteen or twenty years ago, but the union appeared not to have been a very congenial one, the young wife and her elderly husband and step-children not living on the most amicable terms. Whilst living at Rice Lake, some eleven years ago, the quarrel reached a crisis, and a separation took place.

Though far beyond the allotted three-score and ten, the old gentleman has not forgotten how to love, and it is therefore not remarkable that his abilities to court were remarkably good. A short time ago, while visiting at the residence of one of his clerical sons-in-law (Rev. Mr. Laird, a Methodist minister in Whitby) Mr. Burke looked upon the pretty, rosy cheeked, winsome serving maid, and looked upon her with favor. It was the old story. The maiden responded. Her heart went forth towards the old man. She loved him—whether as a father or a suitor deponent saith not. It was enough for the gay Lothario that she responded to his ardency. Soon everything was arranged, and the day was fixed when the twain should become one flesh. Such a romantic union required a romantic spot for its consummation, and what more romantic spot than Burlington village? The two arrived there by train one day last week, and were quietly married.

THE FINAL DENOUEMENT VERY UNPLEASANT.

On Sunday the steamboat from Cobourg brought in an indignant wife to meet a recreant husband. She reported herself at police headquarters and made enquiries concerning one Thomas Bourke, whom she alleged had forsaken her some years ago and subsequently married a young girl from Whitby. The woman was referred to His Worship the Police Magistrate, and a warrant was sworn out against Bourke, which in the afternoon was executed by Detective Rousseaux. The officer proceeded to Mr. B's lodging house on Wellington street, and made enquiries concerning his man. A petite damsel appeared at the door and said that Mr. Bourke was out for a walk. 'John' wouldn't take this for an answer, and replied that he would investigate the premises, and discovered the gallant gentleman (aged eighty-six years) reclining on a sofa. When informed that he was charged with bigamy and that it was his (the officer's) painful duty to arrest him, Bourke religiously remarked that such matters of detail ought to be deferred until Monday. Night found him in the cells, and the young wife (which, as they say in legal parlance, we will number two) passed a sleepless night thinking over the changes in store for the human race. She had only been three weeks married to Bourke before the avenger followed on her path, in the shape of Mrs. Bourke No. 1, and now all were thrown into the direst trouble. At the Police Court on Monday Mr. Bourke knowingly winked at the counsel retained by his first wife (Mr. F. E. Kilvert) and, as our reporter attempted an interview with him, begged of the gentleman above named for the sake of old association not to be too hard upon him. In answer to questions put by our representative Bourke declared that he had never spent a happy moment with his first wife; that she had tried her utmost to get rid of him by poison, and that from the first day he met her until the hour that he parted, his hand was continually in his pocket paying for her extravagances. Before he married her, he said, she was up to her neck in debt, and every storekeeper for twenty miles round had accommodated her on his account after the consummation of the sacred vow. The old man told his story without any exhibition of acrimony, and when his bride-wife was referred to his eyes brightened and he remarked, 'She's an angel.'

The reporter then was bold enough to seek an interview with Mrs. Bourke No. 1, a comely looking person dressed in mourning. On being interrogated she replied that she was so nervous as I so caused to anything of this sort that she really didn't know what to say and would much rather the newspapers would let her alone entirely. She referred deprecatingly to the reports published in the morning press, and said that she didn't know how any party of gentlemen could demean themselves by writing such nonsense as appeared concerning herself. She informed our reporter that on the 22nd of July, 1860, she married Bourke, at Cobourg, the Rev. Mr. Jones performing the nuptials. Her maiden name was M. A White. On the 22nd of November (four or five years ago, she couldn't tell which) she left the old man or he left her, and since that period she has been busily engaged in paddling her own canoe. In the meantime, no matter what caused the separation, Bourke never provided for nor, and on hearing that he had transgressed the law by marrying another wife, she felt it to be her duty to come forward and prosecute.

The young wife, it was understood, was hovering around the police office to-day, looking disconsolate enough, and when she understood that her gay 'lovyer' was remanded until Wednesday her lip quivered and she sought the seclusion of the barding-house where a portion of her honeymoon had been spent. Her name is Eliza Moore, a servant girl hailing from Whitby. Before he ever saw the two women mentioned in this article Mr. Bourke was married to a respectable lady, by whom he had children that would have been a credit to a more moderate-minded man.

Mr. Bourke has been committed to Cobourg goal to take his trial for bigamy.

Dulness of the Pulpit.

The average pulpit is not dull and stupid. There is no profession in the world which meets the demand made upon it so fully and satisfactorily as the Protestant ministry. There is no profession on which such unceasing demands are made, and to hold a preacher responsible for all the drowsiness and inattention of his hearers is simply outrageous. More people are put to sleep in church by eating too much than by dull preaching; more people are put to sleep in church by bad air than by dull preaching, and bad air is sometimes the cause of heaviness in the preacher. Many people are listless and inattentive because they don't want to hear; they don't love the truth which is spoken, and hear as little of it as they can; yet foolishness hold the preacher responsible for that, when he isn't responsible for it at all, nor is he responsible for not preaching in such a way that such persons will hear. I saw a man asleep once in a church while its honored pastor was preaching the grandest sermon I ever heard; but I do not believe the preacher was to blame for the man's going to sleep.

Summer Pruning.

Combatting some Rooted Opinions.

The traditional time for pruning orchards is winter, or at any rate just as spring is about to open, and the current notion is that it hurts a tree to cut off its branches and shoots during the growing season. Some eminent horticulturists warmly advocate winter pruning, and one takes the ground that winter pruning strengthens while summer pruning weakens trees. In spite, however, of tough old traditions, and wise authorities, the opinion is gaining ground that summer is the best time for this work. The main argument in favor of this innovation upon established rules, is that the wounds made by pruning heal over much more quickly if made in summer, than they do if made in winter. A stout branch of two inches diameter has been taken off at midsummer, and the new bark has well nigh covered the wound in a couple of years. A similar operation in winter has been found to take several years to heal, and in not a few cases decay has resulted instead of the healing process. So well is this known that the advocates of winter pruning prescribe shellac, or some other composition, as an artificial skin to protect the wound until nature's time shall arrive to mend up the cut.

In a well-kept orchard it ought never, or rarely, to be necessary to amputate large limbs. Such an operation is a shock to the vitality of a tree similar to that experienced by the human body when the limb is taken off by surgical operation. It is a heavy tax on the vitality of a tree to deprive it of a large limb, and so far as practicable it should be avoided. In the case of neglected orchards, there is a temptation often to cut away large limbs to secure shapeliness. But vigor is more important than symmetry, and we strongly advise the utmost caution in this matter. Some cut and slash away at trees as though they did not consider there was any living principle that could be jeopardized. Also for the orchard that falls into such hands!

The moderate pruning that is needed by a tree properly looked after can be done at midsummer with perfect safety, and with a certainty of quick repair by the vital forces then most energetically at work. The only real argument in favor of winter pruning is that there is more leisure to attend to it then. There is a degree of force in this consideration, for the growing season is also the working season, and a multiplicity of jobs is always pressing at midsummer. Still it is advisable to make time for this work.

In addition to the quick healing of wounds inflicted by pruning, it is an important consideration, that during the growing season it is easier to note what branches or shoots may be dead, dying, or feeble, and to thin out accordingly. It is a weighty argument for midsummer pruning that all intelligent orchardists who have been led to try it, unhesitatingly commend the practice. No one, so far as we know, who has given the new method a fair trial, is prepared to say 'the old is better.'

There is one style of pruning, and a very important one, which can only be done in the growing season. It is pinching off the terminal shoots, often called 'thumb pruning. For young trees this is an excellent plan, both to regulate the shape and to hasten fruit-bearing. The most successful cultivators of dwarf orchards depend almost wholly on this mode of pruning. Shoots that are too rampant are easily kept back by this process, while the check given to the flow of sap tends to the formation of fruit buds.

Horse Education.

Any person who has handled horses to even a very limited extent has noticed that there is a good deal of what may be termed human nature about them; that is, a susceptibility to improve by education. In fact, all domestic animals possess this power in a certain degree, but the horse is more than commonly endowed in this respect. If left to himself, however, or but indifferently taught when young, the horse, like the neglected boy, will grow up with an uncouth carriage, and though a serviceable drudge, will fail to give pleasure to those who may have the management of him. As soon as the colt is weaned, he should have good feed, and be handled every day if possible; he should be coaxed rather than made by force to do anything. Never use a switch or end of a halter strap. Be firm, but not overbearing; it will be found better to overlook the fault than to attempt to correct it and fail. Never lose your temper, for the moment you do so, you at the same time lose the advantage you should always have over him. In handling a colt remember that you are forming the future horse, and care now taken either in his appearance or character is by no means lost. By the time he is a year old, he should allow you to place light articles on his back without any resistance, and should be taught not to be afraid of straps hanging loose either about the body or heels. This education is best done in the winter, and should be repeated until perfectly broken, and when harnessed for the first time he will quietly permit himself to be driven alongside of a quiet horse. During the operation of halter-breaking, great care should be taken to always make him walk fast. Fast walking (the best gait of a horse) should be part of his education, and he will never forget it in his after life. We have had a wide experience with colts, and have yet to find one which could not be made a good walker if properly trained when young; but this is a fast age, and walking is too slow to keep up with it.

Algoma's Great Wheat Fields.

It is now a well established fact that a superior quality of wheat is produced from the lands in that district, which has, apparently, greatly astonished those who so strongly advocated emigration to the plains of Manitoba as being the future wheat-field of the world. "Carrying coals to Newcastle" has hitherto been a term expressive of the greatest absurdity, but in the future it may be substituted by that of carrying wheat to Algoma, for no greater absurdity can be practiced than that which is now being carried on by the farmers of Ontario, who are now rushing in thousands to the distant province of Manitoba, and are leaving behind them, and within 200 miles of Toronto, thousands,—yea millions of acres of the best wheat-bearing land in the Dominion. We are all aware of the fact that it is not popular to advance the settlement of Algoma. In these days of utilizing water stretches, it is thought best to have a thousand miles of unsettled country between the two Provinces, as it leaves room for future speculation and that sort of thing, but, if the people of Ontario are desirous of finding wheat-producing land, at a very low price and within easy reach of home markets, we would direct their attention to the vast stretch of good land to be found a little inland from the shores of Georgian Bay. Wherever the cultivation of wheat has been tried in this district it has invariably proven successful, and no better land can be found than is to be had on the forbidding-looking shore north of Georgian Bay, between Spanish River and Sault Ste. Marie.

Hanlan and Courtney.

The Buffalo Courier of the 19th instant, has the following:—"Hanlan's easy victory over the best oarsmen on the other side of the Atlantic has effectually laid at rest the suspicion that his race with Courtney was sold by the latter. It is possible that under favorable conditions the Union Springs sculler might defeat the Canadian champion, but that the former was no match for his formidable opponent on the Lachine course is now admitted on all hands. It is not only possible but probable that Courtney himself could duplicate in England the brilliant successes of his rival, and his friends are likely to insist that he shall make the attempt. If there is any pluck in him, he must already have repeated his resolution never to row another race. After defeating the English scullers he might return prepared and encouraged for another contest with the Canadian. Now, if ever, is the time to put forth an effort to recover his lost laurels.

Over the Falls.

Mr. and Mrs. Roland, of Paris, France, late arrivals at the Falls, on a trip round the world, visited the Three Sister Islands, Saturday morning. When on the second island, the husband's attention became engaged in an opposite direction, while his wife went to the edge of the rapids to get a drink, in doing which she slipped and fell into the water. She was out of reach before he discovered her danger, and was carried over the Horse-Shoe Falls.

Dandling the Rag Baby.

(From the Lindsay Post.)

The wiseacres of the Middlesex County Council dandled the "rag baby" a little last week by passing a resolution recommending the Dominion Government "to cause a sufficient amount of Dominion notes to be issued to meet all its internal obligations, and make such notes a legal tender for all debts, public and private, except Customs dues." This money would be good enough then to pay the workingman, but not good enough for the Government. Why?

Weak Eyes.

A very simple remedy for weak eyes is recommended by a physician as follows:—Get an ounce of elder flowers and steep in one gill of water—they must be steeped in bright tin or earthen-ware; strain well, and then add three drops of laudanum; bottle it tight, and keep in a cool place, then use it as a wash, letting some of it get into the eyes. Follow this, and relief is certain. If the eyes are painful or much sorer, make small soft compresses, wet in the mixture, and bind over the eyes at night. If the eyes are badly inflamed use it freely; and a tea made of elder flowers and drank would help to cleanse the blood. Pure rock salt and water will strengthen your eyes if you bathe them daily in it.

Toronto Industrial Exhibition.

Great Preparations Being Made for it.

The Industrial Exhibition Association of Toronto announce that their first exhibition will open on the 1st of September next and close on the 19th—three weeks; $30,000 are offered in prizes for live stock and manufactures generally. Agriculturists and manufacturers of the Province are taking a lively interest in the exhibition, and from present indications it will be the largest that has ever been held in Canada. The lumbermen of Canada intend making a special exhibit, and a display of Manitoba and the Northwest will also be made. Many new features are introduced, and the arrangements being made by the Association are on the most extensive scale.

To Prevent Chimneys from Taking Fire.

It is always a source of dread when a chimney takes fire, and although it is not often that roofs ignite from this cause, yet they sometimes do. Therefore it is well to guard against all possible danger from this source. The following prescription is said to be effectual in preventing chimney's from taking fire: "In building a chimney put a quantity of salt into the mortar with which the intercourses of brick are to be laid. The effect will be that there will never be any accumulation of soot in that chimney. The philosophy is thus stated: The salt in the portion of mortar which is exposed absorbs moisture from the atmosphere every damp day. The soot thus becoming damp, falls down in the fireplace."

A Playing Revenge.

He was a dentist, and she the daughter of wealthy parents, accomplished and irresistible from all that luxury, culture and travel in foreign climes confer. He was treating a tender flaw in two or three of her brilliant and pearly teeth, and when he had her mouth filled with wax and her lovely arms pinioned fast in the chair lest she might struggle when the cruel steel struck suddenly on a delicate nerve, she looked so sweet and tempting that a sudden temptation overcame him and he stopped suddenly and imprinted three kisses on her lovely lips. Then he completed his work and in due time sent in his bill. The young lady is a philosopher as well as syren, and was prepared to settle on short notice. She too had a bill to render which does ample credit to the woman's wit. Here is his bill:

Miss——, to Dr.——, Dr.
To filling teeth $14
And here is hers:
Dr.——, to Miss——.
To three kisses $15

He paid the difference very cheerfully, but says that family obligations will forbid the indulgence of a luxury so expensive hereafter.

NOTE—Eclectric—Selected and Electrised

Mitchell's Hellandona Improved India Rubber Porous Plaster.

There never has been a time when the healing of so many different diseases has been created by outward application as the present. It is an undisputed fact that over half of the entire population of the globe resort to the use of ordinary plasters.

The principal ingredients used in making these Plasters are Gum Olibanum—or better known as the Frankincense of the Bible—Rubber, and Burgundy Pitch which, when scientifically compounded, is full of electricity and when combined with the pure medicinal gums, is found to be one greatest healing medicine ever brought before the human race.

They are acknowledged by all who have used them to act quicker than any other Plasters they ever before tried, and that one of these Plasters will do more real service than a hundred of the ordinary kind. All other Plasters are slow of action, and require to be worn continually to effect a cure; but with them it is entirely different; the instant one is applied the patient will feel its effect.

They possess all the soothing, warming supporting and strengthening qualities of all other Plasters. Many who have been relieved of RHEUMATISM, TIC DOLOREUX, and various other pains in the KIDNEYS, BREAST or SIDE, and believe it is solely done by the electrical qualities which the Porous Plasters contain, and which is imparted to the system, thus restoring them to a healthy condition.

They are very soft and pliable, still very strong, and a sure cure for WEAK BACKS PAINS IN THE SIDE AND BREAST, and are invaluable to those who have a COLD of long standing, and often prevents CONSUMPTION. Some even tell us they believe they were entirely cured by the use of them of a long dusted Consumption.

Is adapted to all the old fashioned Round, Tub or Crock Churns. It will churn and gather the butter in from 4 to 10 minutes, and turn out 10 per cent more butter than anything of the kind in use. Each section or flange is an Air Chamber, which forces a large volume of atmosphere down into the milk or cream at each stroke, the cream or milk at the same time is forced over upward of four hundred inches of surface, and is thrown with such great velocity square against the walls of the churn that is rapidly breaks the globules and frees the butter with a few strokes. It is perfectly simple and easily constructed,—no machinery about it to get out of order.

Grand Medal and Diploma at the Centennial, Philadelphia; Grand Medal at the Universal Exhibition, Paris, France, Recommended by a large number of our leading medical men.

Charles Cluthe's Pat'd Spiral Truss Pad has been the result of many years' study and material experience. Its perfect adaptability for Rupture is proven by the thousands now in use. Among its many advantages are, a gentle, constant and even pressure; it gives to the motion of the body without friction; complete ventilation (as shown in engraving); a clamping pressure which does not open (as all oval pads) but closes the aperture of Hernia, hence only one-third pressure is required. It is this latter feature that has made this truss so eminently successful and proved a Radical Cure of from 50 to 70 per cent. of cases treated. This Truss cured persons of over 90 years of age. Only one belt round the waist, no leg straps and no sewings required for its use.

Apparatus for straightening Spinal Curvature, Hip Disease, Bow Leg, Wry Neck, Club Foot, etc., made on most scientific principles. Price same as at my office.

CATARRH.

Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Cures Catarrh.

T. J. B. HARDING, Esq., BROCKVILLE, ONT.

DEAR SIR,—It is now two years since your "Constitutional Catarrh Remedy" was introduced to me, I have waited this long to see if the cure would remain permanent before doing this, my duty, to you, as at first the happy effects seemed to me to be "too good to be true."

I was afflicted in my head for years before I suspected it to be Catarrh. In reading in your Circular I saw my case decided in many particulars. The inward "drip" from the head had become very disagreeable, and a choking sensation often preventing me from lying long, I would feel like smothering and be compelled to sit up in the bed. My health and spirits were seriously affected. When your Agent came to Walkerton in August 1877, I secured three bottles. Before I had used a quarter of the contents of one bottle I found decided relief, and when I had used two bottles and a third, I quit taking it, feeling quite cured of that ailment, and have not used any since until of late I have taken some for a cold in my head.

A sense of duty to sufferers from that loathesome disease, Catarrah, prompts me to send you this Certificate, unsolicited, with leave to make what use of it you may see proper. Yours truly,

W. TINDALL, Methodist minister.

Fort Elgin, Ont., Aug. 24, 1878.

AN ABSCONDER ARRESTED.

Montgomery, the Port Hope Forger Brought to the City. His Arrest in St. Louis. The Prisoner Prepared to Answer for his Misdeeds.—History of the Crime.

(From the Mail.)

After a chase extending over many months, Detective Reburn returned to the city yesterday morning, having in custody James A. Montgomery, the absconding Port Hope jeweller and forger. The prisoner, a sketch of whose career will be found hereafter, fled from Port Hope on the 26th of April last. He came to Toronto, and, although the hue and cry had been raised, he remained concealed in this city until the 28th of April, when he took the train for Rochester. Early in the month of May, Detective Reburn, of this city, who had been detailed for the duty of pursuing, and if possible arresting the criminal, took his departure for Rochester. Montgomery, the officer ascertained, had fled from Rochester to New York, and thither the officer followed him. There all trace of the fugitive was lost, and Reburn was compelled to give up the chase and return to the city. Through those mysterious channels only known to the detectives, it was learned that the absconder had gone to St. Louis from New York, and in accordance with the information, Reburn left for that city on Monday last, arriving there on the following day. The Toronto detective, immediately after his arrival, went in search of his man accompanied by Detective O'Neill, of the St. Louis force. While walking along 4th street, a Mr. Saunders, a Canadian, identified the prisoner in the throng and pointed him out to the officers who immediately pounced upon him. He was lodged in the station-house while the police went to search his lodgings. In trunks in his apartments were found about $7,000 worth of jewellery, consisting of watches, chains, rings, etc., and $146 in money. The prisoner passed under the names of Alger Moss and James Fox. After the arrest Reburn talked the case over with the prisoner. The latter said he was weary of wandering about and was willing to return to Canada without the formality of extraditionary proceedings. He admitted ten charges of forgery and three of having received goods under false pretences. As soon as possible Reburn started for home. He left on Thursday having his prisoner hand-cuffed. Montgomery was very restive, but made no effort to get away. The detective was compelled to keep a vigilant watch upon him, and travelled the 800 miles without a wink of sleep. He lodged his prisoner safely in the Central Station at six o'clock yesterday morning.

THE PRISONER

says he is thirty years of age, but his appearance is youthful. In the cells yesterday he complained of the fatigues of the journey. He was dressed in a light suit of tweed. His linen was very much soiled, and he looked haggard and worn. In the bosom of his soiled shirt, a beautiful amethyst glistened. He has gentlemanly airs, but seems to be completely disheartened by his position. He said to the reporter:—

'Sir I am very much fatigued, and you will pardon me if I decline to give you an interview, and then, with a sigh he added, 'I have committed a crime and have returned to bear punishment for it.'

As the reporter was leaving the cell he said:—

'We (pointing to Reburn) are going to Port Hope to-night.'

CREDIT DUE THE DETECTIVE.

Reburn is deserving of considerable credit for the manner in which he conducted the pursuit. He has given marks of his ability as a detective before, and this only adds to the list of his achievements. He travelled the 1,600 miles, from this city and return, without sleep, and when he arrived he looked as much used up as the prisoner. Montgomery speaks highly of the detective's treatment of him, and had no one to complain against but himself.

THE CHARGES AGAINST MONTGOMERY.

The charges against the prisoner include cases of forgery and of fraud. The history of his alleged offences and of his absconsal is not uninteresting. On the morning of April 30th it was rumored in Port Hope that Montgomery who was a prominent jeweller—keeping what was known as Goldsmith's Hall, on Walton street, had been in financial difficulties for some months, had incurred large obligations, and had been missing for four days, or since the previous Saturday. Those of his anxious creditors who were living in the town called at his store, which was opened as usual, and were informed by his assistant that he had gone to Stratford to attend a trial. This made them less anxious, but later on in the day their suspicions were again aroused by a statement which was made to the effect that Mr. J. N. G. Lodge, an insurance agent in the town, held a note of Montgomery's for $600, endorsed by Mr. C. Quinlan—Montgomery's landland—the endorsation on which Mr. Quinlan had repudiated and had declared to be forgery. Subsequently Mr. Quinlan received information from this city that Mr. Segsworth, the jeweller, and other Toronto merchants held accommodation paper of Montgomery's to which was attached his (Mr. Quinlan's) signature as endorser. Mr. Quinlan denied having endorsed any notes, and as a consequence of his statement the Chief of police of Stratford was communicated with and instructed to take Montgomery in custody on charge of forgery. A person named Montgomery was accordingly arrested in Stratford, but this individual turned out to be the alleged forger's brother, who had been there sending telegrams to Port Hope, and doing other things, with a view to keeping up the fiction that Montgomery himself was in that town. He was released. An investigation into the affairs of Goldsmith's Hall was then commenced, and as a result of that investigation it was charged that Mr. Quinlan's name was attached to notes amounting in all to about $3,500; and that the total liabilities of Montgomery were $9,200. while all that was due to him was $403 and his stock, which a month before had been estimated to be worth $7,000, had shrunken in value to $2,000 or, at the most, $3,000.. Four tailors, with whom he had magnanimously divided his custom, mourned his departure from the town, and numerous tradesmen related that they had had hairbreadth escapes. Messrs. Thomas Russell & Son narrowly escaped what looked very much like an attempt on the part of Montgomery to victimize that firm. It appears he sent up for $1,000 worth of gold watches, stating that a presentation was about to be made in the town, and that it would be well to have a large stock of watches from which the customers could select. The watches were sent, but a messenger was sent with them to watch them and to bring them back—and they were brought back. Another firm, Messrs. H. & A. Saunders, of Montreal, were asked to send up goods, on the same plea as that given to Thos. Russell & Son. The Messrs. Saunders sent $800 worth, but there was no messenger to watch them, and they were kept by Montgomery and found to be missing when the stock was examined.

THE PRISONER'S CREDITORS.

As the estate was thrown into insolvency at the instance of the creditors, a meeting was held and the books examined, a few days after Montgomery's departure. It was found that the best part of the stock, that in which the greatest value would be contained in the least possible space, had been removed. Besides this, several thousands dollars worth of jewellery received within a few days of the end of April, had been taken away. The books, which were well kept, showed Montgomery's assets and liabilities to be what is stated above, and his creditors to be as follows:—

PRISONER'S POSITION.

The prisoner was considered in Port Hope to be a very estimable young man. He was nominally a member of the Y. M.C.A., and was a constant attendant and pew holder at the Methodist Church.

Mr. Bright on the English Protectionist Movement.

Mr. Rice, editor of the North American Review, having written to Mr. Bright for his opinion as to the nature and extent of the alleged movement in favor of Protection in England, has received the following reply:

MY DEAR SIR.—I have no difficulty in replying to your letter of the 31st ult. I do not think there is any chance of a return in this country to the doctrine of Protection. We export everything but agricultural produce. To protect our manufactures is manifestly impossible. From another cause the protection of our land produce is not more possible. Half our population exists on imported food. To limit this import by custom duties in order to raise the price of home-grown food is a proposition that cannot be entertained for one moment. Such a scheme offered to Parliament and the country would destroy any Government and any party. We are passing through a time of commercial depression. Its causes are apparent to those who examine and consider the facts of recent past years. But in times of trouble ignorant men seize upon unlikely and impossible propositions and schemes for relief. There is no special remedy for this malady. Time, patience, the working of natural laws, the avoidance and cessation of the excitemint and half madness of the past, and a general economy will bring about a cure, not without some or much suffering, but without failure. We adopted free trade in the year 1846. But our land-owners and farmers and multitudes of our people did not comprehend the principles we taught, and now a new generation is on the stage, ill-acquainted even with the facts of forty years ago. There has been no great distress since our corn law was abolished; and now, when trouble has come for a time, some of the sufferers, and some of the quack doctors who are always ready to prescribe for the public, cry out for Protection, as if we had never tried it before, and as if it had been found a specific in other countries. There is no danger of our going back to Protection; the present trouble will pass away. It has been aggravated by the evil policy of our Government, and that also will pass away, and the simpletons who are looking for relief to an exploded doctrine and practice will relapse into that silence and obscurity which become them. It is a grief to me that your people do not yet see their way to a more moderate tariff. They are doing wonders unequalled in the world's history in paying off their national debt. A moderate tariff, I should think, would give you a better revenue, and by degrees you might approach a more civilized system. What can be more strange than for your great free country to build barriers against that commerce which is everywhere the handmaid of freedom, and of civilization! I should despair of the prospects of mankind if I did not believe that before long the intelligence of your people would revolt against the barbarism of your tariff. The world looks to you for example in all forms of freedom. As to commerce the great civilizer, shall it look in vain? Believe me,

Very sincerely yours,
JOHN BRIGHT.

REFORM PIC-NIC AT STURGEON POINT.

Speech by the Provincial Treasurer.

A very successful pic-nic was held at Sturgeon Point on Thursday last, by the Reformers of North and South Victoria, in honor of the result of the late provincial elections in these ridings. Games, sports, etc., were the order of the day. The following is Mr. Wood's address to the gathering, from the Post:—

Hon. Mr. Wood was received with hearty cheers. He said that it was part of the programme that he was to deliver a short address, but if he were to speak for an hour or two he would fail to convey his pleasure and gratification at meeting so many here to-day, or the pride he felt in being elected for the fourth time as a member for South Victoria. (Cheers.) We had won the greatest political victory ever won in Province of Ontario, and it was a matter of very great pride, indeed, that we were able to say that the loyal county of Victoria stood in the North and South ridings in line with the Reform party. (Cheers.) Any man in his circumstances must have the warmest and the most grateful feelings of gratitude for the noble support he had received from the banner Reform township of Mariposa—(cheers)—but he had the same warm feelings towards those in other townships—in Lindsay, and Ops, in Verulam, Bobcaygeon, and Emily—who had done very hard work, and had rendered most effective assistance in accomplishing the satisfactory result of the contest. (Cheers.) No harder work had been done anywhere than in the village of Omemee—(cheers)—that Tory village—(cheers and laughter)—and it should be mentioned to their credit that while in Lindsay they had no music on the evening of the 5th, in the village of Omemee, through the liberality and spirit of that true Reformer, David Thornton—(cheers)—there had been an appropriate musical celebration of the victory. (Cheers.) It was a fitting and a happy idea to have a gathering of this kind. The members of the Reform party, throughout the riding, did not know each other well enough, or as intimately as they ought to, and this gathering would give them an opportunity of becoming more intimately acquainted. It was especially gratifying to see such numbers of ladies and children present on this occasion. (Cheers.) It was well-known that our wives were equally as anxious to have us succeed in our political struggles, and as our sons are growing up to take our places, it is well that they should take a deep interest in our battles, become well-grounded in the political questions of the day, thoroughly understand and appreciate the principle of the Reform party, and take a part in proceedings such as those in progress to-day. (Cheers.) He hardly knew what to say to the young ladies, of whom he saw so many present. (Applause.) No doubt they sometimes occupied difficult positions for their accomplishments and attractions commanded the respect and admiration of young Conservatives (applause and laughter) but this much he could say that it was impossible for a Conservative to be a rabid Conservative if he had a good, loving Reform wife. (Cheers and laughter.) In thanking his hearers again for the loyal and effective support he had received in the recent contest, Mr. Wood said it was to be borne in mind that he was the man of all others "certain to be defeated," according to the predictions of his opponents, and how had the victory been won? Simply because the Reform party had rallied around him loyally and enthusiastically to a man (cheers); they stood shoulder to shoulder in the battle (cheers); and and if another battle were to take place in the future it only required them to show the same loyalty to their candidate and they would win another victory. (Cheers.) He repeated Nelson's advice to his lieutenant after a great victory—"Anchor, Hardy, anchor," and if that sound advice had been followed some very important results of that victory would not have been lost. By keeping his advice in mind, and by wise and united action in the future, he felt confident that South and North Victoria would be removed from the list of strong Conservative ridings, and placed among the strong Reform ridings of the Province. (Cheers.) In North Victoria Mr. S. S. Peck had won a noble victory (cheers), and he had no doubt Liberal principles would gain adherents in that riding so that the change would be a lasting one. Cheers.)

BOBCAYGEON.

BOBCAYGEON BRIDGES.—A meeting of the Committees of the County Councils of Victoria and Peterborough, took place in this village on Thursday, in relation to the Bobcaygeon Bridges. For Victoria, Mr. Fairbairn, Mr. Bick, and Mr. Fell, were present. For Peterborough, Mr. Burnham, Mr. Miller, Mr. Collins, and Mr. Sanderson. The conference took place in Mr. Bick's office. It was at once unanimously agreed that a new bridge was required. After some discussion the Peterborough Committee passed a resolution to the effect that Peterborough claims that it is not liable to contribute towards such bridge, or if liable, only in a small proportion, but that as the bridge requires to be built without delay, the Joint Committee shall advertise for tenders for an iron and for a wooden bridge, and that on one of the tenders being accepted the bridge shall be built. In the meantime a special case is to be prepared by the solicitors of the two Counties and submitted to the judges for their decision. If that decision is favorable to Peterborough it will be liberated from all liability. If favorable to Victoria, then the proportion of Peterborough's liability will be decided by arbitration. But even if the decision of the Judges is favorable to Peterborough, the latter agrees to make a liberal grant towards the construction of the bridge.—Independent.

PETERBOROUGH, JULY 10, 1879.

SOME PRACTICAL PROOF NEEDED.

Those who favored the idealistic and greatly ideolized "National Policy" do not now show the slightest confidence in it. Even its most active advocates fail to prove their faith in its pretended beneficial results by forming new industrial enterprises, or substantially helping old ones. If they believed their own late protestations we should have seen them before now, eager to place their money in the paying enterprises they so positively talked about. But now not one of them appears to be willing to risk a single dollar in any new project, even as a proof of his sincerity. Each of them is ready to talk a lot of rubbish about new enterprises they profess to believe are being begun at other points, far from home, but they are extremely careful not to help any enterprise in their own locality. True, some of them are eager to induce the bribing of some needy manufacturer by a municipal bonus, and in this they virtually acknowledge the impotency of their much vaunted N.P., in encouraging such projects. It will be remembered that in this very town the contention was made by Protectionists that their new policy was far in advance of the local bonus system; comparatively fair to the whole country, and just the thing to do away with the rather objectionable plan of municipal bribes and bolsters to needy projectors. Yet the very party that plead for Protection as the grand commercial panacea, is now by many of its members ready to fall back on the petty bonus system they then affected to despise, in the hope that by the use of it they may be able to chronicle the starting of some little business on a bribery basis, and to point to it as the result of the N.P. Why not at once put their hands into their pockets, and, as they are able, take stock in some new enterprise, on a straight business principle, instead of trying to capture municipal money for the bonusing of doubtful projects? In that way they would show some belief in the tariff system they are still ready to belaud as beneficial to business activity, whereas their present course tends to prove them entirely lacking in confidence in their own bantling. Let Protectionists right here give some proof of faith in their precious N. P. by showing that it has induced business activity in them. If they had the faith in it they pretend to have, they would be only too eager to invest in stock of new enterprises promising payment of fat dividends under a Protective system. We have their own words for it that more manufacturing concerns are needed and that there is room for them. Then why hesitate for an instant in getting up companies to fill the need and supply what they have characterised as "a long felt want?" With each of them, as with many another dealer in hackneyed phrases.

"The simple fact is,
His preaching isn't sanctioned by his practice."

In this talk of the growth of manufacturing, let us have less artful pretence and more actual procedure—less desire to plunder the public purse to start wild-cat schemes, and at least a little diving into the private pocket to encourage genuine business enterprises, if such indeed are needed and promise a fair return. Above all let our blatant Protectionists give some pecuniary proof of their pretended belief in the N.P.

A general election is anticipated in England before the year closes, and expectation is increased by a recent speech from Sir Stafford Northcote indicating the probability of the dissolution taking place soon. A successful settlement of the Zulu war and a fair showing in foreign relations would no doubt induce the Government to hasten the day of the contest for which both sides are making due preparation. The Liberals are confident of carrying the country by a large majority and if they could unite upon a moderate programme in home affairs with a distinct foreign policy, they might triumph over Jingoism. Before they regain power, however, they will have to overcome very heavy odds. Still the popular pendulum may swing Liberalwards again.

RAILWAYS AGAIN.

We reproduce an article from the Bobcaygeon Independent, in order that all our readers may understand the feeling in the North, awakened by recent and present railway affairs. As far as the Midland Railway is concerned, people in the front of the county are well satisfied with the new and improved management of the line. Those in the rear share in this feeling, but it will be seen that they indulge a fear that they may be subjected to the pressure of a monopoly. Hence they wish, if possible, to free themselves from any such contingency. The desire for the Grand Junction road is a very natural one to people so circumstanced; but a new outlet will not be any advantage, unless it be entirely free from any control or connivance with the now existing line of communication. The whole question then lies in the possibility of the Grand Junction Company securing a completely independent line to Bobcaygeon. We should be glad to see the Old Cobourg line and the branch to Mud Lake utilised for this purpose. Indeed we suggested something of the kind long months ago, and have seen no reason to change our opinion, rather the reverse. At the same time we can see no reason why the town of Peterborough should indulge in the luxury of a bonus to aid such a scheme; for the line wants Peterborough much more than Peterborough wants the line. Then the people's eyes have been opened by recent events to the uncertainties, if not positive danger of loosely giving bonuses to railways, or other enterprises which seem to depend on such aid for even a poor start, and are therefore weak from the very beginning.

We cannot agree with the Independent that 'the Toronto & Ottawa scheme may now be fairly pronounced to be exploded;' for we have faith that it will eventually be carried out. It wants proper and continued push. If that had been accorded it from its inception we feel confident that the work of construction would now be going on, giving an earnest that the Company 'meant business. Instead of that doubts have been raised in the minds of its warmest advocates and supporters by the unexplained delays which have occurred, therefore, we do not wonder that one municipality should have refused assistance to a project that has so long been but visionary. This faint negation will we are satisfied be overcome as soon as work is begun; and then the line of road will go on stretching out, the enterprise being encouraged and aided by a presentation of its own merits. Other lines have overcome difficulties such as the Toronto & Ottawa line has never met, and to all appearances never will meet. The Credit-Valley Road is a case in point. Work on it has been the means of producing the sinews of war to carry on further work. The Company as early as possible and ever since, have given the people ocular proof that they meant to build the road; and have fought against all antagonism successfully simply by inspiring public confidence. In the same way must the Toronto & Ottawa project proceed. A few miles of track will do more to forward the interests of the whole line than would ten times the cost expended in the most glowing prospectuses, or in holding preliminary meetings to talk up bonuses.

The Woodstock Sentinel-Review has a stirring article on the causes and lessons of the Liberal success on the 5th of June. Our contemporary concludes as follows: Their victory has given hope and life and courage to their comrades in the other Provinces, and under proper conditions, with able and skilled generalship and a united command, "eager for the fray," the Liberal party of the Dominion may now await patiently and with confidence for the greater victory which, at the first opportunity, awaits it "from sea to sea."

The Sarnia Observer very truthfully remarks: One of the "economies" of the new scheme for carrying out the provisions of the Weights and Measures Act, is to group the counties for inspection purposes and then get rid of several of the deputy inspectors. The saving affected in salaries will be more than lost in the increased allowance for travelling expenses, so that the "economy" is of questionable character. So long as the main object of the movement is achieved—the dismissal of Reform appointees to make way for Tory nominees—there will be joy among the Government supporters.

In reply to an enquiry as to how he felt, Thickpenny replied quite unconcernedly to all appearance, and with a smile on his countenance, "When a man's in a fix he's got to make the best of it."

The Mail, to suit its own base purpose, alleged that the Quebec Parliament sat until some improbable hour on Sunday. The Mail has since partly apologised for its blunder. There was a long sitting, brought on by the factiousness of the Opposition, and which commenced on Friday at three p.m., extending over a period of twenty five hours. The vote was taken, and the address passed at the last named hour, and it is now discovered that the game of the Opposition was to delay the vote long enough to prevent the usual report from being sent to England. The writer of its articles on this question could not have used worse language had he been a professional libeller. We quote some of the terms used in describing the Quebec Premier and his Reform friends in Ontario, precisely as we find them in the Mail, and hope our readers will retain them as a specimen of the language of the "gentleman's" party:—"Bastard, semi-tincture of popery, infidelity, Voltarian, wicked, partizan Governor, mammon of unrighteousness, reprobate, miserable, agnosticism, blasphemers, simpletons like Moses Springer, wrap the week-ly Globe about the family Bible, atheism, mongrel, Brother Fraser, Philistines, loose fish, judicious bottle holder, paltry, &c." Beyond these phrases there is a considerable amount of sneering at Catholics who do not suit the gentlemen who run the machine.

As will be seen by reference to the first page of this issue, J. A. Montgomery, the absconding jeweller of Port Hope, was arrested in St. Louis, on Thursday last, brought back to Toronto on Friday evening, and committed to Cobourg jail on Saturday to await his trial. Dishonesty in trade and in business relations generally is becoming alarmingly prevalent, and it is really high time some radical measures were adopted to uproot the growing evil. There is no doubt the dishonesties which are tolerated under a lax interpretation and appreciation of our trade laws do suggest to men of too flexible moral vertebræ, acts that are ultra vires altogether. Thus, a man who may have defrauded his creditors under the forms of law, or who sees that he may do so with impunity, finds by an all too easy step in the descent of rascality, that he is confronted with the temptation of forgery, absconding, or similar forms of open dishonesty. Instances to illustrate this fact unfortunately abound on every hand. Many of the victims of misplaced confidence have, by deliberate villainies of this sort, been reduced from circumstances of comfort, if not independence, to a condition of penury. While it is perfectly proper, especially in times like these, to sympathize with honest misfortune, and in good sooth, there is plenty of it, there are no terms severe enough, and scarcely any penalty condign enough to punish those who by the perpetration of fraud violate the confidence and despoil the substance of there fellow men.

The Quebec Lieutenant-Governorship.

It will be seen from our special cable despatch in another column that the Imperial Government has declined to decide the question at issue between the Governor-General and Sir John A Macdonald, and has sent it back for settlement in Canada.

The question whether Mr. Letellier shall continue to govern the Province of Quebec during the remainder of his official term or be expelled from office now depends, therefore, in the first place, on the course Sir John Macdonald shall determine to take. Will he insist on Mr. Letellier's dismissal, or will he succumb to circumstances and withdraw his advice.

Should he pursue the latter course, the long agony will be over, and the Federal Constitution rescued from a serious impending danger.

But should Sir John persist in his folly, it will then be for His Excellency to determine whether or not he will yield to his Minister's advice.

Should His Excellency accept his Minister's advice, and Mr. Letellier be dismissed, then will the autonomy of the several Canadian Provinces in the management of their local Provincial affairs be at an end; every representative of the Crown in the Dominion will be reduced to a mere puppet in the hands of the Ottawa Prime Minister; and a reign of general intrigue and corruption will be begun over the Dominion, outrivalling all that has been witnessed in the past.

But should His Excellency decline the advice of Sir John A. Macdonald, then again comes the question, What will Sir John do? Will he subside and hold on to office, or will he resign? He once resigned when he might have held on to office—but it was merely to get rid of his friend and chief, Sir Allan McNab, and he was back as Prime Minister within a week in Sir. Allan's shoes. The number of occasions on which he held on when he ought to have resigned, would be hard to compute.

If Sir John has a weakness, decidedly it does not lean in the direction of resignation. Might we venture to entertain an opinion on so delicate a point as the probable final solution of the matter, we should anticipate lots of cajoling and bullying, but when all that had failed, patient submission to the will of Providence. Her Majesty's Government would be carried on!—Globe.

Lumber and Railways.

(Bobcaygeon Independent.)

The amalgamation of the Midland and Port Perry Railways, (for amalgamation it is, practically), promises to have a very unfavorable influence on this village and neighborhood. So long as the union of the two lines seeks only to reduce expenses and bring about economy in management, it is good, but when it alters existing rules, changes the charges for freight, and assumes all the prerogatives of a monopoly, it is unquestionable evil. The danger to our village and neighbourhood lies in this direction:—if the railways raise their freight charges on lumber above a certain point, (we are not going to indicate that point, though it can easily be ascertained), then it would become necessary for the mills to move to the mouth of the Trent, or to Georgian Bay. By this means railway freight would be entirely saved. There should be no mistake about this matter. A thousand feet of lumber can be conveyed to Belleville in the lor, by water, much cheaper than the same quantity can be conveyed from here to Port Hope by railway when cut into boards. There are mills in the Bay of Quinte, and on Georgian Bay, that would cut logs by contract as cheaply as they can be cut here. As an instance we may note that Mr. Boyd, of this village, anticipating events, has at this moment two million and a half of lumber being cut by contract at Gravenhurst. The position is therefore clear:—it the railway freight is raised beyond a certain point we shall lose all the advantages of having among us a large manufacturing industry. We do not say that Mr. Cox, of the Midland Railway, contemplates any such action. On the contrary, we believe he is anxious to conciliate, and is most moderate in his views; but somehow or other there seems to be an antagonism growing up between the lumber interests and the railways which if not remedied may lead to all the mills on these waters being moved to the lake shores. Let the matter, then, be frankly discussed, and a more amicable feeling cultivated. It may be well to have it clearly understood what is the export of our village. It is larger than we stated on a former occasion. Mr. Boyd never exagerates, and his production of lumber this year will exceed all the calculations made. He will ship twenty millions. Of this, at the commencement of the season he had two millions on hand, cut; and two millions in the log. Five millions in the log arrived from Burnt River and will soon be cut, and eight millions are on the say from Gull River. This, with nearly three millions cut in Gravenhurst, makes up the total of twenty millions. The mill is working very steadily, and cuts two millions and a half per month. This is what we have to ship, and it will be seen that a very small difference in the freight makes a large difference in the aggregate of profit or loss.

Now about the Grand Junction. Almost at the moment that the Midland and Whitby amalgamate the contingency arises of the Grand Junction becoming a competing line. The Grand Junction will, in a few weeks, be open to Hastings, which is within ten or a dozen miles of the Cobourg line to Peterborough and Mud Lake.

The Grand Junction may have a train at Mud Lake, carrying Bobcaygeon lumber to Belleville, before the Midland has settled this season's difficulties, with its bondholders. Moreover, the Ottawa and Toronto scheme may now be fairly pronounced to be exploded, for one or its principal contributors has abandoned the enterprise. It is therefore, plain to everyone that Peterborough must be absolutely mad to delay any longer utilizing so much of the Cobourg line as is completed and ready for traffic. Either the Midland or the Grand Junction should lease this line and work it.

Finally, we have a suggestion to make in the interests of all parties. If a dozen or more Peterborough gentlemen, will meet, let us say a dozen or more Bobcaygeon friends, at Oak Orchard any day in the course of the next week or two, they could play a game at base ball, or cricket, and incidentally have a pow wow. The result could not be bad, and might possibly be good. All would like to see the Mud Lake Branch open, and if Mr. Cox and Mr. Bickford like to join the party they could have a place in the game.

(From our own Correspondent.)

—The crops are looking exceedingly well, and promise a bountiful harvest. The hay crop is especially good.

—The pic-nic held here on the First of July was a complete success. The children marched from the school to to the pic-nic grounds, carrying flags and banners. The presence of our popular neighbor, Mr. Thomas Blezard, M.P.P., with his usual wit and humor, contributed largely to the pleasure of all parties. Mr. LaRoche with his cance gave all the children of the school a sail, and with his violin entertained those who were inclined to "trip the light fantastic toe." Pitching quoits, swinging, ball &c., &c., kept every person busy enjoying himself. The committee of management proved themselves to be choice men.

Warsaw.

(From our own Correspondent.)

On the evening of Wednesday the second inst., the Methodist congregation in Warsaw and the surrounding Circuit, gave the Rev. W. Buchanan and wife a complete but agreeable surprise. They presented Mrs. Buchanan with a handsome set of porcelain, and Mr. Buchanan with a purse containing $31.50, accompanied by an address. Mr. Buchanan, in replying to the address, thanked them for the unexpected call and for the kindness shown him ever since he came to the circuit. After expressing his heartfelt sorrow in parting with them, and his determination to re-visit this place if spared to do so, he invited them to spend the evening at the parsonage, which they did in a very social and pleasant manner. Subjoined is the address:—

To the Rev. Wm. Buchanan:—

DEAR SIR,—We the members and hearers in the Methodist Church, in the Warsaw circuit, have much pleasure in presenting you with this slight token of our esteem and regard for you as our pastor and friend, and also for your worthy partner, Mrs. Buchanan, both of whom we shall ever remember with the kindest feelings. We shall reflect upon the interesting and persuasive discourses we have heard delivered from your pulpit, with no small degree of pleasure and satisfaction. The patient and cheerful manner in which you have laboured to advance us morally and intellectually, especially calls forth our gratitude. We beg respectfully to tender you our sincere and heart felt thanks, and earnestly trust that you may long be spared to promote the noble cause in which you are engaged. Wishing you every success and happiness through life.

We are, dear sir,

Warsaw, July 2nd, 1879. Respectfully yours.

Signed by the members of the Methodist Church.

BAPTIST CHURCH.—The work on the new Baptist Church has commenced. It will be finished early this season.

SHARP WORK.—A man named Whissle, living in this village, is a first-class peddler. He had to bring a sick man from Indian Village to this point, and he put him in a canoe and ran the distance in one hour and twenty minutes. Who can beat that?

A CATHOLIC CHURCH FOR BOBCAYGEON.—It is reported that a Catholic Church will be erected in this village during the summer, and that a clergyman will be appointed who will serve the two missions of Fenelon and Bobcaygeon.

HAY.—Mr. Mitchell has two acres of land within the corporation limits, and he has this land down with grass. Last Friday Mr. Mitchell measured the length of the grass and found that it averaged four feet six inches—just ordinary timothy, but in splendid condition and of more than ordinary length.

WATER.—The water in Sturgeon Lake is now within half an inch of the spring level. It is higher then ever known before at this time of the year. Mr. Kelly, our look-master, has just completed bracketing the dam, and this is one cause of the good navigation.—Independent.

The Local Government has asked for $3,000 from the Dominion Government to aid in defraying the expenses of exhibiting Manitoba products at Canadian fairs, the local grant not being sufficient. It is urged that this is the best way to advertise the lands in this Province and the North-West belonging to the Dominion Government.

NORWOOD.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Dominion Day passed off very agreeably here. Our band, of which we are justly proud, was away at Warkworth, assisting at a monster citizen's pic-nic. I am informed that no other place at Warkworth was so popular as the platform where the votaries of Terpsichore tripped the light fantastic, to the tune of five cents a couple. Had you seen the showers of five-cent pieces which were rained upon the master of ceremonies by verdant Adonises, you would have declared that Warkworth was singularly free from the hard times. Our boys were well received and entertained right royally.

The members of the Methodist Church here, had a strawberry festival in Mr. Grover's grove. It, like all similar affairs, was very enjoyable: plenty of berries, cream, sugar, cake, &c., and a large company. Proceeds, $68. Only one incident served to relieve the dull monotony of the day. A gentleman, desirous of introducing something novel, undertook to drive a team conveying a huge load of benches, and at the same time to stand on his head, alongside the wagon. In American style permit me to say—neither his arm nor his leg was broken, only the pole of the wagon.

On Saturday the 5th inst., a capital school pic-nic was held at Mr. D. Pagets. One feature of the pic-nic was new and interesting. The four schools entering into the pic-nic, had a competitive examination in Declamation and Oratory. About one hundred candidates presented themselves. Mr. S. H. Dewart, Mr. Wm. McCarthy and Miss Cooke were judges, no enviable position. The candidates were divided into four classes, 4th, 3rd, 2nd, and 1st book scholars.

The following are the schools which took part in the exercises of the day, and their respective teachers:—S. S. No. 1, Dummer, Mr. I. Fife, teacher; Union S. S. No. 3, Asphodel and Dummer, Mr. R. Kidd, teacher; S. S. No. 5, Asphodel, Miss Wright, teacher; S. S. No. 1, Asphodel, Mr. Elliott, teacher.

The prizes were awarded as follows:—4th Book, 1st, C. Comstock, S. S. No. 1, Asphodel; 2nd, Miss Fife, S. S. No. 5, Asphodel; 3rd, Wm. Knox, S. S. No. 3, Asphodel. 3rd Book.—1st, Maggie McMullin, S. S. No. 3, Asphodel; 2nd, Jas. Clydale, S. S. No. 3, Asphodel; 3rd, Mary Kelleher, S. S. No. 5, Asphodel. 2nd Book.—1st, James English, S. S. No. 5, Asphodel; 2nd, Ed. Boland, S. S. No. 1, Dummer; 3rd, Mary Kellegher, S. S. No. 5, Asphodel. 1st Book.—1st, Mary Walsh, S. S. No. 5, Asphodel; 2nd, Edith Stephenson, S. S. No. 3, Asphodel, 3rd, E. McIntosh, S. S. No. 1, Dummer.

I remarked, we were proud of our band, and so we are, and well we may, considering the first-rate fellows who compose it, and the high state of efficiency to which W. H. Mullins, the enthusiastic leader, has raised it. It plays well. But then we are a proud people here, I am afraid. We're proud of our village, proud of our churches, proud of our ministers, proud of our schools and teachers, proud of our Reeve and Council, proud of our—of our—when this communication is read here, we'll be proud of it—sure.

SILEX.

Norwood, July 7, 1879.

LAKEFIELD.

(From our own Correspondent.)

—Farmers are all engaged in saving their hay in this vicinity.

Huckleberries are being offered for sale in the village, the crop is very large, and size and flavor is all that can be desired.

—Mr. J. Kearney is hard at work at his wharf on the island opposite his hotel, at the Point, and will have it finished in a day or so, so that the boat will stop before entering the locks.

—The new swing bridge over the locks at Young's Point, is fast approaching completion, and it is expected will be open for traffic by Thursday. It will be a credit to the place and the contractor, Mr. Walters of Lindsay.

—The statute labor has been done between Young's Point and Burleigh Falls and the road is in good order, and a great contrast to that beyond. The bridge over Perry's creek especially, is in a dangerous condition, and should receive immediate attention.

—West Peterboro County Lodge L. O. A., met in Lakefield last Friday evening, to make arrangements for celebrating the 12th July. The Lakefield District having determined on an excursion up the lakes, will not go to Port Hope, and it is doubtful if all the Peterborough and Ashburnham men will go, several favoring an excursion to Idyl Wild.

—Another improvement at Young's Point, is the new road across the bay, which will save nearly a mile to those travelling to or from Lakefield to Burleigh, the drowned land has all been filled in and a substantial road bed made, which, when finished, will excite the query—Why was it not done long ago?

—A case of shooting with intent to kill, occurred in Harvey on Sunday night. It seems that Mr. John Tarlington, who keeps the Lakehurst post office, was punishing an adopted child about 12 years of age. Mr. Robert Tedford was present and considering that the punishment was undeserved and too severe, spoke to Tarlington about it, his answer was to draw a small pocket revolver and fire. The ball struck Tedford on the left collar bone and glanced, only inflicting a superficial wound. Tedford at once knocked Tarlington down and gave him a fearful beating before other parties could interfere. A warrant was issued by Mr. Brodie, J. P., and as there are no constables in Harvey. Messrs. Geo. Cochrane and John Holmes went up from Lakefield and took Tarlington prisoner. His preliminary trial came off on Tuesday morning, before Mr. Brodie, when he was committed to stand his trial, and was taken to jail by Constable Cochrane.

A Scathing Denunciation from a Conservative.

It has been held all along that the new fiscal policy we have, would sooner or later, inflict most grievous injury upon the shipping interests of this country. The truth of this has been furnished sooner than we had anticipated, for we find a Conservative, who writes to the Montreal Spectator of last week, says:

"Truly the harbor of Montreal presents a sad spectacle. What few vessels are arriving are entering with half-empty hulls. In a word the "National Policy" (shame that the term "national" involves the disgrace of all our citizens) has simply paralyzed our trade with the Mother Country. The ships can get no freights; and, in addition, it seems that every possible obstruction is placed in the way of bonding goods from the United States in transit to British ports. Surely Mr. Tilley had time and opportunity to hatch a more respectable-looking bantling than this never-ending source of discontent and disaster. For one may write forty such cursory letters as these and still be at the beginning of the melancholy story."

To prove that this is not written by an opponent of the present Administration, we have simply to copy a paragraph which appears in the letter, as follows:

"I have been charged with abandoning the acknowledged principles of true Conservatism. I wish all apparent supporters of the present Government of Canada could honestly claim to be as loyal and true to their first love as I am."

This gentleman, whose letters have occasioned a good deal of comment, finds nobody to answer him. He has attacked the Department of Customs with its head of mediocrity and its stiff-necked Commissioner, yet his statements pass unchallenged. He declares he does this as a friend of the Government and as a lover of the country. He supported the "N P." and still supports the Administration which framed it, but his remarks still continue. Of all the striking things he has written there is nothing which equals in vividness his description of the paralysis at Montreal. If the "never ending source of discontent and disaster" has brought about such a end state of affairs at the leading port and the commercial centre of Canada, what must it be elsewhere! Is it astonishing that the revenue is falling off and still sinking? One would not think so.—Hamilton Times.

THE MONTREAL TRAGEDY.

A Verdict of "Wilful Murder" Against the Mears and Flanagan.

The jury after a protracted enquiry in the Montreal murder case, the particulars of which appeared in last week's EXAMINER, returned a verdict of "wilful murder" against Jacob Mears, Susan Kennedy, wife of Jacob Mears, and Michael Flanagan.

It appears that under the French laws existing in the Province of Quebec, there is no provision for finding a verdict against an individual as an accessory, before or after a murder.

The Way They Did It.

The Detroit Light Guards stole a march on the Government. They had been invited to Chatham they went. The little international complication about landing with arms was shrewdly evaded by leaving their rifles aboard the boat and marching without them. Then a squad of Chathamites nimbly mounted the deck and brought the guns off placing each gun tenderly in the hand of his owner. Here is a hint that the Montreal friends of the alleged semi-Fenian regiment may possibly avail themselves of some other time. It recalls the old saying that there are more ways of killing a dog than choking him to death with butter.

Destructive Storm in Brant.

Barns and Trees Blown Down and Crops Badly Damaged.

Brantford, July 4.—Yesterday afternoon the heat was very oppressive in the city, and the loud mutterings of the thunder to the north indicated a big storm, but of its serious result our people were ignorant. Reports coming in show that a great tropical storm passed a few miles north of the city. It was an immense loud of hail, and carried ruin and destruction in its trail. Mr. Hill a farmer near the city, had four great barns blown to pieces. Mr. Boyce, another farmer, living near Mr. Hill, had his orchard completely destroyed. Here immense elms and oaks were twisted into kindling wood, waggon carriages, sleighs, reapers, ploughs, etc., were smashed to atoms. Mr. Sovereign's barn, north of Paris, was moved ten feet from its foundation. Fields of grain were destroyed wherever the storm passed. All the witnesses agree in describing it as a funnel-shaped cloud.

Campbellford.

Grand Junction Railway.—The Campbellford Herald reports progress on this new line as follows: Grading to Hastings was completed nearly two weeks ago, and the road is thoroughly ballasted from Stirling to this village, the work ending several yards west of the bridge. The ballast train is now daily running from the gravel pit on the Shannon property to the Scott swamp, about six miles westward. Here is one of the most difficult parts of the road for construction. The swamp is a dense one, about a mile in length, and the trees and thickets which are so closely wooded as to make it almost impenetrable, having been cut down and laid across the road. On this is piled a quantity of brush, and upon the brush, running parallel with the rails, directly under them, have been placed poles which support the ties. About double the quantity of ballast needed for any other part of the road is required here. The station in this village is gradually approaching completion. Its walls have been erected, and when the carpenters are through with their work it will be as neat a little structure as any of similar size along the Grand Trunk or other railways. Work on the turn-table will be completed also in a few days. It was in a condition, Monday, to do its duty, and engine No. 75, carrying the excursion party, was turned on it Tuesday night, previous to its departure for Belleville. We think Mr. Bickford will have no difficulty in finishing the line to Hastings by the 1st of August next, the time specified in his contract.

Every week adds to the list of horrors through intemperance. But for downright devilishness as a fruit of dissipation, this last revolting murder in Montreal cannot be easily outrivalled.

A BOSS SPAVIN ON A VALUABLE HORSE.—Blistered, fired, rowelled, and did every thing without any benefit. A neighbor advised me to try Giles' Liniment. I bought a quart bottle. Y., for pamphlet containing full information. Trial bottles 25 cents.

HIGHLY GRATIFIED.—In a letter to Mr. Donald Ross, of Dartmouth, N. S., the Duke of Argyll says:—"My son and the Princess have indeed every reason to be gratified, as they are with the reception they have met with in every part of the Dominion. I am very sorry that it will not be in my power, on this occasion to visit Nova Scotia; but I am well assured of the kindness and hospitality with which I should be received in that Province.

Mr. J. H. Hargraves, who was sentenced to the Penitentiary for three years for ill-treating a girl in his employ at his hair factory, Lowell, Mass., has had his punishment commuted after serving nearly two years. This clemency of the Executive was commented upon in consequence of evidence which afterwards turned up as to the total unreliability of the chief witness [illegible]

Hammers—the alleged victim, Annie Sparks. It is stated that he has gone west, not daring to show his face in London again.

The Manitoulin Expositor says: Unless some unforeseen calamity should occur it is pretty safe to predict a plentiful harvest in the Manitoulin this year. From almost every portion of the Island reports have reached us of the promising appearance of both fall and winter crops. This is indeed good news, not only to the farmers themselves, but the residents of the Island generally. Should the crops turn out as we at present have reason to expect, the harvest reports will have the effect of drawing still more attention to the Island as an agricultural country, and give a still greater stimulus to emigration. The Island already produces more grain than is necessary for home consumption, but not enough as yet to pay for the manufactured goods brought in here. Should this year's harvest be a bountiful one, we may hope to see this account balanced and soon find the "balance of trade" largely in favor of Manitoulin.

DAIRY PRODUCTS.

JUST RECEIVED:

1 CAR-LOAD LIVERPOOL FACTORY FILLED

SALT.

—Expressly for Dairy Use.—

It is packed in pure white linen bags of three sizes,—62½ lbs, 112 lbs, and 56 lbs. (The bags are all of a superior quality of linen and suitable for travelling or other domestic uses.) It is said by persons of wide experience that one ounce of inferiority in quality of butter and other dairy products has been the use of common grades of Salt; and the difference is cost is slight when compared with the difference in quality. If dairymen and others will consider that in manufacturing, only ½ lbs of salt are required to make 100 lbs of cheese, and only 1 oz. of salt to make 1 lb. butter, they will recognize of how small importance must be the first cost of one of the most important ingredients in the manufacture of all dairy products.

Clearing Sales.—The midsummer clearing sales of our dry goods merchants are now in full blast.

Teachers' Examinations.—The examinations for Third Class Teachers will be held in the Collegiate Institute Buildings, here, commencing 14th July, instant, at 9 o'clock p.m.

"Baptist Year Book."—The Christian Helper, a fortnightly newspaper for Canadian Baptists, says that the Executive Board, which meets in Guelph this month, will probably select a committee to edit the Baptist Year Book for 1880.

Valuable to Business men.—Voters' Lists will prove valuable to business man hereafter. The law now requires the post office address of every elector to be given on the voters' lists, as well as to have the letter J opposite the name of every voter qualified to act as a juryman.

Snowdon Iron Company.—The Mail says : —"Application is made for the incorporation of the Snowdon Iron Company, the head office of which will be in this city. The capital stock is to be $100,000, and the company propose to manufacture iron from the ore of the Snowdon Iron Mines."

Parcel Post.—Persons having small articles to send by mail will be glad to learn that the parcel post rates have been reduced to six cents for four ounces and under, and six cents for every additional four ounces. Parcels must not weigh more than five pounds and must be marked, "By Parcel Post."

Croquet.—The croquet season has again set in, and this pleasing and artistic lawn game is being largely indulged in by our young folks. In Toronto, Hamilton and elsewhere we observe several lady challenge games have already been played and excited a great deal of interest. We should be happy to chronicle the introduction of such an interesting innovation in Peterborough.

Manitoba Rhubarb.—The following statement of a Whinipeg paper is vouched for by a friend of the Port Hope Guide, who is well acquainted with Mr. Fonseca :—"Some immense specimens of rhubarb, grown by Mr. Fonseca are exhibited at the market, a single leaf and stock weighing 13 lbs. The leaves measure over two feet in width, and a similar distance in length, whilst the stock is two inches in diameter."

A Warning.—A warning concerning the toy balloons which are peddled on the streets, is thus given by medical authority :—Many of the most virulent diseases of the blood have lately been found to be communicated by this means, as each of these toys must pass through the mouths of three or four workmen before it is finished, and each is usually tried by the vendor while he is making the sale. Skin diseases, which have lately spread among the children in Paris and London, were propagated by these toys. Mothers should be on their guard to see that they are thoroughly cleaned before use.

Colleen Bawn.—A second performance of this play was given in the Opera House on Friday evening last. The acting of the several parties taking part was, if anything, better than on the previous occasion. Songs by Miss Nettie Martin and Mr. T. A. Kennedy, and clog dancing by Messrs. Beach and Clark, filled in the delays between the acts, which was a great improvement over their first appearance.

No for Stoney Lake!—As will be seen by posters issued from this office as well as by advertisement in another column, Messrs. Gordon & Sheppee, proprietors of the the Steamer Cruiser, have arranged for excursions each Wednesday during the season. Special excursion trains leave Lakefield each Wednesday evening at 5 o'clock in connection with the steamer, so that all who wish to enjoy a good long day's sail on our back lakes can now avail themselves of the opportunity.

Important to School Trustees.—The powers of trustees in rural school sections in Ontario to levy and collect public school rates were abolished by the School Act passed this year. Henceforth rural school trustees must obtain all moneys for public school purposes from the township councils. The law further directs (Revised School Act, s. 102, ch. 12) that trustees must make application to the council, to raise the required amount at or before the August meeting of the council. Trustees, therefore, should before the end of the present month—July—meet and estimate the amount of the application to the township council. The application should be in writing. In December, or as soon as the taxes are collected, the trustees will give an order on the township in favor of their sec.-treas. for a part of the whole amount raised for them by the township council. The orders for the disbursement of the school money will, as usual, be given on their own secretary-treasurer.

Constantissima.—Consolations for those who can't get away on a midsummer holiday trip :—(1.) You save your money. (2.) The cars in July and August are apt to be hot, stuffy, and flavored with coal-dust. (3.) You are saved the annoyances of summer resorts. (4.) You are saved the hard work and expense of previous preparation to get away. (4.) You are saved the risk of nailing up your house while you are away, and the trouble of getting things into running order when you come back again. (5.) By relaxing ordinary operations a little, taking pains to keep the house as cool as possible, wearing light clothing, and taking an occasional trip to Idyl-Wild or Burleigh Falls, or a drive now and then in the evening cool among the diversified landscapes of the neighbourhood, one may easily find arguments in favor of staying at home rather than going away. Some mild old campaigners say that September or the early part of October are the better months to take a pleasure trip, if you must have one.

Drowned.—On Friday last Mr. William Kerr was accidently drowned at the Locks while fishing. About eleven o'clock he had been on a seabury crib connected with a drive of logs which was passing down the river. As the men were preparing to lock the crib through, deceased left it, saying, "I must go and get a fish for dinner." Nothing further was seen of him, but it is supposed that he had proceeded a short distance below the locks and taken up a position on an old stump at the water's edge, as the worms he intended using for bait were found there in the evening. When the men looked through, the cook found a hat lying on the water and a rod and line on the bank and gave them to Mr. Brewsscombe, Lockmaster, who deposited them in the store room, thinking that they belonged to some one who had been there fishing, but never entertaining the idea that the owner had been drowned in such close proximity to where he and the others were working. Deceased not returning home in the evening enquiries were made for him, and the finding of the hat and fishing tackle becoming known, fears were entertained that he had met an untimely end, and a search for his body was instituted, which was not found till the following evening, when it was recovered a few yards below the Locks. An inquest was held during the evening by Dr. Kincaid, when a verdict of "Accidental Drowning" was rendered. From the evidence given it appeared that deceased had been subject to fits of dizziness, and it is supposed that while preparing to fish he had dropped off the stump into the river, which is deep at that particular spot. His remains were interred on Sunday afternoon in the Methodist Cemetery.

Entrance Examinations.—The Entrance and Inter mediate Examinations commenced on Tuesday last at the Collegiate Institute. A large number of students presented themselves, and it is to be hoped that the expectations of the majority will not be vain.

Ashburnham School.—The examinations in connection with this school were held on Friday. A large number of parents and visitors were present and were much pleased with the proficiency of the pupils. Mr. Wood and his efficient assistants are to be congratulated on the position of the School.

Vital Statistics.—There have been registered at the office of the Town Clerk, Division Registrar, for the town of Peterborough, during the month of June ;—Births, 15 ; marriages, 5 ; deaths, 6. For the half year ending June 30th, 1879, the numbers were :—Births, 102; marriages 32 ; deaths, 63. For the same time during the year 1878, the numbers were :—Births, 82 ; marriages, 26, deaths, 52.

Another Change of Time Table.—By a lately issued Time Table of the Midland Railway, we observe that a new change in the hours of running trains, is announced to take effect on and after Monday 11th of July. Trains will leave Peterborough at 6.45 a.m., 10.35 a.m., and 6.35 p.m. and arrive at 8.35 a.m., 11.50 a.m., and 10.10 p.m., connecting at Millbrook with trains going north and south.

New Hack.—Mr. T. Cavanagh, proprietor of the Stewart House, has lately purchased a new hack, which it is his intention to run regularly to and from the railway station and wharf. This new vehicle was constructed at Fitzgerald's Carriage Works, in this town, and reflects much credit to the builders for superior workmanship. It cost in the neighborhood of $300. Such a stroke of enterprise is commendable and will no doubt be appreciated. The N.P. surely had some remote connection with the purchase!

12th of July.—The anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne will be celebrated this year by the Orangemen of Peterborough at Port Hope, where a large demonstration is expected. The members of the town leave by special train at nine o'clock. Return tickets are placed at 95 cents, good till Monday evening. The members of Lakefield District will celebrate the day by an excursion and picnic to Stony Lake, and the members of the Otonabee District at Idyl Wild. In connection with this last named, the steamer Golden-Eye will run an excursion from Peterborough, leaving the wharf at 7 a. m. Geese tickets, for the round trip, 25 cents.

A "Little" Fall.—Mr. Little's sign on George St. fell on Monday afternoon. A commercial traveller on the opposite side of the street was at first imagined to be the cause ; but our hearts are steeled against so brazen an idea. It is hardly possible that the magnetism called forth by the amount of precious metal in his facial development could act at so great a distance. Perhaps the high wind that was blowing at the time was the primary agent of the downfall. We don't pretend to photograph the future, else we would present to our numerous subscribers the picture of a fallen sign raised by man's power to its ancient elevated position.

The Coming Harvest.—From all sections of the Province come cheering reports of a bountiful crop of all kinds of farm produce this year. Fair prospects in the earlier part of the season are very often deceiving and farmers can never form of the yield of their crops till the harvest is over. However, at no time have the farmers had greater reason to rejoice than at the present. Everything is in the most flourishing condition so far as their productions are concerned, and should nothing intervene to militate against their agricultural interests, the harvest of 1879 will be one of the most bountiful they have ever had. From one end of the country to the other, the papers are full of glowing prospects of hay and grain crops, and if prices keep up during the fall and winter, our farmers will be enabled to retrieve the losses of past years to some extent, and lessen the burdens necessarily incurred during the severe crisis, they as well as the mercantile and manufacturing portion of the community have passed through.

The Burke Bigamy Case.—The old gentleman who married his third wife at Burlington lately, while his second wife was yet living, as related in the EXAMINER, was committed to goal to answer the charge of bigamy. The other day application was made to Judge Sinclair to admit the prisoner to bail. Mr. Sadlier, for the prisoner, said he based his application on the fact that Burke had only married his third wife, a good-looking girl of nineteen, after not knowing the whereabouts of his second wife for some eight years. Burke was eighty-seven, and the girl had married him for his money, as it was reported he had money in Cobourg. This was not the fact, as all the old man was had was a bond for $50 given him by his three sons-in-laws He had only been married to the third three weeks. His sons-in-law offered to go bail for him if he would leave the third wife, but this the old man positively refused to do in violent terms. Bail, however, would be forthcoming. His Honor fixed the bail at $1,200 for Burke himself, and two sureties of $600 each.

Festival.—There is a nameless charm about a strawberry festival. When a judicious mixture of strawberries, ice cream and music is prepared, the attraction is irresistible. The festival held by the ladies of St. Luke's Church, under the patronage of the Lord Bishop of Toronto, passed off very successfully. The audience, the elite of the town and village, was fair-sized, but as many bought tickets who were not present, in a financial point of view the assemblage was larger. Bishop Sweatman, who appears to be quite a young man, graced the entertainment by his presence. Strawberries, cake, ice cream and lemonade were in delicious profusion, and visitors and others on payment of a small sum, had the pleasure of a nearer acquaintance. The reserved seats in the hall had been removed, and quite an extended space was left for promenading. Contrary to usual custom, disrobed by countless repetitions, the air in the hall was not suffocating, but cool ; and this added much to the delight of the evening. A programme, consisting of songs, instrumental music, and a laughable charade, had been prepared, but the performers, owing to the unavoidable hurry and confusion of the visitors, were not listened to as quietly and attentively as the merits of their selections deserved. A very pleasant entertainment was closed by a grand tableau and by singing the National Anthem. The following programme was admirably rendered :—Instrumental Duet, Miss Edmison and Miss Mack ; Song, Mrs. Sheffield ; Instrumental Duet (violin and piano), Messrs. Heathfield and Sheffield ; Song, Mr. Ernest Morgan ; Piano Solo, Miss Edmison ; Song, Mrs. Meade ; Instrumental Solos and Duets, Messrs. Heathfield and Sheffield ; Song, Mr. Davis ; Vocal Trio, Messrs. Buck, Hamblain and Hilson ; Song, Mrs. Sheffield ; Instrumental (piano and violin), Messrs. Heathfield and Sheffield ; Charade, "A cure for obstinacy." God Save the Queen.

Truth is Mighty.

At the little town last in the sequence of most, made all leaves, as truth generally appeared all about and disturbed. When Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., announced that his Favorite Prescription would positively cure the many distressing and troublesome ailments peculiar to women, and guaranteed to supply the money in every case where it failed to benefit, the widely truth generally became acknowledged. Thousands of females who had suffered untold agonies, submitted to the hands of physicians, and had exhausted the Favorite Prescription and received relief, and a permanent cure, without resorting to the shocking ordeal of an operation by Dr. Pierce of his power to cure, that he now offers it through regular order a positive guarantee.

The 10.30 P.M. Train.—The station platform is near a favorite evening promenade since the change of time table, and the arrival of the night train.

Plate Glass Windows.—Plate glass fronts have during the past week been placed in the stores occupied by Messrs. T. Dolan & Co. and Messrs. Rush & Elliott. They add greatly to the appearance of the premises. Several other shops on George-street, we believe, are soon to undergo a similar change.

School Pic-Nic.—A very successful school pic-nic was held on the "Pleins," Bridgenorth, by the surrounding schools, on Monday, the 7th instant. About 400 were present. The running, jumping, walking, and vaulting of the young athletics was admired by all. The number present speaks well for the interest taken in educational matters by the people of Smith.

Election of Officers.—At the regular meeting of Peterborough Lodge No. 111, I. O. O. F., the following officers were elected :—

Bro. D. H. Moore	N.G.
" T. M. McFadden	V.G.
" Dr. R. W. Bell	R.S.
" W. J. Green	P.S.
" J. Sawyer	T.

Bro. B. J. Lee was elected representative to the Grand Lodge, which meets in Hamilton on 12th August next.

"Stopped Short," &c.—As a horse and buggy, driven by a man with an uncommonly long pair of lines, were crossing the Ashburnham bridge on Saturday last, the horse, moved no doubt by the grandeur of the scene and the uncertainty of a future state if the bridge should break, stopped short, unwilling to bedge again. The man, with characteristic obstinacy, combined on his unbroken course alone until the ditch received him in her mud-ery bosom. The man, before whose eyes the brightest stars glittered, unclosed his soul and emitted some of the brightest gems in the profane calendar, until the horse, who was noticed to have blinked thrice soliloquisingly, having sniffed the sulphurous "breese" of his master, left for "pastures green." The thoughts in that man's bosom were, no doubt, varied and kindly, as he shuffled his tackle together and sought another drink.

Supposed Murder in Lakefield.—During the past week it had been rumored in town that Mrs. John McCoy was missing, and from the circumstances connected it was surmised she had been the victim of foul play. We are pleased to learn, however, that the serious phase of the rumor was unfounded. We clip the following particulars of the case from the Lakefield News :—

"During the past four days there has been considerable anxiety and excitement in this vicinity from the fact that Mrs. John Mc Coy, who has long resided with her husband to the south of the village on the Douro road, having been missing from her home. The circumstances of the case are as follows :—Mr. John McCoy, on Sunday last imbibed rather to much liquor while absent from home and returned on Monday still in a state of intoxication ; during the morning he proceeded to ill-treat his wife, who fled to the residence of her father, Mr. Foley, about half a mile down the river road, followed by her husband, still beating her. After staying at Mr. Foley's some time Mrs. McCoy left for home, and he was detained and pacified. He then left and returned, saying he could not find his wife. Search was at once instituted for her, fears being entertained of her having met with some mishap. No clue could be obtained until yesterday when we learn that Mrs. McCoy had made her way to her sister's at Lindsay. Of course, every one breathed freely, and no one we suppose more so than her husband, who has been anxiously looking for her so long.

LOCAL MELANGE.

—"Yes, it is very"——

—Now get ready to camp out.

—The weather is again in a melting mood.

—Dominion Day being over make up your parties for the civic holiday.

—If a lady wears court-plaster on her face to beautify her, why not wear an eight-ounce tack in her shoe for comfort?

TOWN COUNCIL.

Council met pursuant to adjournment on Monday evening in the Council Chamber. Present,—His Worship the Mayor, and Councillors Taylor, Smith, Buller, Paterson, Robertson, Yelland, Deene, Griffith, Douglas and Cahill.

The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

COMMUNICATIONS.

The following memorandum was received from Hector Cameron, in the matter of the Grand Junction Railway :—

The Grand Junction Railway to extend their line from Hastings to Peterborough by the 1st of January 1880, or as soon after as practicable on the following conditions :—

1.—The Town of Peterborough to grant a bonus of $75 000 to the G. J. R. to be paid on completion to Peterborough if arrangements can be made with the Cobourg, Peterborough and Marmora Railway for acquisition or use of part of their line or bridge, or failing that, on completion to Ashburnham, it being intended by the G. J. R. to extend to Omemee as soon as arrangements can be completed to do so, and connect with the Midland there.

2.—The Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company to release pro tanto so much of the Town bonus as it may grant and pay to the G. J. R. Co'y.

3.—In consideration thereof the G. J. R. to grant to the T. & O. R. full running powers and as ample a right to use their track, and that of the Belleville & North Hastings Railway Company from Peterborough to Cookston and Hastings, and the Belleville & North Hastings Company to build the line from Cookston to Tweed as soon as the Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company work their eastern connection from Ottawa to Tweed.

4.—The Township of Otonabee to grant to the Grand Junction Railway, a bonus of $30 000, payable on completion from Hastings to Ashburnham.

5.—The time for completion to Peterborough, and for payment of last $25,000, already granted by Belleville, to be extended if required till 1st of September, 1880.

6.—The County of Peterborough to withdraw opposition to the bonus of $75,000 to Grand Junction Railway, and to issue and deliver to the trustee the debentures therefor, and to consent to the Grand Junction Railway using by purchase, lease or permanent running arrangement, so much of the track of Cobourg, Peterborough and Marmora Company, and their Bridge if required.

7.—The terms named are of course contingent on the immediate or early completion of this arrangement.

July 2nd, 1879. R. CAMERON.

From Chas. D. Macdonald, Town Clerk, informing the Council that the following lands had been omitted from the assessment of 1879 :

Part 14, north King and west of George Street, owned by J. Paterson, and occupied by W. Miller.

North Dublin and west George Street, Nos. 13 and 12, owned by John Chambers

South Edinburgh and west George Street, Nos. 18 and 19, owned by Arthur Rutherford.

From Jas. Edwards, submitting a statement of the receipts and expenditures for the past six months, and also a like statement for the month of June.

From William Mills, tendering his resignation as Councillor for No. 2 Ward, for the remainder of the year.

From Jas. Bethune, Esq., Q.C., the following opinion in the matter of the Police Court accounts :

DEAR SIR,—I have considered the case submitted to me by you, and have read a letter addressed to me by Mr. Hatton upon the subject of the dispute between the town and him, respecting some fees alleged to have been collected by him.

I was not considered the question, because it has not been raised, whether the Police Magistrate is entitled to levy any fees, or whether, if collected, these fees belong to him or the town. It has been assumed that, as to town cases, Mr. Hatton is not entitled to the fees which have been collected and paid into the Town Treasurer.

The first subject of dispute is as to fees which have been collected in county cases, that is to say, cases in which Mr. Hatton has acted in his character of Justice of the Peace of the County, and which have arisen out of the town. My opinion is that Mr. Hatton is entitled to retain these fees for his own use.

Another matter in dispute is as to certain fees which Mr. Hatton, as Police Magistrate, charged against persons convicted before him, as fees which were payable for services supposed to be rendered by the Clerk of the Police Court. Mr. Hatton contends that because he did the work which the Police Clerk ought to have done, he is entitled to the fees. Ever since 1858, and I think before that, where the Clerk of the Council was Clerk of the Police Court and was not entitled to these fees for his own use, they belonged to the town. I think that Mr. Hatton either had no right to collect the fees, or if he did collect them as fees payable to the Clerk of the Police Court, he has no legal right to retain them, although he did the work and for that reason may have a moral right to the compensation which the Clerk would have got. This is a matter of strict law, I do not think that he is entitled to these monies.

Another matter upon which Mr. Hatton differs with the town, is in reference to some fees which he got as Justice of the Peace of the Town, in disposing of cases as between master and servant. I am unable to see any distinction between this class of cases and any other class of word to be done by him arising within the town. If he admits that for the criminal work which he does, arising within the town, the fees belong to the town, I think that he must also admit that the fees for this class also belong to the town. Upon the general question as to his right to reserve to his own use any of these fees I give no opinion ; the same observation applies to cases of surveyship to keep the peace.

Yours truly,
JAMES BETHUNE.

J. J. Lundy, Esq., Mayor, Peterborough.

DISPORALS.

On motion of Councillor SMITH, the Clerk was instructed to enter on the Assessment Roll any lands omitted from the same.

Councillor RUTHERFORD said the petition had been handed to him about five or six weeks ago, but he had forgotten about it. He moved it be received and handed to the Street and Bridge Committee.

Councillor DENNE objected to the motion, raised a point of order, as the time had elapsed for receiving petitions.

The motion on being put was declared lost.

From Rev. V. Clementi, asking for the use of the Council Chamber for the Ontario Fruit Grower's Association, on the 16th and 17th of September.—Granted.

The following accounts were received and referred to the Finance Committee :—

Adam Hall	5 45
W. Hamilton	8 60
Gas Company, (Council)	9 30

STREET EXPENDITURE.

Moved by Councillor DENNE, seconded by Councillor ROBERTSON.—That in view of the difficulty that may be encoured in the collection of our taxes this year, and the fact that our streets are all in fair condition, it be resolved that no new work be done this year, and that a copy of this resolution be given to the Street and Bridge Committee.

Councillor RUTHERFORD objected to the resolution as out of order. It was not keeping faith with those ratepayers who petitioned for work.

Councillor YELLAND thought it would be unfair to pass the resolution.

Councillor BULLEN was of opinion it was a buncombe resolution, and therefore would vote against it.

Councillor SMITH thought it impossible to do without some new work. If we did none this year we would have twice as much to do next Year.

The resolution on being put was lost.

FIRE WATER AND GAS.

Councillor PATERSON, as Chairman of the Fire, Water and Gas Committee reported, recommending the building of a tank in the neighborhood of the South Ward School, and also an approach (or the fire engine at the Little Lake. Also recommended that the Market Square be watered every Wednesday and Saturday.

On motion the report was adopted.

Councillor PATTERSON submitted a report from the Special Committee, appointed in reference to Mr. Garvey's petition recommending, as the fire risk was greatly diminished, the case at present before the Police Court be withdrawn and that a standing committee be appointed to examine petitions of a like nature.

The report was adopted, and a motion passed appointing the members of the special committee as said committee.

ELECTION FOR NO. 2 WARD.

On motion the Clerk was instructed to authorize the holding of an election to fill the vacancy caused by Mr. Mills resignation.

STREET AND BRIDGE COMMITTEE

Councillor PATTERSON was appointed on the Street and Bridge Committee in Mr. Mills stead.

COLLECTION OF TAXES.

Moved by Councillor DENNE. seconded by Councillor ROBERTSON,—That the taxes for the present year be made payable on the 1st of October, and that 5 per cent. be added to all sums in arrears two months from that date, and that the Finance Committee prepare a by-law containing the above provision to be submitted to this council.

Councillor SMITH thought that as it was an important matter it should be referred to the Finance Committee who were considering the matter of collecting the taxes.

Councillor Rutherford also objected to the passage of the motion.

Councillor DENNE's object in bringing in the resolution was that the taxes as well as the other financial matters of the town could be audited each year by the Auditors.

The motion on being put was declared carried.

The Council adjourned to meet again at the call of the Mayor.

Closing Exercises at the Collegiate Institute.

An entertainment at the close of the Institute took place on Monday afternoon last and was witnessed by a large assemblage of visitors. Several clergymen, some members of the School Board, and a large number of ladies and gentlemen who take an interest in the success of our schools, were present. The programme opened with a few introductory remarks by Mr. Jeffers, Principal, and by the choir singing "When the Mists have Rolled Away," in capital style. Master Geo. McDowell then delivered a recitation entitled "Defence of the Bridge against the Tuscan Army," with good effect. A witty and lively essay on "The Life of Sir Cloudesly Shovel" was read by Master Wm. Richardson, which was followed by an instrumental solo rendered in a very creditable manner by Miss Johnston. The recitation of Cassie McCann, entitled "The Leper," was a good elocutionary effort. After another selection from the choir, the question : "Whether the American Revolution was Justifiable" was upheld in a debate by Jas. Stevenson and Harry Deane, who were opposed by J. G. Douglas and J. Gilmour. These young gentlemen deserve high credit for the composition and delivery of their arguments, and give promise of a successful future.

The second part of the programme opened with an instrumental trio by the Misses Ellsworth, Richardson and McDowell. A recitation by Miss M. Hamilton was followed by an original sketch or essay on the "Railway Station" by Miss Birdie Hall. Master P. W. O'Brien declaimed the "Horrors of War" in an effective manner, shewing that this important branch of study is not disregarded. After another recitation and song, Mr. Arthur Campbell read some closing verses, at the end of which three cheers were given for the teachers.

The Rev. Mr. BENNETT in a short, humorous speech moved a vote of thanks to the teachers, and Miss Paxton especially, as also to the school are of the school for their laudable and successful efforts in presenting so choice an entertainment to parents and visitors.

The Rev. Mr. CLEMENTI SMITH, in seconding the motion, spoke in high terms of the success of the school and highly complimented the teachers on their efforts.

Mr. DUNBLE said that nothing could be more pleasing and satisfactory than the present state of the school. Ample provisions were made to ensure for every child in the town a liberal public school education ; but the people were not satisfied with a mere public school education for the youth of the town and they had also ample provisions made for adding thereto a liberal, higher education, which the Collegiate Institute was designed to ensure. This he was satisfied, was also liberally being carried out, and the fact that there were no private schools in town, and few parents if any sending their children to outside schools, fully testified to the popularity and success of our Institute. He knew that a cry had been raised by a few that the poor ratepayer was helping to educate the children of the rich, but this was merely imaginary, as the rich had to educate, to a large extent, the children of the poor man, and this they were willing to do. If, however, the poor man was left to see to the education of his children, unaided, these children would be deprived of the advantages of a superior education, such as can be obtained at our Collegiate Institute, and they, therefore, would be debarred from fitting themselves to assume those higher positions in the social scale that education always ensures. The advantages were therefore on the side of the poor ratepayer.

Resolutions recommendatory of the state of the school and the efficiency of the principal and staff of teachers in both Public and High Schools were then moved by Mr. DUNBLE and seconded by Mr. STEVENSON, member of the School Board, and carried unanimously.

Mr. STRATTON, P. S. Inspector, expressed a hope that the School Board would provide more accomodation for visitors on such an occasion, as all saw that very many who desired to be present could not, but had to go away for want of room, while those who had not in were so crowded that they could not enjoy the proceedings. He intimated that the removal of the present partitions and the placing of a double folding partition in its stead would not cost much and would be sufficient to meet present requirements.

The proceedings terminated by the Choir singing "God Save the Queen."

The salt well at Blyth, Ont., is now 1,160 feet deep. The salt rock has been penetrated thirty-five feet. The workmen are still drilling in the solid salt rock. The contractor, who has had much experience in sinking salt wells, says it is the best salt bed he ever struck.

PROHIBITION.

Lecture by Rev. F. Chisholm at Friendship Temple.

The Rev. F. Chisholm, Lecturer for the Grand Lodge of Good Templars of Ontario, agreeably to our announcement of last week, delivered a lecture on the subject of "Prohibition," in Friendship Temple, on Tuesday evening last. The audience was not large,—a circumstance to be regretted, for the lecture was one of more than ordinary interest. Mr. James Stratton occupied the chair, and in a few introductory remarks, in which he attributed in some degree the paucity of the audience to the unusual attractions elsewhere transpiring, introduced the reversed lecturer.

The following is a condensed report of his remarks :

The subject for consideration, the lecturer went on to say, was that of prohibition,—which he regarded as the most important question of the hour. He had lately heard the Hon. Mr. Vidal say that the carrying of this great principle of moral reform, was of more importance to Canada than the building of the Canada Pacific Railway ; and when it was remembered that the building of this road was the most momentous undertaking, not only of Mr. Mackenzie in the late Government, but also of Sir John Macdonald in the present, if what the Hon. Mr. Vidal had said was true, then the question of prohibition must, indeed, be an important one. There were some people in the community who said that the temperance movement had been a failure because there were still to be found drunkards in the land. He would say that they had not failed to drive away the intoxicating cup from social gatherings—that they had not failed to show that three-fourths of the crime committed in the land was attributable to strong drink,—and they had not failed to make the question one for consideration, not only at the Local Parliament, but also at the Dominion House of Commons. It was just as reasonable to say that the system of education had been a failure, because there were still found in the land those who could not read ; or that Christianity was a failure, because there were those who would not reach heaven through it. No good cause could fail. The cause of temperance was God's cause, and it must prevail. He would state a few of the leading arguments against the principle of prohibition. He could remember when the principle of total abstinence was first put forward that there were those who objected to it, because it interfered with personal liberty. And the same objection is now raised against prohibition. They said it was against the genius of constitutional liberty. This was not so, for not only was it in keeping with constitutional liberty, but recognized as a general principle of the divine decalogue. "Thou shalt not steal." and all the rest of the divine commands contained this same principle of prohibition. By what right was it made it unlawful to sell spirituous liquors to the Indian ? The Crook's Act prohibited the sale of liquor from seven o'clock on Saturday night to seven o'clock Monday morning. The difference between the present liquor act and prohibition was not one therefore of principle, but one of degree. He could not see how a man could agree with the liquor law and disagree with prohibition, for there was really no difference,—one was merely a modification of the other. Another reason urged against the principle of prohibition was that it would interfere with vested rights. He proposed to show that there were no vested rights in the manufacture and sale of spirituous liquors. God had given him a right to live and no one had a right to take away that life. They might have power but they had not right. Did society give them the right to take away life by the sale of spirituous liquors ? or did society give government the right to license people to do this? Society gave them the power but not the right. There were two classes of rights,—the right of the individual citizen and the collective rights of the community. The object of a government in legislation should be the greatest good to the greatest number, and no government has the right (although it might have the power) to legislate otherwise. The lecturer here introduced his position by relating the case of an individual who had received a license from government to establish a factory for the Somebody's Mother.

The woman was old and ragged and gray,
And bent with the chill of the winter's day.
The street was wet with a recent snow,
And the woman's feet were aged and slow.
She stood at the crossing and waited long,
Alone, unaided her, amid the throng
Of human beings who passed her by,
Nor heeded the glance of her anxious eye.
Down the street with laughter and shout,
Glad in the freedom of "school out out,"
Came the boys like a flock of sheep,
Hailing the snow piled white and deep.
Past the woman so old and gray,
Hastened the children on their way.
Nor offered a helping hand to her,
So meek, so timid, afraid to stir
Lest the carriage wheels or horses' feet
Should crowd her down in the slippery street.
At last came one of the merry troop—
The gayest laddie of all the group;
He paused beside her and whispered low,
"I'll help you across if you wish to go."
Her aged hand on his strong young arm
She placed, and on, without haste or harm,
He guided the trembling feet along,
Proud that his own were firm and strong.
Then back again to his friends he went,
His young heart happy and well content.
"She's somebody's mother, boys, you know,
For all she's aged and poor and slow;
And I hope some fellow will lend a hand
To help my mother you understand,
If ever she's poor and old and gray,
When her own dear boy is far away."
And "somebody's mother" bowed low her head
In her home that night, and the prayer she said
Was "God be kind to that noble boy,
Who is somebody's son and pride and joy."

The Wolfville Murder.

HALIFAX, N. S., July 3.—Dr. DeWolf, who shot his wife at Wolfville a few days ago, committed suicide by hanging this afternoon in gaol at Kentville. He tied a sheet to an axe handle placed across a stove pipe hole in the ceiling, put a chair on the stove, tied his hands behind him and jumped.

Avoid Extravagance.

Extravagant people are by no means praiseworthy. The man who takes care of his earnings is far more respected than he who squanders all in "riotous living." So with the young lady. Although she may spend her last dollar in the purchase of a new dress or a costly shawl, and follow the whims of fashion as closely as does the fashionable young lady in society who has thousands at her disposal, she cannot ever make people believe she is richer than she really is; and is more likely to incur suspicion as to her rectitude of character, and keep away such young men as make good husbands from her society, than if she lived prudently and dressed plainly.

Uses of Adversity.

An excellent receipt for being completely miserable is to think only of yourself, how much you have lost, how much you have not made, and the poor prospect for the future. A brave man with a soul in him sets out of such pitiful rots and laughs at discouragement, rolls up his sleeves, sings and whistles, and makes the best of life. This earth never was intended for paradise, and the man who rises above his discouragement and keeps his manhood will only be the stronger and better for his adversities. Many a noble ship has been saved by throwing overboard the most valuable cargo, and many a man is better and more humane after he has lost his gold.

Scotch Emigration to Manitoba.

The Winnipeg Standard says that of late, owing to high rents and low prices, farmers in Scotland have been suffering to a heavy extent and that several of them desiring to escape impending danger and to better their condition have come to look upon Manitoba as offering superior attractions. Enquiries have been made as to what would be the prospects of experienced and steady agriculturists in the Northwest, and a goodly number have resolved to emigrate to that part of the world. The first arrivals took place a few weeks ago and more are expected soon. A class of farmers of the kind in question, with some means to start with, would do well in Manitoba and would be a desirable acquisition to the province.

Don't Know What to Do.

We sometimes hear persons say, "my horse is sadly out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;" they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and testify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horse's condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more readily and for higher prices. The article is "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy." Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package. The Cry of Distress.

(From the St. John Freeman.)

From all parts of Canada comes the cry of distress. Everywhere the national policy proves a failure. Employment does not become abundant, nor do wages advance anywhere. Sir S. L. Tilley spoke of the number of people employed in Montreal, but in Montreal there are thousands idle and the business depression is worse than ever. The same is true of all the other cities of the Dominion to a greater or less extent. In all there is distress; in all are men idle and families suffering for want of food. In St. John we go from bad to worse. We hear often of men dismissed; never of new industries started or old industries so flourishing as to afford more employment. The mills do not work steadily. The shipyards are almost idle, and men who can get a dollar a day for the hardest work have reason to think themselves fortunate.

Good Butter.

This cannot be made without due attention to milk, the raw material, so to speak, out of which butter is manufactured. No amount of skill can make a first-class carriage with poor timber and inferior iron. And the first prerequisite to excellent butter is to have the milk inperfect order. To secure this the milk room should be isolated from the kitchen, decaying vegetables, and every thing of that character. It should be kept clean and well ventilated, and so constructed that its temperature can be regulated, for the highest success in butter making cannot be expected if the thermometer is allowed to jump up and down at the caprice of the weather. The pans should be kept scrupulously clean, for if old milk is permitted to adhere to them, the germs of decay are thus fostered, and the result will be an injury to the milk and cream. Having progressed thus far, tidy churning and working, and the making of the butter into tasty packages will do the rest.

Character.

The character is formed by the personal habits of daily life as much as by the thoughts and principles inculcated. The careless and unmethodical in action will scarcely be the accurate observer, the correct reporter, the reliable authority, or the steadfast supporter in other matters. The loose ends of daily habits repeat themselves in the character; and graver virtues than the prosaic qualities of method, order, regularity and the like follow on those habits of forethought and observation which older people try so hard to inculcate on the younger, and the younger try so hard not to learn. Also no one can exaggerate the importance of daily combating the sins or the frailties that most easily beset us. To give way to-day to a fit of inconsiderate selfishness, an unfounded suspicion, irrational anger or careless self-indulgence makes control all the harder to-morrow, and the folly committed now all the easier to repeat then. The character is not formed by great leaps, by one strong impression, by a few striking experiences, but by small repeated touches, by the constant rippling of daily thoughts, thankfulness, shaping of daily habits.

To the Married.

Married life is not all made up of sunshine and peace. Shadows will sometimes darken the domestic horizon; the sun will often hide behind a cloud which apparently has no silver lining. But do not fret over it. Make up your mind to start anew. Begin a white new leaf in your book of experience, and try to forget the blots and erasures on the last one. Above all things, preserve sacredly the privacies of your house, heart, and married life. No good is gained by imparting to relative or friend the sorrows and disappointments you endure; and sooner or later you are sure to regret making such a confidence. There are few who can be trusted with the secrets of your daily life; there are few who will not whisper the story of your marital difficulties to some "dear confidential friend," and soon your private affairs are freely discussed by all your acquaintances, and commented upon without stint, furnishes food for gossip over many a tea-table. Build your own quiet world, not allowing your dearest earthly friend to be the confidant of aught that concerns your domestic peace.

Felt That Way Himself.

"A soft answer turneth away wrath," and so sometimes does a little good-natured raillery. Some people, be it known, always wake up in good humor, come in bad humor and some in "middling" humor. Cameron has a son who is blessed with a daughter and a son, the latter some years the younger, a little fellow who often says a bright thing without knowing it. The other day his sister had been enjoying an afternoon nap, and woke up just as supper was ready. She came to the table, and having occasion to reprove her brother for some breach of table etiquette—spoke rather more harshly then the occasion warranted. Instead of resenting the reproof, the boy looked up and said sympathetically, "Been asleep, haven't you?" "Yes," answered the sister. "Thought so, continued he, "I often feel that way when I wake up." That boy has learned to "round the corners" already; he'll find it a useful accomplishment when he begins his battle with the world.—Boston Transcript.

Suicide at the Toronto Asylum.

(From the Mail.)

As James B. Reid, night watchman at the Asylum, was passing the room of a patient named Charles Rundell in that institution early on Friday morning, he discovered him hanging from the window by the bedclothes. He gave an alarm, and the superintendent coming along, the body was cut down. It was still warm. A sheet and quilt had been tied together. One end had been attached to the bedstead, and the other passed out of the lower part of the window and in at the top, over the frames. Then the suicide had tied the end tightly round his neck, and thrown himself forward, dying of suffocation. The deceased, whose people live in the County of Durham, was admitted to the institution in November last. Shortly after his admission it was discovered that he was of a suicidal disposition, and the attendants were warned to keep a sharp watch upon him. He was quiet and inoffensive, giving way greatly to melancholy at times and threatening to take his life. Coroner Riddell opened an inquest on Friday morning, and the jury returned a verdict of "hanged himself while insane."

A Southern Wedding.

The San Francisco Post thus takes off the manner and customs of the South: At a wedding in South Carolina last month an incident occurred aptly illustrating social life in the United States. The bridegroom, who belonged to the "first Southern families," took exception to the phraseology of the officiating clergyman. "You shouldn't say these uns whom the Lord hath joned together, but them uns." The preacher, who prided himself upon the "high-toned" quality of his language, quietly dropped his hand into the pocket of his surplice and interpotulated: "You jist paddle your own canoe, young feller, of your trouble'll begin sone enuff. I'm running this tea-party, I am; as I said afore, my beloved beaters—those uns as the Lord—" Just then the bridegroom made a motion toward his hip, but before he could draw the minister fired from his pocket and the young man fell dead at his feet. Instantly the whole church was filled with blazing pistols. In less than five secouds the only person left alive was the bride, who had duck'd behind the pulpit early in the action. The half-married female gazed rauingly around and remarked as she started for home:—"These self-cocking revolvers is playing the mischief roudd here, and that's a fact and no mistake."

Representation of Minorities.

Our representative system is all wrong. The present method of representing the people in Parliament is not a fair index of public opinion, because the minority of votes sometimes return the majority of representatives. Take the case of England. At the last general elections the Liberals had 180,000 more votes cast for them in Great Britain and Ireland than the Conservatives had, and yet the Conservatives were returned by a sweeping majority. The same thing happened in the United States, where the Democrats were said to have polled nearly half a million more votes for Tilden than the Republicans polled for Hayes, and yet Hayes was returned. The same thing may happen in Canada, for a majority of 1,000 counts no more in determining the representation than a majority of one. In England, however, minorities are represented in some constituencies. In what are are called "three-cornered constituencies" there are two representatives on one side and one on the other. Montreal, for instance, is a three-cornered constituency, and in the case of Montreal, two of the M.P.'s would represent the majority and one the minority. This is fair enough so far as it goes. The Hon Mr. Blake proposes another method and one which has some points to recommend it. One thing, however, is certain, the present representative system is faulty, and the sooner it is improved the better for the country.—Montreal Post.

A Golden Crown.

If there is any class of persons who need sympathy, tenderness and encouragement, it is the tired women of our pleasant land. Weary limbs and hearts, puzzled brains, all attest the fact. There should be special privileges granted to them as much as to invalids. 'Tis said:

"Over all path ways some clouds must lower.
Under all feet some short thorns spring.
Tearing the flesh to bleeding wounds:
Or entering the heart with their bitter sting.
Upon all brows rough winds must blow.
Over all shoulders a cross must be laid.
Bowing the form in its lofty height.
Down to the dust in bitter pain."

True, into all heads there are duties thrust, and into all arms some heavy burdens given: to women doing double work, anxious, scheming, planning and economizing how they can manage every detail of domestic life with least expense. Doing double and triple work themselves to save for this or that, until their nerves are strained and shattered to a degree unbearable to themselves, and particularly offensive to others. But into all hearts and homes and lives, God's dear sunshine may be brought, gilding the ruins of life's great plain, if only husbands or fathers would but deal gently with the wife or mother, cheer and brighten her life by all the means in their power, for she needs your help, and your sympathy does much to buoy her up, that she may be nerved with fresh vigor to impart sunshine in her home and to all who are a constant drain upon her life and energies. I believe it to be a woman's duty to be a cheerful companion, making her home a moral one, a place where her husband delights to be. And if trials come she will find him ever ready to sympathize and assist in making the pathway of life smooth, and when our time on earth has expired we have woven a golden crown.

Home Music.

Very often it happens that home-music fails of being a source of delight, because it is not suffered to pass beyond the learning or "practice" stage. Girls are kept playing or singing exercises for years with as much persistence as though they were training to be teachers, and needed to know everything of the theory of music and the technique of performance. Then it is too much the habit to change instructors frequently, and as each teacher is apt to have a method of his own, more time is wasted in unlearning what has just been taught. The result is a host of over-taught but under-educated mechanical performers, who have been spoiled for all pleasure-giving purposes in the vain attempt to make "musicians" of them. There is about as much satisfaction for the rest of the household in this course of study as there is to concert-goers in hearing the orchestra tune their instruments. It is a grand flourish of "getting ready" in both cases; and by the time the average girl is ready to begin to play to her own satisfaction she gets married, and stops playing altogether, and drags her husband out to concert and operas when she wants to hear music. It is the vice of half our boasted "culture" in all our branches of learning. A great many men study and read all their lives, and call that education. They never really write, or speak, or do anything; they are everlastingly getting ready,—which is about as sensible a proceeding as it would be to spend life in a gymnasium acquiring muscle for the mere sake of getting more muscle, but never using the strength to any good purpose. Those who can sing or play ought to learn how by singing or playing,—taking and giving pleasure as they live and learn.

The spontaneous, hearty, off-hand, without-notes sort of music is the kind that we need more of in our homes.—Golden Rule.

Important to Sheep-Raisers.

One Million Dollars Annually Lost by our Canadian Farmers.

We have been requested to publish the following extract from the Farmer's Advocate, for the information of our farmers, who should not be slow to profit by the advice of experienced stock breeders and dealers of Ontario:—

G. D. M. writes to the Farmer's Advocate as follows:—I met William Donaldson, of Woodstock, Ont., last Fall, and was speaking to him about the loss our farmers sustained every year by not having their lambs all castrated. Now, as I am largely interested in the sheep trade, as well as in the welfare of our country I can give facts and plenty of proof that the loss every year to our farmers is as much as a quarter of a million dollars from the cause above mentioned. I have seen load after load sold in Buffalo, N. Y., last Fall to feed—all weither lambs—at $5.00 to $5.75 per hundred when you could sell the same lambs—buck and weiher mixed—for $4.75 to $4.80. And the farmer places himself in the hands of the buyer, as he cannot hold lambs all over when they are all bucks, and the buyers will take all the advantage, which is natural; the butcher will not pay as much by one-quarter to one-half after the middle of August for a buck lamb as he will for a ewe or wether, and consequently the drover cannot pay so much to the farmer. Any time a man crosses over to Buffalo with a drove, all ewes and wethers, he has no trouble to find customers. I have been urging all the drovers to have this matter published in your paper, and Mr. Donaldson told me to write to you.

Farmers could hold their wethers over till two years old and they would bring good prices for export, and they would not place themselves in the hands of drovers. I claim that such a course would be better for all interested, and I hope this will be published in all the leading as well as local, papers in the country. I am in a position to know whereof I speak, as I am one of the heaviest dealers in this country: we bought here on an average for the last four years over 110,000 sheep. I say it is a loss to Canada of $200,000 a year—a very low estimate, as the butchers will pay more, and plenty of men here would feed them; then the drovers could pay more and would pay more. Now I know that around Paris and Galt, and through Blenheim, the farmers all have their lambs castrated, and the consequence is they sell at from $3.50 to $4 per head; I know that plenty sold to feed here last Fall at $5.50 per hundred, when you could buy the same, part bucks, for $4.80 to $5 at the outside, and thus the idea of our farmers shipping so many over here. Let every farmer keep three, four, six or ten, as the case may be, of good wethers till they are two years old, instead of sending here and paying duty, and they can be sold at very remunerative prices in two or three years for export trade; it will make the supply coming here lighter, and what does come will command better prices.

Manufacturer of Boots & Shoes,

PETERBORO' BRANCH, - DIXON'S BLOCK.

Goods Sold Direct to the People at Wholesale Price.

The Only Business in Canada Conducted on the Same Principle.

Over $200,000 Worth of Boots and Shoes so Supplied Last Year.

The great loss annually sustained by selling to Dealers, first led to our establishing of Branch Stores, where we could supply direct to the people for Cash all the goods we could manufacture, thus giving to the people the goods less the dealer's profit, and saving to ourselves the annual loss. We were the more forcibly impressed into this step from the fact that cheap Eastern-made shoddy goods were being palmed off as our goods. We now sell our own goods, warrant what we sell, use no shoddy or inferior material of any kind, and can and do supply goods of the best quality 25 per cent. less than they can be bought elsewhere.

Everything Marked in Plain Figures. Only One Price.

CUSTOM DEPARTMENT.

Our arrangements are now complete in this department, and we can make to measure promptly either Ladies', Gentlemen's, or Children's Goods, in the Latest Styles, at little over half the price usually charged.

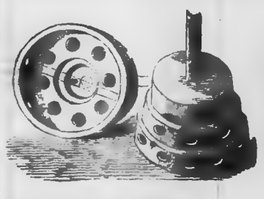
IMPROVED CHURN DASHER.

(Patented July, 1878.)



Is adapted to all the old fashioned Round, Tub or Crock Churns. It will churn and gather the butter in from 1 to 10 minutes, and turn out 10 per cent more butter than anything of the kind in use. Each section or flange is an Air Chamber, which forces a large volume of atmosphere down into the milk or cream at each stroke, the cream or milk at the same time is forced over upward of four hundred inches of surface, and is thrown with such great velocity square against the walls of the churn that it ruptures the globules and frees the butter with a few strokes. It is perfectly simple and easily constructed,—no machinery about it to get out of order.

INFORMATION FOR PHYSICIANS.

RUPTURED AND DEFORMED PEOPLE.

Grand Medal and Diploma at the Centennial, Philadelphia; Grand Medal at the Universal Exhibition, Paris, France. Recommended by a large number of our leading medical men.

Charles Clothe's Pat'd Spiral Truss Pad has been the result of many years' study and material experience. Its perfect adaptability for Rupture is proven by the thousands now in use. Among its many advantages are a gentle, constant and even pressure: it gives to the motion of the body without friction; complete ventilation (as shown in engraving); a clamping pressure which does not open (as all oval pads do) but closes the aperture of Hernia, hence only one-third pressure is required. It is this latter feature that has made this truss so eminently successful and proved a Radical Cure of from 50 to 70 per cent. of cases treated. This Truss cured persons of over 50 years of age. Only one belt round the waist, no leg straps and no springs required for its use.

Apparatus for straightening Spinal Curvature, Hip Disease, Bow Leg, Wry Neck, Club Foot, etc., made on most scientific principles. Price same as at my office.

This Truss can be sent by mail, under guarantee to answer, if you send for

CATARRH.

Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Cures Catarrh.

T. J. B. HARDING, Esq., BROCKVILLE, ONT.

DEAR SIR.—It is now two years since your "Constitutional Catarrh Remedy" was introduced to me. I have waited this long to see if the cure would remain permanent before doing this, my duty, to you, as at first the happy effects seemed to me to be "too good to be true."

I was afflicted in my head for years before I suspected it to be Catarrh. In reading in your Circular I saw my case decided in many particulars. The inward "drop" from the head had become very disagreeable, and a choking sensation often preventing me from lying long, I would feel like smothering and be compelled to sit up in the bed. My health and spirits were seriously affected. When your Agent came to Walkerton in August 1877, I secured three bottles. Before I had used a quarter of the contents of one bottle I found decided relief, and when I had used two bottles and a third, I quit taking it, feeling quite cured of that ailment, and have not used any since until of late I have taken some for a cold in my head.

A sense of duty to sufferers from that loathsome disease, Catarrh, prompts me to send you this (unsolicited, unsolicited), with leave to make what use of it you may see proper. Yours truly,

W. TINDALL, Methodist minister,

Port Elgin, Ont., Aug. 26, 1878.

MANHOOD:

"A Lecture to Young Men."

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cents, or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that the awful consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the appendage of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Address, THE CANADA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, or, Dr. CULVERWELL, Bouverie Street, Post Office Box 4586. 1-52ins.

INTERMEDIATE EXAMINATION PAPERS, 1879.

ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

1.

"I laugh, when those who at the spear are bold
And vaunterous, if that fail them, shrink, and flee
What yet they know must follow, to endure
Exile, or ignominy, or bonds, or pain,
The sentence of their conqueror."

(i.)—Divide into propositions, and state which are subordinate. (ii.)—Parse each subordinate proposition as if it were a single word. (iii.)—Parse 'to endure,' and 'sentence.' (iv.)—Give the derivation of the words in the last two lines.

2.

"Know
I come no enemy, but to set free
From out this dark and dismal house of pain
Both him and thee, and all the Heavenly host
Of spirits, that in our just pretences armed Fell with us from on high; from them I go
This uncouth errand sole, and, one for all Myself expose, with lonely steps to tread
The unfounded deep, and through the void immense
To search with wandering quest a place foretold
Should be, and, by concurring signs, ere now
Created, vast and round, a place of bliss
In the purlieus of Heaven, and, therein placed,
A race of upstart creatures, to supply
Perhaps our vacant room, though more removed
Lest Heaven, surcharged with potent multitude, Might hap to move new broils."
—Paradise Lost, Book II, ll. 821-837.

(i.)—Parse the italicised words. (ii.)—Parse the following phrases as if each were a single word:—'Of pain'(l. 823), 'with lonely steps to tread the unfounded deep' (ll. 828 and 9), 'in the purlieus of Heaven' (l. 833). (iii.)—Both (l. 824). Give the arguments for and against parsing this word as a conjunction when used in this way. (iv.)—Void immense (l. 829). In what different ways may each of these words be parsed? (v.)—Explain the meaning of 'by' in l. 831. (vi.)—Scan the ellipsis after 'removed' in l. 835. (vii.)—Discuss the relation of the phrase 'to move new broils' in l. 837 to the verb 'might hap.'

3.

Make improvements in the following sentences where necessary: 'A word before is worth two behind.' 'It is proved in the first book and twenty-ninth proposition that when a straight line falls on two parallel straight lines it makes the alternate angles equal.' 'I don't know as I can give it in the words of the book.' 'Perseverance is indisputable to to success.' 'Let $a \cdot b$ equal to x.' 'Many of our readers are probably familiar with the Britannia Tubular Bridge, which spans the Menai.' 'The teacher should encourage cleanliness by all the means in their power, and if he sees that diseases are concealed by the hair or clothing, or that attempts are made to do so, he should see the parents about it.' 'The temperature is not gradual.' 'Among the advantages of using steam for warming a building may be reckoned the more equitable distribution of heat.'

4.

Should a meeting of the members of a church for purposes of enjoyment be called a social or sociable? Give reasons for your answer.

5.

Explain clearly what you mean by the term indirect object. Point out the indirect objects in the following sentences, and parse all the words in the objective case which are neither direct nor indirect objects: 'He made him a coat.' 'He made him king.' 'He ordered them to hang the rascal.' 'He ordered the rascal to be hanged.' 'Let us not forget this.' 'I saw him run.' 'The master taught the boys Latin.' 'He fought a battle.' 'He ran a mile.' 'It measures a mile.'

6.

Point out the ambiguity in 'He measures six feet.' 'He thinks he is beaten.' 'The duke yet lives that Henry shall depose.' 'Just at this moment I met a man who seemed a suspicious sort of fellow and turned down a lane.' 'I am not bound to receive any messenger you may send.'

Our Crop Reports.

(From the Globe.)

In procuring the very full series of crop reports, of which is printed elsewhere as much as space will allow, we have adopted a system now to Canada. It will be acknowledged on inspection to furnish a means of arriving at a closer estimate of the coming harvest than has been attainable hitherto. In procuring all the reports our agents were instructed to assume that an average crop would be represented by the figures 100, and to report the condition as being so much per cent. over or below an average. By this means an exactness not attainable by any other method is secured. As we go to press returns are in from about 360 places, representing every part of the Dominion except British Columbia. In 315 of the returns the figures are capable of close comparison. It is cheering to find that the crops, which are our great staples, and the principal of which—fall wheat—is already safe, humanly speaking, promise to give another abundant yield. The one black spot on the horizon is the condition of the spring wheat, which now promises slightly below the average while its really critical time is yet to come. But if we are favored with two or three weeks of dry hot weather, spring wheat may furnish nearly an average yield. The uniformity of the reports as to the state of the fall wheat is remarkable. In the 284 reports in which the state of the fall wheat is expressed in figures, no less than 124 places give the condition as being 20 or 25 per cent. above the average crop. An average condition is reported from 85 places and only 31 places is a condition less than average inputed to the crop. The condition of the winter wheat as indicated by the average of the whole of the 284 reports is 111—that is, 11 per cent. above an average crop. The area of land under this crop is also shown in the majority of the reports to be somewhat larger than usual.

The spring wheat, on the contrary, is shown to be deficient both in probable yield and acreage. Reports in 290 places are sufficiently precise for comparison. Seventy-four of them report above an average condition, 110 an average condition and 106 a condition below average. The mean of the reports as to spring wheat shows the present condition to be 96, four per cent. below average.

The barley crop is reported upon by 288 places, and the average condition ascribed to it is 105. As the area under barley seems to be somewhat below the average, it will be probably near the mark if barley be considered as now promising exactly an average crop.

The condition of the oat crop is indicated by the average of 297 returns to be 106 as regards quality, and as regards area considerably above the average. There seems to be a promise, therefore, that the efficacy of the "N. P." in raising the price of oats will be put to a severe test.

Peas are reported by 292 places to indicate a present yield of three per cent above the average, 103. As the area under the crop is reported smaller often than larger, the crop may be taken as an average.

Rye is an insignificant crop at present with Ontario farmers, and it is to be hoped will remain so for many years, as there is no sure sign of the extension of farms than to have farmers compelled to grow rye instead of wheat. It is reported upon from only 148 places and more of them show a diminution in the acreage under rye than show an increase. This is somewhat astonishing, seeing that according to the "N. P." rye was entirely to supplant corn in the distillery business, and there was ample time to put in rye after the contest last September. This would tend to show a painful want of faith in the "N. P." on the part of the farmers, even before they were quite sure of its nature. The condition of rye is indicated by 96.

The hay crop seems to have the widest range of any crop this year between goodness and badness. There are some very good reports and many very bad ones. Fifty per cent. and more above an average condition is reported from 24 places, while at 60 places the crop is estimated to be below the average by 25 per cent. and more. In all there are 301 among our reports in which the condition of hay is given in figures. The average condition of the whole is 103, and wherever the crop is already gathered it is spoken of as having been won in first-class order.

There is evidently going to be another great crop of potatoes, unless rot should set in as it did last year, when it spoilt an equally promising crop. The average condition shown by 297 reports is 107, and the high prices that ruled in the spring seem to have influenced many farmers to set out an unusually great area in the crop. The seven per cent. above an average shown by the figures is therefore far below the actual crop that may be expected.

The reports do not show that the duty on corn has induced many farmers to forsake more profitable crops in order to indulge in the, to them, extreme novelty of being protected men. The area in corn is about the same as usual, and its condition, as indicated by 212 reports, is ninety-three, corn being thus in the worst cereal crops This might be expected because of the backwardness of the season and the frequent cold snaps.

It is much too early in the season to make any trustworthy estimate of a crop maturing so late as roots. Our 240 reports show an average present condition of 97, which must be taken as especially subject to be modified one way or other by the fall weather.

As might be expected after the enormous crop of last year, the present appearance of the apple trees promises a crop considerably below average. There are 269 reports, and the average condition of the whole is 80. This is subject to still further diminution from the recognized fact that a large crop is always accompanied by an increase of the insects preying upon it, and the next crop suffers accordingly. The condition of other fruits besides apples is shown by 267 reports to indicate a yield of 94 per cent. of an average crop.

The News from Zululand.

LIEUT. CAREY'S CONDUCT—HARD FIGHTING STILL ANTICIPATED.

A dispatch from Capetown, dated June 17th, gives the decision of the court of inquiry, which was convened for the purpose of examining into the conduct of Lieutenant Carey, the officer in command of the scouting party to which the Prince Imperial was attached at the time of his death. The court finds that Lientenant Carey did not understand the position in which he stood toward the Prince, and was not aware that he was expected to exercise any special guardianship or care over his person. The court however goes on to censure Lieutenant Carey for proceeding upon his reconnoisance without a sufficient escort, and halting and dismounting on dangerous territory—acts which betrayed a deplorable want of military prudence. The court regrets that no attempt was made by Lieutenant Carey to rally his escort and to confront the enemy. After the court of inquiry, a court-martial was organized to try Lieutenant Carey, and was still in session when the steamer sailed. Lieutenant Carey set up in his own defence that he was not in charge of the party when the Prince was killed and the evidence thus far submitted somewhat clears him of the charge of cowardice.

The period allowed to King Cetewayo to send in his submission has expired, and no answer has arrived from him. Much more hard fighting is anticipated.

The Letellier Affair.

AN OTTAWA ORGAN'S VIEW OF IT.

The Ottawa Citizen editorially says in regard to the Letellier affair:—"It is not unfortunate that within a very brief period the Letellier matter will be disposed of, and a precedent placed on record that will hereafter deter other Governors from exercising tyrannous and partisan authority." And then it adds that within a short time His Honor Mr. Letellier will be relieved from the position whose duties must have for some time past have proved extremely irksome. In concluding it refers to the fall of Mr. Letellier and comments on the same. Naturally, the positive manner in which the above statements are made lead to the general impression that they were inspired, but on enquiry there is every reason to believe that they consist of mere foolish bombast. Indeed, it is said that the Government is much annoyed that the statements should have appeared in anticipation of even any communication with the Governor-General on the subject. It is felt that should the Governor-General reaffirm his previous refusal, the Citizen will, by its indiscretion, have placed the Government in an awkward position.

Talmage in London.

HE PREACHES TO TWO CONGREGATIONS OF TWENTY THOUSAND EACH.

The Rev. Dr. DeWitt Talmage preached at the Agricultural Hall, last Sunday afternoon, to two congregations of twenty thousand each. Thousands upon thousands thronged the streets leading to the Hall for miles, almost blockading the passage of vehicles and pedestrians. Many people were crushed, and Mr. Talmage's carriage was almost demolished by the crush of the great crowd which was anxious to see the great American preacher. His presence is causing a furore through Great Britain. The present commotion dealt with him daily from various points of view as a preacher or as a humorist, but all admit his power and originality.

PETERBOROUGH, JULY 17, 1879.

PROVINCIAL AUTONOMY.

As was to have been expected, the Province of Quebec has not remained passive in that affair called the Letellier question, in which it is so greatly concerned. By a good majority in the Assembly, as it is at present constituted, it has pronounced its protest against the interference with its internal concerns, attempted by the House of Commons. The resolution, which we give in another column, is plain and unmistakable in its terms, and we have only to refer our readers to it that they may understand the position taken by the Province in the defence of its own constitutional rights. It will be seen that the protest is not against the undoubted power of the Dominion Government and the Governor-General to dismiss a Lieutenant-Governor for causes, as some Tory papers have mistakenly asserted; but against the attempt by the Federal Government to dismiss His Honor of Quebec, on the strength of a party vote in the Commons and Senate. The House of the Dominion Parliament have no voice whatever in the appointment of Lieutenant-Governors, consequently they have no right whatever to pronounce upon any question of dismissal of a Lieutenant-Governor. That the Federal Ministers sought the approval of the Chambers at all, is a proof that they did not feel safe in dealing with the matter in the usual way, by going to the Governor-General, on their own responsibility, and seeking his approval to their proposal. Their action in calling for an expression from a Parliament that has not, and cannot have any direct jurisdiction in the concerns of the Province of Quebec, or in any other single Province, was clearly for the purpose of strengthening their own position by unfair means, or that they might by the vote, influence the Governor-General by undue pressure. Perhaps both reasons were at the bottom of the resolutions in the Dominion Parliament attacking Lieutenant-Governor Letellier. However, this may be, neither purpose seems to have been attained; for not only did the Governor-General stand proof against the bull-dozing process, but the outcome of the whole shameful business, has been a thorough exposure of weakness and duplicity on the part of the Dominion Ministers. They stand to-day, by their own action in this matter, confounded and self-entangled before the Queen's representative, and in the eyes of the people of the Dominion, to say nothing of the British Government, of which the Governor-General is the embodiment in Canada.

It is generally admitted, even by their own party friends, that the Dominion Ministers were agreed that they should dismiss the Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec. If they were not, they deliberately deceived their following in Parliament by asking them to endorse the resolutions submitted to that body in reference to the matter. But taking this improbable view, they were more than all else, trying to cheat their French Canadian following, who clamoured for the dismissal. The only other way to account for the reference to England, is the more likely reason, that the Governor-General, in spite of the bullying vote in Parliament, refused to agree to the dismissal, and that the reference to England was then looked to as a loophole, whereby to escape for a time, during which something might turn up. And something has turned up; but all to the further confusion of the prosecutors of Lieutenant-Governor Letellier. The Ministry which assumed all responsibility for his act, has been strengthened by the election of additional supporters at bye-elections; and thus the voice of the majority of the people of Quebec, is unquestionably in accord with the present Ministry and with the dismissal of their predecessors.

Assuming, as from the probabilities we pretty safely may, that the Governor-General was not agreeable to the dismissal of the Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec, when the proposal was first presented to him, there is still less likelihood of his now acquiescing. The reasons that could induce him at first to refuse, all remain, strengthened, so far as the reply of the Colonial Office is concerned, by a reaffirmation of Canadian independence in dealing with internal affairs of the Dominion, which is a direct rebuke to the Parliamentary meddling at Ottawa. Those who recommended the reference to England (and Sir John Macd would be found in the House to say it was the Ministers) are snubbed completely and effectively by the reference back. If the Governor-General shares at all in this, it is in being officially rebuked for at all agreeing to a reference of the case to the British authorities. This implies approval on the part of his official heads of his refusal to agree to the dismissal of the Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec. All, then, that the advocates of such dismissal have to hope for is that secret instructions may have been sent to the Governor-General to yield to the advice of his Ministers, and consent to the dismissal. But the circumstances all agree in negativing such an idea. As we have already remarked, the reasons for a first refusal still remain powerful as ever. To yield now would be to weaken the influence of the Crown with the Dominion, and establish a most dangerous precedent, against which any British Government, particularly a Tory one, is likely to guard carefully—Then the later Provincial elections at Quebec, and the protest just made by the Parliament of that Province, would make the dismissal of the Lieutenant-Governor, for his defence of the rights and wishes of the people of the Province, a most palpable outrage. These everything seems to point to the probability that Lieutenant-Governor Letellier will not be dismissed.

The House of Commons has voted in favor of the dismissal of the Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec. Though that vote goes for nothing in the constitutional view of the dismissal proposal itself, it still forms a part of the dilemma, into which the Dominion Ministers have got themselves. It was at their instance that their party followers in Parliament voted in favor of the resolution. It was on that resolution that Ministers recommended the dismissal; and it is against that basis for the proposal that the Quebec Parliament complains. Will the Dominion Ministers still press their advice for the dismissal on the Governor-General? Or will they, fearing his steady refusal, drop the matter entirely, for the sake of clinging to office? In the one case, a disagreement with the representative of the Crown, must lead to their resignation. An appeal to the country would now, we feel sure, result in their defeat. But if they cling to office by the shelving of this recommendation for the dismissal of the Lieutenant-Governor, will they be much better off? They will then have a difficulty in appeasing the wrath of their French Canadian following, and also in satisfying the whole party in Parliament, all the members of which were induced to vote for dismissal. Except the slim chance of Lord Lorne now agreeing to the dismissal, the Conservative leaders in Canada have no hope whatever in averting party disaster through their action in this Letellier case.

THE HOLIDAY SEASON.

We are now in what is known as the holiday season, and have, it may be, commenced it without much reflection. The youth who has just been released from the irksomeness of study—and the restraints of teachers, is jubilant, that no more for a time can he be called from his fun and pleasure, to prepare the usual lesson for the morrow. The teacher feels relieved from the care, the worry, and the mental anxiety of the sessions requirements and from the strain that parental expectations, of necessity, must exercise. The parent may have been indulging in exuberant fancies of the high honors and fame, even although confined to the narrow circles of a public school or collegiate institute, that his son or daughter is sure to receive at the closing examinations. The glitter and the show are all taken as indicative of the honorable and useful positions they are certain of attaining to in after years. While, too often, the the whole matter of study, exhibition, preparation and display, is a mere common place idea, to be measured by the dollars and cents that the ratepayers have to pay to keep up the imaginary pageantry of the schools and its closing scenes. The more waggish and cynical may be cruel enough to insinuate that if the ribbons, dresses, mottoes, parade and display were wanting, the remainder might be an imaginary quantity or a surd.

We do not believe that the only end and aim of school life is display, nor do we think that the only finale of all the labor and study and worry of the session, should be the holiday amusements, nor would we endeavor to completely exclude the latter, but there should be earnest enquiry by all concerned, as to the absolute object of education, especially of school education, and how far that has been relatively secured or will be, by the means which the people of Canada have in their wisdom adopted. We may have felt discontentment at the very apparent apathy of trustees, in not attending to the literary examinations of their schools, while they pretend to watch with intense anxiety, the laying out of the cents committed to them, and that may lead to the reflection, is it the laying out of the dollars and cents or the return for them, that should be the greatest care of the trustees? It might be too, that their fondness for outlay is just as potent as their love of income, when the income belongs to the public. The return which the public should receive for the large sums spent in maintaining a costly system of education, deserves much attention and should be anxiously looked after. It is true, that it is more difficult of comprehension as to its money value, than is the more tangible dollar or cent, but it should be capable of expression in some direct or indirect ratio with the outlay, therefore we do expect that those at least who have been watching our outlay shall not be unmindful of the return we are receiving. The people who are the more directly concerned and whose interests are deeper laid, than some of the trustees who can not receive a direct benefit, have corresponding responsibilities which they cannot evade. It is not sufficient to say that they have elected trustees in whom they have confidence; and hence to whom they have delegated parental interests in the education of their children. Parental duties cannot be delegated to commissioners. They are of too much importance to be trifled with, and while in the management of finances, and in engaging teachers, we may employ another, it is still our duty and our interest to see how those delegated powers are exercised. The mental and moral well-being of children are not so easily disposed of or trifled with. These are of more import than the tax paid to support the educational machinery, and it may be that those well able to see after money, do not as well understand mental and physical necessities; hence parents should be mindful that their duties are not ex-

HANLAN'S ARRIVAL.

The reception tendered to Hanlan, on Tuesday, upon his arrival in Toronto was one of the grandest demonstrations ever witnessed in the city. He was met in the harbor by a procession of steamers, yachts, tugs, &c., extending about three miles in length. In the evening a grand reception was given him in the Horticultural gardens, when Mayor Beatty, on behalf of the citizens of Toronto, presented him with an address. The enthusiasm was intense.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The yellow fever panic at Memphis is dying out.

St Catharines will have its civic holiday on Monday, the 11th of August.

Another reform now being agitated, and one that commends itself to public favour is the abolition of personal canvassing.

The wife of General Grant has sent an invitation to the Princess Louise to visit her in Washington next winter.

The Toronto Telegram calls upon clergymen to curtail their sermons on hot Sundays. Not a bad idea, either.

Niagara Town Council has reduced the rate for taxes for 1879 to eleven mills on the dollar. The rate last year was 16 mills.

King Cetewayo will not submit to Lord Chelmsford's terms of peace. The Zulu chief is busy recruiting his army and further hard fighting is anticipated.

—Mr. James Mills, M. A., late Principal of the Brantford Collegiate Institute, has been appointed Principal of the Agricultural College at Guelph.

General Grant, it is stated, will not come to the East until late in the Autumn, although he will arrive at San Francisco in September. He intends to visit the Yosemite Valley and go to Oregon.

The Northwest papers are finding fa ults with the Government because resident farmers, who understood the Indian language, were not appointed to instruct the Indians in farming, instead of those from Ontario.

Here is a hint for the advocates of paper money. Paper brings six cents a pound in Peru until it is made up into money; then if the Boston Post is correct, it decreases in value about fifty per cent.

—London Advertiser: "Will the farmers tell us how much richer they are getting since the change of Government? The views of those who voted for the N. P. would be especially interesting at this time."

On Thursday last, a powder magazine exploded near San Francisco, killing eight and wounding forty others. On Friday, a boiler exploded in New York, killing two men, wounding a number of others, and destroying several buildings.

Says the Barrie Gazette:—It strikes us as decidedly queer that the N.P. should be the means of making things hum in other and many of them insignificant, places, and while it utterly fails to cause even a little buzz in Barrie.

There appears to be an epidemic of wife-beating and wife-murdering just now. Every day we get one or more reports of some brutal or jealous husband pounding his wife into a lifeless lump, or sending a bullet through her heart.

From the police court returns in Toronto there appears to be a great increase in the number of women arrested on charges of drunkenness, and it is a fact that in almost every instance they secure their liquor from unlicensed groceries and grocery stores.

The Home rulers met with a very significant rebuke on Friday in the British House of Commons, a motion expressly declaring confidence in the speaker, moved by Sir. Stafford Northcote and supported by the Marquis of Hartington and Mr. Gladstone, having been carried by a majority of 421 to 20.

And now the Peterboro' Review "calmly and deliberately" squints at Mr. Wallace's "rag baby" while pointing out some of the weak points of that hideous infant. It would surprise no one if Sir John Macdonald were to go in for "irredeemable paper," if he found a new dodge necessary.—Lindsay Post.

Some people have been mentioning Murat Halstead, of the Cincinnati Commercial, as a coming Secretary of the War Department, but Muran don't take the flattering unction kindly. 'I couldn't', he says, 'get the office if I wanted it; I wouldn't have it if I could get it; they would be fools to give it to me if I would take it.

The Bruce Reporter says: Chas Rykert, M. P., and the Hon. Mr. Langevin are shortly to be knighted, it is said. The former for his bold expressions in censuring Vice-Chancellor Blake for attending prayer meeting, and Mr. Langevin for his honesty in putting $32,000 of Sir Hugh Allan's money in his own pocket instead of bribing the electorate.

Dr W. T. O'Reilly of Toronto, has been appointed Provincial Inspector of Insurance Companies for Ontario, in accordance with the act for the Inspection of Insurance Companies, passed last session of the Legislature. Mr Thomas McCrosson of the same city, has accepted the wardenship of the Penetanguishene Reformatory. Both appointments are regarded as very judicious and popular.

A Globe's despatch from Ottawa says: It is understood that the Dominion Government is much alarmed at the ill success of the National Policy, and is considering the best means of supplementing the protective tariff by offering additional inducements for the establishment of manufactures. What shape those inducements will assume has not yet been determined; but whatever the shape, it will be an admission of the failure of the National policy.

—Mr. W. A. Reeve, solicitor for Lennox and Addington, has given his opinion to the county council that a county is not liable for damages to animals consequent upon the fences being taken down along county roads to avoid portions of the roads which were blocked with snow. The person who took down the fence and did not put it up after him would in Mr. Reeve's opinion be liable; and the loss of animals would "be a damage entirely too remote to form a subject of legal liability on the part of the corporation." The point is one of general interest.

The Campbellford Herald says:—By this evening, 10th, the rails of the Grand Junction Railway will have been laid along the entire line to Hastings. The workmen were within a short distance of that village yesterday, and it was their calculation to lay the last rail to-day. During the past week, the ballast train has gone on in uninterrupted course to and from the gravel pit, making a trip every hour and a quarter; and in a day for two it will be assisted in its work by another train. The two trains will then take different parts of the road, and push on the ballasting rapidly. A considerable addition to the number of workmen has been made, so that there cannot be much less than 200 employed. We have not learned definitely when regular trains will commence.

The Telegram takes a very sensible view of the Letellier affair when it says:—"If Lieut-Governor Letellier had not been sustained by the people of Quebec, the Governor-General would have had good ground for turning him out of office. But the Lieut-Governor has been sustained in the most unmistakable manner. His Ministers have not only turned a large majority against them into a small majority for them, but they have carried by-election after by-election in the face of the Dominion Parliament's vote that the act of the Lieut-Governor was unwise. It is a question if it would not be a grave interference with the independence of the Province of Quebec to turn Letellier out, for he has the Legislature of the Province fresh from the people, at his back."

A Question agitating the minds of a number of Conservatives in Toronto is who shall pay the balance of the account yet due for the banquet given by Sir. John A. Macdonald by the working men about two years ago. The amount is rather large, and appeal after appeal has been sent to wealthy knights and rich commoners without success. The matter is likely to be taken into the courts, unless the caterers are at once paid. This is about the way all the workingman's demonstrations in favour of Sir. John are carried through. It is not many years ago since he was made the recipient of a present from the "workingman" of Toronto which caused the Northern Railway to shell out very liberally. Honest mechanics do not thank truckling knights and politicians of unsavory character to trade on the reputation of their industry.

The British Columbians are in no mood apparently to be "put off" on the railway question. Times are hard in the Pacific Provinces, and an expenditure of Dominion money is looked upon as a necessity just now if the people are to remain loyal to the Confederation. The Ministry has promised to build 125 miles during the present year in the Province, and that promise must be fulfilled whether assistance is or is not obtained from England. Canada is told that she can do it herself without impairing her credit or overweighing her revenue. Her assurances have been accepted in good faith, and the Government will be held to them. The Colonist says:—"The new tariff is severely felt by many, but the additional burthen is cheerfully borne in the expectation of the early commencement of railway work."

A New Canadian Loan was placed on the London market last week by Baring Bros., who, with Glynn, Mills & Co., placed the loan of December last. The amount of the loan is the same as that of the last, being £3,000,000, and like the last in the shape of four per cent. bonds. Unlike that of December, however, no portion of it bears the Imperial guarantee. The consequence is that the minimum has been fixed at 95, or 1½ per cent. lower than the last loan, half of which was guaranteed. The present loan is redeemable in twenty years, 1899, whereas the last was for thirty-five years, being redeemable in 1913. There can be no doubt that the present is a much more favorable time for placing a loan than was December of last year.

Mr. Spurgeon having been charged with praying for the downfall of the Government now in power in England, thus answers his accuser, and states his views in his usual unmistakable manner:—

The Sheffield Telegraph charges us with having prayed the Lord to remove the Beaconsfield ministry from power. Not that it can report that we actually said as much, but being able to read our heart, it is sure that it knows our honest meaning, and so it parabraases the few harmless words which we employed. Be it so, Mr. Critic. Your imputation as to our public prayer was most unjustifiable, but you very correctly read the wish of our inmost soul. Our nation once regarded justice and humanity, but its present rulers care little for these things so long as they can annex and conquer. We once hoped that peace was the favorite policy of England, but now Britannia thrusts her fist into everybody's face, and recklessly provokes hostility. The present ministry has sent the nation back half a century as to its moral tone; and it has laid up in the records of divine justice a sad amount of retribution, which is even now in a measure being meted out to the land. Parties are of small consequence to us, but wholesale slaughter brought about by unrighteous plundering ought not to be passed over without remonstrance. A true patriot desires, above all things, to see his nation do justly and love mercy, for only in such a course of action can it expect the favor of heav'n. Believing this, it is our prayer that God may forgive all the present belligerent ministers and either remove them from their offices or reverse their policy. The Sheffield Telegraph thinks that praying upon such matters is a very profane course, of procedure, and favors us with a sage admonition, for which we render all thanks which it deserves. We have long ago ceased to draw a boundary for our religion; we believe that it should enter into everything, and affect all our relationships. If we could not pray over their politics we should doubt their righteous.

Hanlan in New York.

A HEARTY GREETING ON HIS RETURN TO AMERICA.

New York, July 11—Hanlan arrived here this morning by the steamer City of Chester and was warmly welcomed. The steamer was met in the bay early by a revenue cutter, when Major Dilker of the Surveyors' staff, was the first to welcome Hanlan home. When the steamer reached her dock near the foot of Canal street, Hanlan was recognized among the passengers, standing by the rail and was loudly cheered by the committee appointed to receive him. Among these were some of the city aldermen and ex-aldermen.

A few Assembly men, John Hammill, of Pittsburg, brother of the deceased champion, Dion Brocsicault with a delegation from Canada, headed by Mr. D. F. Shaw of the Hanlan Club. Some of the Committee boarded the vessel when she arrived, and extended a hearty welcome to the Champion.

Loud and enthusiastic cheers were given as the champion came off the steamer, and he had no sooner set foot on land than a large crowd of friends gathered about to grasp his hand. Hanlan modestly acknowledged the greeting of his friends, and said he was heartily glad to get home again. He was then escorted to the Fifth Avenue Hotel by Alderman Jacobus and Ex-Alderman Biglin, where he was again welcomed by other friends.

THE INEVITABLE INTERVIEW.

In reply to an agent of the National Associated Press, in regard to the report that he easily out-rowed the English champion, Hanlan modestly replied, "Well, the press seems to think so, but rowing is hard work, which science helps greatly to modify." He further said the voyage from Liverpool was harder on his constitution than his race with Elliott. He was sick during the entire passage, which was rather a rough one. He had not decided what course he would pursue, but did not think he should do any more rowing until the fall. He says the rivers and lakes in England cannot be compared for fast sculling with those in the United States and Canada. But whatever their waters may be, they did not look for warmness of heart and good feeling for conqueror and conquered alike. He had been treated in princely style by all classes.

PROVINCIAL AUTONOMY.

QUEBEC'S DECLARATION UPON IT.

The following resolution was lately carried in both Houses of the Quebec Legislature:—

Moved by the Hon. Mr. Joly, seconded by the Hon. Mr Langelier, and resolved, that an humble address be presented to His Honor the Lieutenant Governor praying that His Honor be pleased to transmit the following to His Excellency the Governor-General: That the Province of Quebec, through its representatives elected to sit in the Legislative Assembly affirms its unalterable devotion to the Crown and to the person of Her Majesty; that this Province is satisfied with the form of Government which it enjoys under the British North American Act, and with the autonomy and self Government secured by it; that while this Province does not seek to encroach upon the jurisdiction of the Federal Government, it expects that its rights will be respected by the Federal Government, and it is the duty of its representatives, to whom it has entrusted the defence of those rights, to protest whenever they are threatened; that the attempt by the Federal Government to dismiss His Honor the Lieut.-Governor of the Province of Quebec on the strength of a party vote of the Commons and Senate is in the present case an encroachment of the rights of the province; that it belongs to the Province of Quebec, directly interested as it is in the results of the DeBoucherville Cabinet, to pronounce judgment on the opportunity and the wisdom of the act of the Lieutenant-Governor, when he took the management of the affairs of the Province from that Cabinet to place it in other hands; that in accordance with the principles of responsible Government the Province pronounced upon the Lieutenant-Governor's act when it passed judgment on the new Ministry, who had assumed the responsibility of it; that the general election resulted in a verdict in favor of the new Ministry, who in the session immediately following succeeded in carrying through this House all the measures introduced by them; that since that session three of the electoral divisions of the Province, viz., St. Hyacinthe, Rouville, and Chambly, have been called upon to pronounce once more on the Lieutenant-Governor's act and they have each ratified their approval of it by large majorities; that this new expression of public opinion carries all the more weight with it from the fact that two of the three electoral divisions called upon to replace Opposition members who had been unseated by the Courts of Justice, reversed their apparent verdict of the 1st May, 1878, by electing supporters of the Ministry; that the approval by this Province to the act of His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor has been too strongly expressed to leave any doubt on the subject and this House, elected to represent the opinion of the people of this Province, thanks his Excellency the Governor-General for his firmness and wisdom in arresting the encroachment attempted by the Federal Government on the rights of this Province, and feels confident that His Excellency will continue with the same firmness and wisdom to acknowledge and protect those undoubted rights.

OTTAWA.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Frequent absence from home has prevented me writing you for sometime past. Just now things political here, are a good deal mixed, and speculation is rife as to what will be developed in the near future. There are a number of questions that vex and perplex the Premier just now, these he might deal with, but the small vexations arising out of the promises made before the election, are hard to bear. The punishment is merited, but it is on that account the most painful. It is said Sir John promised about during the session he managed to put them off on the plea that he was too busy, "wait my dear fellow until after the session, and then I will attend to you, it will be all right." That was the style. The session ended, as all things will end, and since then he has been literally hounded. At his house in the morning, at his office during the day, and again at his house in the evening. The servants deny him at home, the clerks and messengers, at the office. He dare not be seen walking on the street for fear of the office hunting brigade, and the man is expected to be happy, being in the possession of power and a good salary.

A few days ago the Ottawa Citizen—which by the way is supposed to be a government organ—came out with an editorial put in the form of inspired editorials, which was to the effect that right away. Our local politicians were all on the "qui vive," and much speculation was indulged in. Some thought that Sir John had sent Sir Charles and Sir Leonard to England to be rid of them. Here I may say, that it is quite understood that these two gentlemen aspire to the premiership, and expect when Sir John is shelved or translated to the regions beyond, to succeed him. Sir John is quite aware of their aspirations, and speculators on the future of politics, put the thing in this way, Sir John sent Langevin and Abbott home to England ostensibly to get the Letellier matter settled, but his real object was that they might feel the pulse of the statesman at home in the matter of the PRIVY COUNCILLORSHIP.

Abbott, be it remembered, was considerably mixed up in the little Pacific Scandal business. Would they accept the elections as a complete condonement by the people of Canada, and be prepared to swear Sir John in if he came to England? The report of the missionaries don't appear to have been favorable so far. The Conservative party in England don't appear to be in very good odour with John Bull at present. The policy of bluff has not succeeded very well, and the Afghan war and the Zulu difficulty, have been very costly. It is also felt that the matters the government have to deal with in the immediate future, are matters of trade and finance, and naturally turn to Mr. Gladstone and the men surrounding him, to put the nation right, as they are unquestionably the men of talent in finance amongst the statesmen in Great Britain. At present the Conservative government would hardly like to swear in the hero of the Pacific Scandal, and any government that would succeed them would not do it on any terms. Sir John has been and still is ill—he is harassed to death, no peace at home or honor abroad, and may have made up his mind to bring in the Letellier case now, while Sir Charles and Sir Leonard are away. Practically these three men are the government, the other members attend to a little departmental work, consoled by their respective deputy heads, but in executive governmental acts they don't count for much—should Sir John bring on a crisis and the whole government be brought to grief, he would not come out of the affair so badly, he has attained, from the Tory point of view, all he was fighting for in last elections, a condonement by the people of Canada of the Pacific Scandal. It is understood he don't favor the dismissal, as the blow would fall on the followers that have urged him on. There is nothing of promise in the future, and great dissatisfaction with the N.P. in the country generally—an unreasonable and greedy population in the Pacific slope, who want this end of the country to ruin itself for their aggrandisement—personal failing health and great harrassment—who would not want to go into some haven of rest and quiet. Sir John would be in no worse position regarding the Privy Councillorship, perhaps better. If it be true that Sir John does not regard either Sir Charles or Sir Leonard with any particular favor, the speculation may turn out true. The Citizen would hardly have been so pointed as it was without some inspiration, and its editor don't take [illegible] Scott to the Capital, in order to ascertain the nature, of the propositions he has to make, and which, it is understood, are of a character to invite acceptance. If we are not misinformed, the idea is that Peterborough, Perth and Ottawa, should carry on the Eastern Section, conjointly until Toronto chooses to come in (as she certainly will before long) and take a share of the work—also that Ottawa shall have the privilege of assuming one-third of the proprietary interest, and, besides, have one-third of the representation on the Board. On the face of it, this seems a highly favorable arrangement, and, if no sinister influences are at work, similar to those which succeeded in defeating the Toronto By-law, we see no reason to believe that our citizens will not enter warmly into a scheme which is calculated to bring permanent prosperity to a community sadly in need of it.

THE PEOPLE OF ENGLAND

A DECLINING REVENUE,

Rev. Dr. Cumming, the well-known divine, whose prophecies concerning the end of the world have made his name famous, has been ordered by his physicians to discontinue mental work and it is thought he will retire from the ministry. Dr Cummings belongs to the Established Church of Scotland and opposed alike the principle and policy of those who felt it their duty to secede in 1843 and form a seperate communion.

BRITHER SCOTS AT SAN FRANCISCO.

DESCRIPTION OF A SOCIAL GIVEN BY THE CALEDONIA SOCIETY OF SAN FRANCISCO.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER.

DEAR SIR,—I send you to-day, a copy of the San Francisco Chronicle, in the columns of which you will find a report of a social given by the Caledonia Club Society of this city, which was held in the Mechanics' Institute Pavilion, on Friday evening, June 27th. The social was given in connection with the distribution of prizes won at the Caledonian games, the competition for which had taken place a few days previously.

It might not be uninteresting to the members of the St. Andrew's Society in Peterborough, to know how a member of their society, and his wife, were entertained by the Scotchmen and members of the Caledonia Society in San Francisco. Two days previous to the celebration, we had been kindly tendered an invitation, and, on the evening assigned in company with some of our friends, we betook ourselves to the place of the gathering of the clansmen. On entering the pavilion, we were very much taken by surprise at the brilliancy of the spectacle before us. Passing on, we were introduced to a number of ladies and gen'lemen, and strolled around as if in were a common occurrence for us to be in the city, among the bustle and stir of ten thousand people, and under the blaze of countless myriads of gas jets, whose lights reflected from a million glistening drops of water thrown from the throats of merrily playing fountains, and this augmented by a splendid display of flags, statuary, and tropical plants, made a scene quite dazzling to behold. The former portion of the evening was spent in mutual congratulations,—everyone, young and old, seeming to be glad of the opportunity of extending the hand and otherwise showing their pleasure at meeting each other. The broad Scotch and the Gaelic dialects were all that were to be heard on every side. The First Regiment Band has now commenced to play—each member being dressed in full regimentals—a pretty uniform. But the pipers (in full Highland costume) have now arrived, which signifies that the business of the evening has commenced. They are playing the Grand March. Fancy five thousand people forming a march, the pipers and those in Highland costume leading, and going the whole round of the pavilion, which extends from street to street, and five thousand spectators in the galleries, cheering, waving handkerchiefs, &c. It was truly a grand sight! With their glittering swords, dirks, buckles, and ornaments, and those far-famed Highland caps with feathers, how proudly they march 'round and 'round!

"Loved country, when I muse upon
Thy dauntless men of old,
Whose swords in battle foremost shone,—
Thy Wallace, brave and bold,—
And Bruce, who for our liberty,
Did England's sway withstand,—
I glory I was born in thee,
My own ennobled land."

Chief Colin now brought the march to a stand, and mounted the platform, erected in the middle of the pavilion, and informed the assemblage that he would now unveil the prizes, and distribute them forthwith to the fortunate winners. I was introduced to the Chief, who kindly invited me to the stand to inspect the presents. He informed me that they amounted in value to over $3000. After the distribution, dancing was begun, and was kept up with great spirit till the "wee sma' hours." We left early having spent a most enjoyable evening.

Yours &c.,
A MEMBER OF THE PETERBOROUGH ST. ANDREW'S SOCIETY.

The Toronto & Ottawa Railway.

(Ottawa Free Press.)

The letter of "A Citizen" in another column, is one that calls for explanation. It seems that towards the latter end of June, a communication was addressed to the Mayor and Corporation, pointing out the de-irability of taking early action in the way of bringing the Toronto and Ottawa railway project under the consideration of the municipality. It is thought by the promoters that the City of Ottawa and County of Carleton might furnish most of the aid required for the eastern section of the road during the coming summer and fall, so that the Ontario Government might be called upon at the next session of the Legislature to make the requisite grant in aid. The letter in question pointed out to the Mayor and Corporation the desirability of action being taken at once, if the project is to be persevered in, but nothing has been done in the way of bringing the subject before the Council, or calling a public meeting to discuss the propriety, or otherwise, of aiding in the work. It may be that the exigencies of the Government in re the Canada and Atlantic project, are of a character to prevent their supporters in this city from openly encouraging at this moment, the building of the Toronto and Ottawa road. We know that the same influences which have worked—we fear all too successfully—on Sir Charles Tupper, were strong enough to defeat the railway when it was submitted to the ratepayers of Toronto. Are these influences at work with our Mayor and Corporation, or why is it that no action is taken when Mr. Scott of Peterborough, the gentleman who has evinced the greatest interest in the project from the beginning—and he withal a Conservative—asks our City Fathers to consider the question and decide whether they will or will not bring a by-law before the ratepayers to furtherance of a grant in aid? Are we not justified in assuming that the men who were so loud a few months since in favour of the Canada and Atlantic have received an intimation that further pressure may embarrass the Government, and that it is in consequence of that intimation that cold water is now thrown on the still more important project designed to serve as a feeder to the first? Else why the silence of the Corporation and of the Citizen which professed to champion so warmly the interests of the city and of the Ottawa Valley? Has Dr. Tupper bamboozled them all, and is it considered more important to sustain the Government than to secure the carrying out of great works having an important bearing on the interests of every man, woman and child in this city, and we may add hardly less on those of large sections of the Province? We hope to be speedily enlightened regarding the intentions of the Corporation regarding the Toronto road, and trust that within the next few days a public meeting will be held at which the whole subject will be submitted to public discussion. We believe that the present time is specially opportune for taking hold of the Toronto and Ottawa road, and carrying it to a successful conclusion. The Council ought at once to invite Mr.

PETERBOROUGH, JULY 17, 1879.

LOCAL NEWS.

P. P. Items.—The Committee of the Peterborough Protestant Home acknowledge with thanks the receipt of a pair of child's boots from Mr. Oliver.

The Rest.—W. J. Larmour is still monopolizing the very best articles of ladies and gents wear in fine boots and shoes. Full lines of ready-made work at lowest prices.

5. White is now showing very fine lines in boots and shoes. Ladies and children's slippers and light Summer wear is made a specialty and and are sold at such low prices that the public cannot fail in purchasing them.

School Grounds.—The new fence on the north side of the Collegiate Institute grounds is about completed. While it adds considerably to their appearance, the judiciousness of the outlay, this year, is very questionable.

For Europe.—On Tuesday last Judge Dennistoun left town for a pleasure trip to the old Country. On Wednesday of last week Mr. Henry Deane also left for the same place. We wish both gentlemen a bon voyage and a safe return.

New Boat House.—A new floating boat house is being erected for the Peterborough Boating Club for the use of the larger boats. It will be placed at the lower side of the present boat house and will fill a want long felt by the members.

Camping Out.—The camping out season has now arrived and several of our citizens are preparing to spend their holidays on our beach lakes. No other part of the province offer such inducements to sportsmen or those wishing to recuperate their health.

Returned.—Messrs. Edward and Thomas Johnston, who a few weeks ago left on a pleasure trip to Ireland, returned home on Tuesday. The voyage across the Atlantic and air of the "old sod" appears to have agreed with them, as they both look well after their journey.

Re-Opened.—We are pleased to see our old friend, Mr. J. H. Glass, again re-opened in his old stand opposite the post office, where he lately suffered so severe a loss through fire last spring. The stock he has now opened is all fresh, well assorted and is offered at very low prices. Give him a call.

Third Class Examinations.—The examination of candidates for Third Class Teachers' Certificates began in the Collegiate Institute Buildings on Tuesday of the present week, and is still going on. In all there are ninety-two candidates, forty-nine male and forty-three female.

Temperance Lecture.—Remember the temperance lecture by the Rev. F. Chisholm on Monday evening next, in the Hall occupied by Peterborough Temple. Those who failed to hear his masterly exposition on the subject of prohibition, last week, should be present on Monday evening.

Cancelled.—The Midland Railway Company have cancelled the excursion train to Lakefield on Wednesday evening, owing to its not being patronized sufficiently to pay. It is to be regretted that transit arrangements from here to Lakefield cannot be made to accommodate those who desire to spend a day occasionally on our back lakes.

An Impostor.—One of the most accomplished impostors upon Oddfellows, says a London Out., paper, is now ranging the country, bearing the name of John Mason. He has claimed to be a member of Mountain City Lodge, No. 228, of Pennsylvania. He is about 26 years of age, five feet eight inches high, and wears a black moustache. He is well posted in the initiatory degree of the order. Look out for him.

The N.P. and Circuses.—Barnum has advertised in the St. Catharines papers for an exhibition in that city on Monday, July 21st. In a notice at the bottom he announces that this will be his last visit to Canada, as the new tariff amounts to a prohibition, and that he would not come now but for the fact that he does not wish to break his word that he was coming through.

Boating Club.—The members of the Peterborough Boating Club have recently purchased a new four oared shell and have a crew in active training we believe for the fall regatta at Lachine. We hope they will be able to give a good account of themselves when the time comes. The fortnightly races of the club are announced to take place to-morrow evening on the Little Lake, when a number of races will be contested.

Confirmation Services.—On Wednesday evening of last week the Bishop of Toronto administered the rite of confirmation to a large number in St. Luke's Church, and on Thursday evening a similar interesting ceremony took place in St. John's Church. At the close of each service receptions were given the Bishop at the residence of the Incumbent of St. Luke's and the Rector of St. John's, which were largely attended. The churches on both occasions were crowded to witness the services.

No. 2 Ward.—Nominations for candidates to fill the vacancy caused by Councillor Millichamp's resignation as Councillor for Ward No. 2, were held in the Council Chamber on Saturday last, when Mr. W. McSain, Mr. Jas. L. Hughes and Mr. John McClelland were severally proposed. Mr. McClelland being a License Commissioner, is disqualified from election, and consequently resigns the nomination, while we learn Mr. Hughes also, for other reasons, declines the nomination. It is altogether probable that Mr. McSain will be declared elected As an Aldan honest, straight-forward representative no better could be chosen.

Dog Poisoning.—During the past week some person or persons with a mania adverse to canines have set to work upon their wholesale distruction in this town. We learn several valuable animals have been poisoned, among them a favorite hound belonging to Mr. G. B. Sproule, who, as will be seen by advertisement in another column, offers a reward of $25 for the conviction of the party who laid the poison. While we have no doubt but that a large number of the curs with which the streets are infested could be readily done without, measures for their removal should be taken, other than those likely to destroy valuable specimens.

The "National."—The National newspaper seems to have proved a financial failure, as we learn that the publishers, Messrs. Smallpiece & Wright have entered the Insolvent Court. Failures of this sort are always to be regretted, and it is a pity that any newspaper institution should tumble to the ground, of whatever nature its politics may be. We anticipate the time however, when the "National Policy" will break down, leaving its proprietors in bankruptcy, so far as politics opinion is concerned. Under the present circumstances, it is little wonder that the subscribers of the Tory party cry out for the "Rag Baby," and we will not be surprised to see their leaders following in their wake, in order to keep the ship from sinking.

Brantford Institute for the Blind.—We were shown the other day a number of fancy articles in bead work made by Master Willie E. Mitchell, son of Mr. W. H. Mitchell of this town, who has been lately attending the Brantford Institution for the education of the Blind. The precision and neatness with which the work is done is really marvellous, especially where it is made in colours. Among the articles shown us were a vase, pitcher, basket, cup and saucer, tea cosy, napkin ring, emelin, etc. We were also astonished at listening to the perfect manner which he read a lesson from a book in raised characters. Too much cannot be said of the training received at this Institute, and the success attending the labor of those in charge speak volumes for the successful management.

Deputy Judge.—It is currently rumored that Mr. R. E. Dennistoun has been appointed to the office of Deputy County Judge.

Personal.—Mr. Hinman, Manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, left on his summer holiday's yesterday, and will be absent about two weeks.

Personal.—Mr. W. A. King returned home on Tuesday from the North West Provinces, where he has been prospecting during the past two or three months.

Singers.—Messrs. T. W. Robinson & Co. have just to hand a large stock of Redpath's sugars - extra quality and value. Read their advertisement in another column.

Personal.—Miss Jessie F. Brown, daughter of Mrs. E. Brown, of this town, has successfully passed the professional examination at the Toronto Normal Model School.

Y. M. C. A. Excursion.—We understand that the Cobourg Y. M. C. A. intend having a grand excursion to Rochester on the 25th July, per steamer Norseman. Return tickets good for four days, from Peterborough, Lindsay and Omemee, to Charlotte and return $2.60 From Millbrook and return $1.65. This will give all an opportunity of visiting the beautiful city of Rochester.

Agents Representatives.—Among those occupying positions on the Steamer Chicora, as representatives of the agents interests, besides the Reception Committee at the Hanlan reception, at Toronto on Tuesday, we find reported in the Globe the following :—J. J. Lundy, Mayor of Peterborough; H. Calcutt, Wm. Chamberlain, Harry Le Brun, and Archibald Moffat, all of Peterboro.

Forty Days Rain.—If the following old Anglo-Saxon rhyme is correct we may look forward to an extremely rainy harvest :—

"St. Swithin's day, if thou dost rain,
For forty days it will remain.
St. Swithin's day, if thou be fair,
For forty days 'tis ruin no mair."

Tuesday was St. Swithin's day, and dealers in umbrellas and waterproofs, smile with gladness at the prospect of a brisk trade in these articles.

Improvement of Theatres.—The following resolution of thanks has been handed us for publication, by Mr. W. N. Graham, secretary of the celebration committee :—

"The committee appointed by the Loyal Orange Lodges of Lakefield, at a meeting held on the evening of the parade held on July 12th, 1879, in celebrating the Anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne, beg to express their hearty and sincere thanks to the Captains of the steamers Chippewa and Cruiser, and those under them, for the affable and courteous attention to every request of the committee, and the desires of all the patrons of the celebration. The celebration was a success in every Way, and the pleasure of the day was largely due to the courteous attention of the officers of the steamers."

Weights and Measures.—We understand that Mr. Cahill will be gazetted shortly as one of the Deputy Inspectors of Weights and Measures for this district, at a salary of $600 and expenses. The reason for the "remodelling of the Weights and Measures Act is now beginning to be seen. It is, in fact, simply an indirect pretext to dismiss Reform officials and appoint Conservatives in their places. Suppose reductions of staff were necessary, (and any reductions will probably be found to be but temporary alleviations of the public burdens), the old official should have had the first chance for such appointments as that now given Mr. Cahill. With the appointment of Mr. Cahill, since Mr. Hall has been removed, if the Conservatives are satisfied, we have no comment to make, as he has stood by the Conservative party here through good and evil repute.

Canadian Press Association.—The annual meeting of the Canadian Press Association takes place at Kingston, on the 22nd inst. It is proposed to "do" the "limestone city" before leaving it, taking in the Penitentiary, the Military College, and the Lunatic Asylum. The Picton and Bills may be visited, and a trip up the Kingston and Pembroke Railway will also likely be included before the green party go down among the islands of the St. Lawrence and revel in their beauties. Rev. J. F. Dayan, of Thousand Island Park, has promised to make it pleasant for the members of the Fourth Estate who may take part in the excursion. Steamers Bay and Brockville will also be taken, and a run down the river to Montreal, over the Lachine Rapids, will prove most enjoyable. The party may return by the Occidental Railway, visiting the capital, and then to the front again by the St. Lawrence and Ottawa or Canada Central Railway.—Post.

Vacation in Schools.—The usual discussion is now taking place among a certain portion of our citizens as to the proper vacation to be allowed to the teachers, and the usual talk as to the advisability of its being shortened is indulged in. But the sound and common sense view has prevailed that with these useful public servants a large part of their usefulness depends on their invention and freshness of view, and these qualities are just such as would be ruined by drudging labor in school during the hot months. Their compensation is moderate for their trying labor. They deserve the summer holiday which custom every where secures to the teacher and clergyman. The children, too, do well know on do little school work of any value in July and August. The heat and close atmosphere, the long previous strain on the brain, and the abounding summer maladies entirely unfit the majority of children for any useful school labor in hot months.

The Wheat Markets.—It is now apparent that the wheat crop of Europe will be this year a good deal under the average. The wet season has damaged the grain seriously, both in Great Britain and France, and in the latter country—which usually grows wheat for export—it is estimated that a hundred million bushels must be added to meet the home demand. In Russia the crop has suffered seriously by the attacks of insects, and bad reports come from all the wheat growing sections of the continent. These reports have already influenced the the English market, and within the past week prices have been steadily advancing. While in the next two months it is safe to predict a considerable rise in wheat, and the shipment of large quantities to the European markets. The crop here and in the United States will yield above an average, the average is greater than in any former year, and the season so far is very favorable for harvesting operations. The Canadian and American farmers, therefore, are likely to realize well this year, and in spite of the restrictions put upon commerce, the period of returning prosperity appears to be close at hand. We test is weighed, and whatever else is the product of labor is weath; high tariffs, on the other hand, only handicap labor and diminish profits. The good harvests of 1878 and 1879 have done more to remove the commercial depression than could be done by all the "National Policies" which the wit of man ever invented.

NEBS MENTIONS.

—Black and red raspberries are plentiful in the market.

—Merchants who advertise liberally are doing an increasing business.

—How is it that the summer always goes so quickly?—Because there is often an evening mist.

—There is reason to believe that there is quite as large an amount of graft on land as on water.

—The dictionary defines dulcet as sweet; but then you can hardly call a dull-sot saw sweet music.

—He was an observer of very animated nature, who spoke of a June fly as a mosquito with a trail.

—"The Protracted Delusiveness of the Delusion," is the title of an article in the Cobourg World. The N. P. is referred to.

—The rains are over, and the sun again sheds his beams upon a hot, though moist world. The granger rejoices as he goes out into his wheat, and the corn takes new heart and humps itself. Weather is an excellent institution.

—Now is the time when the "average" house holder trembles at the receipt of wall-tinglingness envelopes bearing one cent stamps. Half-yearly accounts are, during these hard times, treated in a Parliamentary manner and "put under consideration"—where they usually remain.

—Now is the time when the average young man debates in his own mind whether, after all, the civilized life—so called—of the nineteenth century is more conducive to happiness than the life led by our fathers centuries ago, and as the aforesaid young man prepares with fishing tackle, gun, tent canvas, &c., to depart on some Nomadic expedition, we find that the debate has been decided against civilization.

Indian Depredations.

The fair reader shudders when she thinks of the scalper's with watching from the door of her rude hut, the retreating form of her husband going out to his daily labor—going out perhaps to return not again, for before nightfall a savage [illegible] have sent him [illegible] to the happy hunting ground. BATTLE OF THE BOYNE.

Celebration of the 12th in Port Hope.

The anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne was this year celebrated by the brethren of Peterborough in Port Hope. Shortly before nine o'clock the members formed in procession at their Hall on Water Street and headed by the Fire Brigade Band marched along Water, Murray, George and Charlotte Streets to the station, where a special train was in waiting for them. In point of numbers the "turn out" was very much below the average of former years, the True Blues and Orange Young Britons being the only lodges in which a full representation was made. The pic-nic celebrations at Lily Wild and Stony Lake no doubt accounted for the sparseness of the display.

Arriving in Port Hope at 11.15, they in company with the brethren from Lindsay, Omemee, Emily and Cavan, were escorted to the Market Square, where a monster procession was formed in the following order :—

Union Jack.
Omemee Band.
Grand Lodge, County and District Officers.
Emily District.
Lindsay District.
Peterborough Fire Brigade Band.
Peterborough District.
Millbrook Brass Band.
Cavan District.
45th Battalion Band.
Cobourg Orange District.
Fountain Hose Band.
Cobourg and Grafton Orange Young Britons.
Cobourg Prentice Boys.
Jones' Fife and Drum Band.
Hope District.
45th Battalion Band.
Port Hope District.

After marching through several of the principal streets, the procession returned to the Market Square, when the brethren separated for dinner.

At 2.30 they reformed again and marched to the Town Park, where addresses were delivered by Rev. Dean Allen, Rev. W. E. Best, John Benvenet, Esq., M.P.P., A. McQuade, Esq., M. P., Lieut-Col. Williams, M.P., D. Marshall Esq., Grand Master, Eastern Ontario, and others. At the conclusion of the addresses the brethren were escorted to the pic-nic quarters, where dinners were given for the Queen, the visiting brethren and the Port Hope Orangemen. The procession was one of the largest ever witnessed in Port Hope, and the celebration passed off in every way creditable to the members of the Association.

IN TORONTO.

The weather was fine and the Orange procession was the largest that has been seen in the city for years. Messrs. Johnston and Chambre, the Irish delegates, rode in a carriage in the middle of the procession, being accompanied by the highest officers in the Order. Lodges were present from Hamilton, Brantford Brampton and other places. Not the slightest breach of the peace occurred, and all seemed in the best of humor.

In the afternoon an immense concourse of people gathered in the Queen's Park, where addresses were made by Bros. W. Johnston, Hunt W. Chambre (the Irish delegates,) W. J. Parkhill, M.P.P., R. Bell, M.P.P., Hon. Alex. Morris M.P.P., Rev. A. H. Baldwin, Rev. Dr. Potts, Rev. R. A. Hilkey, Rev. W. H. Poole, Mr. E. F. Clarke, and others. The principal themes of the speakers was liberty of religion, and all agreed that the time must come when Orangemen shall be as free to come and go in Montreal as the Roman Catholics are in Toronto. The streets were thronged all evening, but more complete order never prevailed on the fall of the Twelfth of July.

Archbishop Lynch was noticed in the Park during the Orange celebration.

IN MONTREAL

As had been prophesied the Orange anniversary passed off very quietly in this city, there being scarcely a single quarrel to record. In the evening the members of the order began to assemble before their hall on St. James street to attend the mass meeting which opened at eight o'clock. A strong patrol of police was on duty and effectually prevented crowds from gathering near the hall. The attendance at the meeting was very large, Mr. David Great, County Master, in the chair. Addresses were delivered by the chairman and other officers of the order, all being to the effect that the cause of liberty won'd assuredly triumph, and that walking in Montreal was but a question of time. There were a large number of people on the street when the meeting dispersed, but no trouble whatever occurred.

THE GROCERY AND LIQUOR TRADE.

Messrs. Rush & Elliott's Establishment.

There can be no genuine success achieved without persevering effort and hard continued work. Cases may be cited, indeed, where men have suddenly sprung to eminence in both professional and business pursuits (either through extraordinary abilities, or a "stroke of luck"), but these are purely exceptional cases, and affect not in the slightest the position which we have just assumed. No well-balanced mind (and more particularly in hard times, such as these), would launch a project relying solely or in any considerable measure on the chapter of good fortune for its success : if he did do so the chances are that time would not be slow in teaching him a salutary lesson on the principles of success, and it is probable that the majority of those lamentable failures in business, the intelligence of one or more of which the press furnishes us with almost daily, are attributable to the violation of the rule set forth above.

As instances of the truth of our position, viz : that hard work is necessary to the achievement of success, many cases could be pointed out if our mind, and none, perhaps, more striking than the subject of our present writing. While a few years ago Messrs. Rush & Elliott were clerks in the wholesale grocery and liquor lines, that is superior to many, and not inferior to any of the older houses in town. Commencing on comparatively short a time since, and on no moderate a scale, they have by the exercise of an untiring energy, and an integrity that gave to each customer the best value for his money, constructed a business that has now o'er-stept the confines of a merely retail trade and vaulted into the loftier sphere of wholesale transactions. When Messrs. Rush & Elliott laid it down as a rule of their business that no stock should be bought till there was in the till the where with to pay for that stock, they adopted a principle, the transgression of which has brought, and will bring, ruin to many an earnest and honest endeavor to do well. It is a well known fact that throughout the entire country there are scores and hundreds of stores which, starting with a limited capital and a practically unlimited stock, have gradually fallen behind in their payments, till they have now become but mere dispensers of goods for some sharp and far-seeing wholesale house, which has merely to press its thumb to blink the concern out of existence—into the insolvency court. Messrs. Rush & Elliott were shrewd enough to avoid this, and we see the result—eminent prosperity achieved amid times of eminent adversity,—and the concluding step which they have yet to take is the adoption of the cash system as well in selling as in buying —a system which "all the world" believes in, but which "all the world," also, seems to reject.

As business increased with them they have not been slow to improve and beautify their shop, which could now scarcely be recognized as that in which they started in business. To the passer-by, the first change noticeable is the new handsome plate-glass windows recently inserted, which give the establishment so much of its livy city business appearance. Nor is this appearance confined alone to the front, but extends throughout the shop,—from front to rear, from cellar to garret. In every particular is the practical business taste of the firm perceptible.

The presence of such a firm as Messrs. Rush & Elliott in our midst is not only a matter of profit to itself, but also to the whole community; for a good seller will often bring as many purchasers to a town as a good buyer will bring sellers. Messrs. Rush & Elliott are prosperous, and their prosperity should excite no envy : for it has been gained by the observance alone of the principles of sound business economy.

Accident at Orillia.

ORILLIA, July 13.—Mr. Fred Haskell, conductor of the Midland railway, met with a serious accident here on Saturday afternoon. While assisting in making what is termed among railroad men "a double shunt," by some means Haskell lost his footing and fell from the top of a car to the track while in motion. He by wonderful presence of mind, succeeded in keeping himself clear of the wheels and breaks while four cars which followed passed over him. The brake rod of the fifth and last car of the train, however, caught him and partly forced his body on the rail. Three fingers of the right hand and part of his right foot were taken off by the wheel, and his left arm was broken in two places. He was carried to an adjoining hotel and Doctors Corbett and Sanderson were called to attend the sufferer, who today is reported to be slowly improving, but not beyond danger. The injured man resides at Port Hope, and is the only support of aged parents. He was making his best trip as conductor when he met with the accident.

RAILWAYS AGAIN.

To the Editor of the Examiner :

DEAR SIR,—May I be allowed space in the columns of your valuable paper to give my views on a subject which has agitated the public mind here for a number of years past ; viz., the promotion of the prosperity of the Town. Many enterprises have been schemed, such as encouraging home manufactories by way of bonus, the building of waterworks, and railways, &c., —and all have failed. Lately I see your contemporary, the Peterborough Times, striking out in the right track—advocating the building of gravel roads. But what is the use of laying out one cent for roads, except to keep those in our own municipality in proper repair ; and what right have we to meddle with the roads outside that circle ! Give the farmers a good market, and he will find the waggon and the road. Nor can it be said that our roads are, for many miles around Peterborough, in a bad condition, —except for a short time in the fall and spring, —and of what use would gravel roads be in winters like the last, when snow drifts were worse than bad roads in the worst of seasons ! Was there ever greater inconsistency exhibited, than in the writings of the Times, on questions of no weighty importance to Peterborough ! As I am a reader of all the Town papers, and take a lively interest in the leading questions in our municipality, I find it strange that your contemporary should come out so strong a supporter of the building of the Toronto & Ottawa Railroad at first, and then the same project is condemned and gravel roads substituted, as being far more suitable and cheaper ; thus dropping short this subject, nothing will save Peterborough but a bonus of $75,000 to the Grand Junction R. R. How to account for such rapid changes, the astronomers may be better able to explain than I am, as they assert by calculation, that the near approach of several planets to each other will cause much sickness and death. Mark the great increase of medical men and druggists in our midst, to be on hand in time of need. I am sorry for the Editor of the Times ; but the astronomers have said so—they ought to be burnt up with fire and brimstone like the witches, for causing such commotion. As I see that pet scheme, the Grand Junction, is before our Town Council, I feel it my duty as a ratepayer to warn them against such a large outlay of money, for which Peterborough will derive no benefit, as the Grand Junction will form part and parcel of the Grand Trunk R. R. If the two roads wish to extend their lines to Peterborough, for which Peterborough County is pledged with a liberal bonus, nobody will object to it ; but to saddle the Town with such a debt would be the greatest folly. Let no man suppose that he can reap without sowing ; we may now the seed where it will not even sprout. As for the Cobourg Road, for which Peterborough has voted $60,000, I hold, although this bonus is legally forfeited by lapse of time, Peterborough is morally bound to vote the amount when the bridge is completed, as unforseen circumstances prevented the Company fulfilling their contract, although a foolish undertaking from the beginning. As Peterborough has failed in constructing a railroad leading to the back country, whereby Peterborough would have been benefitted to a greater extent than Lindsay is now. Nothing remains for us but to unite in one effort to build the Ottawa & Peterborough road, connecting with the Midland. As this road will be the great highway for the western supplies, therefore it is of the greatest importance, that this line should be an independent one, competing with the Grand Trunk Railway. I have been from the outset averse to a connection with Toronto, and our interests are much interwoven with the Midland, we cannot but wish that road all success after the efforts it has shown in a time of such depression. If on the other hand, Toronto wishes a connection for pushing her trade towards the east, why should we contribute to an undertaking whereby that city only is the gainer—doing the trade of the country. I cannot see why Bobcaygeon should feel more despondent about railroad matters than Peterborough. Why should Bobcaygeon not as well have a connection with the Peterborough & Ottawa road, as with the Grand Junction ?

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your kindness, I remain,

Yours, &c.,
W. LECH.

NORWOOD.

(From our own Correspondent.)

—Our village has been graced for the past week with the presence of J. C. Brown, Esq., Public School Inspector for the County. We rather like Mr. Brown down here. Did you ever see our school masters ? During the past two months a change was made in our Educational staff ; but previous to that we had a rare collection—Mr. Houghton, the man of classics and language infinite—description impossible—must be seen and heard to be enjoyed. Mr. Troy—a rara avis—he has left. Mr. Dewart, the politic domicile, too well known as a pedagogue, politician, and parson, to need description. No wonder our school is successful.

—On Friday morning our citizens, at least those whose ears were Hastingsward, heard what they conceived to be a prolonged caterwaul. During the day some witnesses asserted it to be Bickford's shriek as he entered Hastings astride the iron horse. All doubt was set at rest the next morning, when a gentleman from Hastings, smiling till his ears were in danger, came to Norwood with a bogyful of the genuine article—not caterwaul —not Bickford shriek—but, real locomotive whistle—don't doubt me, I saw the gas and heard the man blow myself

—Norwood Loyal Orange Lodge No. 54, with other Lodges, celebrated the anniversary of the Boyne, at Warsaw. Our Band, under the leadership of Mr. John Harper, furnished music for the Norwood crowd and for all others who wished to listen. There were some fifes on the grounds at Warsaw, and some drums too —oh those drums and drummers. Did you ever see—for hear you could not—one drummer undertake 'to drown' another on one of these days ? If you have you will never speak of the roar of Niagara again. One thing is very apparent to all who have had the opportunity of comparing the more recent demonstrations with those of years gone by, namely, the vast improvement made in these celebrations of late years. In those good old times whiskey galore was one important element. Not so, now. The Orangemen from here went away sober, they were sober at Warsaw, and they came home in good time, sober. In the days of yore everybody kept the day, women and men. There you might have seen Jerusha Maria, arrayed in her most gorgeous apparel and bedecked in her most costly jewels, leaning on the arm of Benjamin Alexander. Was it not so, and that said Ben. Alex. would tempt his Maria, forget his white pants and new coat (store made) would forget all in the fumes of forty-rod, and too often roll in the ditch. Now, our young ladies stand on the sidewalk and gracefully smile and perhaps present an Orange Lily as he passes in the procession. The world moves and in the right direction. We had the best speaking at Warsaw I ever heard on a 12th of July, no rant, no blood and thunder—I think I new our own Warsaw correspondent on the ground and must not entrench—The Belmont Lodges went to Blairton. There was a large gathering at Warkworth likewise. During the absence of the Orangemen Norwood was tranquil. How our business men tried to pass the time : now on the corner spinning yarns, now parading the streets under an umbrella, now playing croquet. Now a customer appears in the street, have you seen been when yearning, gather round their queen ! Have you seen cashier at a railroad station go for a thrasher ! Have you seen a boat agent seize a passenger !—such grip—then you'll understand the elasticity of that poor customer.

—We had a local preacher, Mr. Fairbairn to officiate for us in our Presbyterian Church, Sunday. Rev. T. F. Fotheringham, the pastor, is just now having a holiday. Did not hear Mr. F., but understand he spoke well. Text in the afternoon not again heard ; perhaps I BUFFALO, Dec. 27, 1878.

Mr. H. R. Stevens :—

Dear Sir,—I reside at No. 765 Niagara Street, of this city. I am 63 years of age. For several years past I have been in feeble health. My complaint I take the doctors call Dyspepsia, Diseases of the Spleen. At times I suffered severe pains in my side and back and a number of remedies witnessed were tried and relief. My attention was called to your advertisements of Vegetine in our paper. I made up my mind to try the Vegetine, and bought some. To succeed so well as from the first, and in a short time my health improved. I have used a number of bottles, and am now enjoying better health than I have for a number of years. I have recommended the Vegetine to my sister and also several acquaintances, and they have used it with equally good results. It is the first medicine for Nervousness and General Debility of the System that I ever of, and I do with great confidence recommend it to all my friends as a good medicine. I would also state that for a great many years I have been a sufferer from Rheumatism, and since I commenced using the Vegetine I have had but very little trouble from it.

Yours, very respectfully,

MORE VALUABLE THAN GOLD.

Sciatica Rheumatism, Kidney Complaint.

McGregor, Iowa, Nov. 11, 1878

Mr. H. R. Stevens :

Dear Sir,—About the first of November, 1876, I was attacked with what is termed Sciatica Rheumatism, commencing in the hip joint and extending to my ankles, which at times was very painful, causing insomnia and preventing sleep at night, and at times preventing me from labour of any kind. After applying different remedies of almost every kind recommended, I could get no relief. I then commenced using your Vegetine about the first of March and, and have continued to use it until the present time. Now I have no symptoms of the Rheumatism left, in fact I think myself entirely cured. My age is 49 years. I therefore take great pleasure in recommending it to all who may be afflicted with the terrible disease.

I have been troubled with Kidney Complaint for several years. Have taken the Vegetine and am completely cured of the Kidney Complaint. To any person suffering as I have, every drop of this good medicine is more valuable than its weight in gold.

Yours truly,
ALONZO COLE.

I know the man to be a truthful, reliable man.

LUNG DISEASE.

Selma, Ala., May 12, 1872.

H. R. Stevens, Boston :—

Dear Sir,—I take pleasure in recommending your Vegetine. I have been suffering for a long time with the Lung Disease ; trying every kind of medicine that I could get, but none seemed to do me any good, until I tried your great Vegetine remedy. I had used it only a short time before I could discover a very great change in my health for the better. I don't consider that your medicine has its equal, for the diseases which you propose to cure, especially the disease that I have been afflicted with.

DEAD SEA FRUIT.

'There is nothing so supreme as beauty,' said Coralie, as she threw back her lovely head.

'But youth is fleeting,' said Caryl, her lover, 'and we must think of the future.'

She laughed, with a ring of scorn in the music of her laughter.

'I have no fear of the future,' she said gayly. 'Why should I have? I am twenty years old; you tell me—every one tells me—I am beautiful. I have suitors and admirers on every hand. My days are full of ease and pleasure, my nights of excitement and delight. I have money enough to satisfy every need, and when all these things—pleasure, travel, admiration—fail, then I have a lover whom I shall wed, and he the proudest and richest lady in the land. Why should I fear the future?'

Caryl McVane took his sweetheart's hand and kissed it subtly.

'Your life is indeed a bright one,' he said, 'but you do not count my great love among your treasures and blessings, Coralie.' And there was a shadow on his fine face.

'But I appreciate it, Caryl. Only you know I am used to being loved. I am very proud of my noble lover, and owe my father and yours a thousand thanks for betrothing us in our infancy. But you must not urge me to an early marriage. We are both young—you are but two years my senior—and why think of marriage for at least five years? Let me enjoy to the utmost the spring and summer of my beauty.'

He smiled sadly.

'You mean by that, let your thousand and one admirers live in the light and warmth of your springtime and summer, and let your husband take the autumn and winter of your life. Is that quite fair, Coralie?'

She arched her beautiful head and her lip curled.

'O, Sir, Caryl, I did not think you were jealous,' she said.

'No matter how many admirers I have, you know very well I am above any deceit or untruth. I shall be as faithful to you as the stars in heaven. I shall not even flirt. Miss knew that I am betrothed to you. I make no secret of it. But put they follow me, and praise and flatter, and make fools of themselves. I mean to spend next winter in the East; my next in Washington, and then go to Europe. When I have tired of all these places, I will come back to you, and set the day for the nuptials. Let it satisfy you to know that I am admired and happy until that time.'

The sunlight of a June day fell like a halo on her rich hair. She lifted up her eyes and stood like a glowing breathing statue under the summer skies.

A young man's first fiery passion for a beautiful woman burned in the heart of Caryl McVane. He looked upon her with ardent, glowing eyes. She was his promised wife, and for two years he had been pleading with her to name the day. He had been in college and afterward in Germany until two years ago, so they had scarcely met since childhood until then. Both had dreaded the meeting and both had been happily surprised. Caryl found Coralie a poet's dream of youth and beauty, and fell ardently in love. Coralie found Caryl a very fine appearing and exceedingly stylish young man, with a large fortune and a good social standing, and she was satisfied to be his promised wife.

As he stood and looked upon her, crowned by the sunlight, his heart rose and almost suffocated him with its passionate throbs. He almost heard the sunbeams as they lovingly fondled her.

'You have not the faintest conception of a love like mine,' he cried, 'or you would not be so cruel.'

She shrugged her beautiful shoulders.

'You have made me love you by every means in your power,' he said. 'You have increased my passion tenfold. There is no happiness in the world for me now, out of your presence, and yet you calmly bid me wait five or six years for the fulfillment of our betrothal, and plan out your after years of absence and pleasure, apart from me. You are cruel, Coralie.'

She turned toward him and threw back her head.

'Look at me,' she said; 'I am twenty years old and the most beautiful woman you ever saw. The rich blood of perfect health and perfect youth runs riot through every vein. Life is at its height; joy dwells with me. Shall I give it all up—youth, beauty, health and perhaps life itself—to please your selfish whim? Who ever saw a wife with my bloom, my abundant health, my beauty? I tell you domestic life robs us of these things. Ten women out of twelve give beauty, health, happiness away when they give up their freedom. I will not do it until I have had my day. There is no love great enough to recompense me for the loss of all these. You say I cannot conceive of a love like yours. Well, I never want to if it makes me selfish.'

He had grown very white while she was speaking. But he only bowed gravely when he was done, and said in a low voice:

'I beg your pardon, Coralie; I will never urge you to be my wife again. I will never mention the subject till you do.'

She looked at him in surprise, a little startled at his manner and words. But he gave her his arm and walked in silence to the house. Then he bent down and kissed her softly and walked away.

When they met at the tea-table he was social and talkative, but she missed his ardent glances and ownership manner. He treated her as an ordinary friend might.

That night there was a moonlight rote on the lawn. It was a grand affair, and a dozen or more were down from the city. Coralie was the centre of attraction. Admirers thronged about her. Caryl was polite—no more. He seemed to find most pleasure in escorting little Mabel Lee, the housekeeper's little 10-year old daughter, about the grounds, and in watching her childish pleasure. But once when Coralie stood the centre of a gay group, laughing merrily, she caught his eye, and was satisfied.

'He is burning with his mad love,' she said; 'I need not fear. He will wait until I am ready.'

A few weeks later Caryl went away upon a fishing excursion. The truth was, he could not endure being so near and yet so far from the woman of his love. Coralie knew it, and was gratified.

Soon after his return she went East. She wrote often, and her letters were full of her triumphs and pleasures. Caryl replied with kind, chatty, friendly letters, in which an occasional sentence would creep expressive of his unabated love.

Coralie remained in the East the next summer, and went to the White Mountains and to Newport with a party of friends. Caryl joined her for a few days.

The next winter she spent in Washington, and Caryl spent a week with her there. It was the same old story—the feast for the multitude of admirers, the crumbs for her lover. His business required constant attention, and he was not sorry. He found it little more than an agony to be with Coralie and feel himself forced to be silent.

So he was glad to be in a measure tied to his business, and away from her. He was not jealous by nature, but the sight of her surrounded by other men, to whom she lent such a willing ear, while he, her promised husband, was compelled to be almost silent in her presence, was maddening.

The next summer Coralie went to Europe with a fashionable and wealthy Washington lady.

'She intends remaining abroad several years,' said Coralie to Caryl, 'and I think I am so fortunate to have made her acquaintance. But Providence has always been good to me.

'Under the protecting wing of such a chaperon, I shall have the loveliest time possible. She owns a villa in Florence, and spends most time there, and it is open to guests in London, where she sits 'ruling the roost.' Now, Caryl, dear, can you not pause to think of all my triumphs? Wake to me often, won't you?'

[illegible] a year absent, she wrote to him in one of her letters:

'Oh, Caryl, dear, you cannot know of half my happiness. My dreams are more than realized. I am the rain wherever I go. But, though I have two excellent offers of marriage—one with a title—I would not for the world marry a foreigner. There is something unwillingly distasteful to me in the idea of marrying out of one's own country. I don't see how American girls can do it. I like to be a belle here, but when I am ready to settle down I want it to be in my own land, with my own countrymen.'

But she was not ready to settle down. Caryl knew that very well.

The next year his mother—Coralie's foster-mother as well—died. He was left alone with the housekeeper and her daughter Mabel, now a slip of a girl 13 years old. More than ever he longed for Coralie and a home. He wrote her of his loss and loneliness, but did not ask her to return. Yet he had a secret hope she might. He opened her letters with trembling hands. She expressed sincere sorrow for the death of his mother, and was full of sympathy and love, but did not speak of her return. They were going to Switzerland in a few days.

He dropped the letter and buried his face in his hands, and the tears fell through upon the letter that had done so much toward slaying a strong love.

A soft step sounded near, a gentle hand fell upon his bowed head, a sweet, tremulous voice whispered, 'I am so sorry for you, Caryl—so sorry for you. Mamma and I both miss your dear mother, and we will do all we can to make your life bright.'

It was Mabel Lee, the housekeeper's daughter.

* * * * * * *

Coralie had been in Europe almost five years when she wrote she was coming home. The last year had been a hard one for her. She had stayed in Rome too long one summer and had fallen ill of a low fever. It had never left her, though as soon as she was able she had travelled from place to place, trying to regain her old health. She was worn and depleted with a winter's dissipation in London when the fever took hold of her, and it made fearful inroads upon her beauty. It chilled her with a dread alarm when she looked in the mirror and saw the wan face and wasted form of her once radiant self.

Her fine bloom was entirely gone, and there were actually hollows in her cheeks. She was too languid to care for festivities, and besides, she was tated. She thought of home and Caryl with sudden, hungry longing.

'I am coming back to you, Caryl,' she wrote, 'to stay with you always, if you want me. You have been a dear, patient boy, and I realize your worth since my sickness as I never did before. I fear I have been selfish to make you wait so long, and I wonder now how I could do it. It is strange, Caryl, but ever since I was taken ill a year ago I have felt myself falling in love with you. Although separated by such width of land and sea, and with five years lying between us, I yet have felt as if you were with me and I were for the first time learning the worth of your love. All your words and acts have recurred to me over and over, and I find more happiness in remembering your words of love than in all the praises of the world so lavished upon me. I have been so eager for your letters the last year and I never had so few, nor were they ever so cold, as they have been during a twelvemonth past. But I cannot blame you. I silenced you love-words long ago—seven long years ago—and no wonder you write rarely and coldly. But I am coming home, Caryl, and will never leave you again.'

She sailed the next week for America. The voyage was a rough one and she was deathly ill. As she lay in her berth one thought burned like fire in her heart and brain. She was going back to Caryl—to Caryl, her lover. This bore her up out of death's reach like angel arms.

When she reached her old home Caryl was not there to receive her. He had been called suddenly away by a business telegram, to be absent a week or more.

It was just as well, she thought, as she looked in her mirror. Ill and worn from sickness and travel, there was scarcely a vestige of her former beauty left. Her form was thin, her cheeks hollow, her face gray with a sickly pallor, and a strange look of care about her mouth. She would sleep and rest, and gain color and strength by the time Caryl came.

Two weeks went by, and the housekeeper treated Coralie like a pet child, and Mabel made her lie upon the lounge while she waited upon her. Coralie plied her with questions concerning Caryl.

'Was he changed—had he grown older—did he talk of her?'

'No, never'—and Mabel's eyes drooped.

'That is well,' thought Coralie. 'Men do not talk of things most dear to them.'

Suddenly she said:

'You have grown very pretty, Mabel, did you know it?'

Mabel blushed scarlet. 'No one ever told me so,' she answered.

'That is strange,' said Coralie; 'I wonder Caryl never told you—but I suppose you are still a child to him. You must be nearly 17, Mabel.'

'Seventeen last month.'

'Just ten years my junior,' said Coralie and sighed, she could not tell why.

One day there came a telegram. Caryl was coming home.

Coralie arose from the lounge where she had been lying, and began to make her toilet. In all her life she had never felt so anxious and excited about her personal appearance.

She chose a delicate, pale blue robe, one that had been very becoming to her in her health. She arranged her beautiful and still plentiful hair in the manner Caryl had liked of old—and then she threw open the blind and let in a flood of warm, clear sunlight upon herself as she stood before the mirror. She used to do that in days gone by and glory in the beauty that showed no flaw. But now—ah! the sunlight was cruel, cruel. It showed the thin figure, with all its lack of rounded outlines. It showed the wasted cheeks, the flesh with that gray look of middle life upon it; the cruel little lines about the mouth and eyes. Ah, God! she was no longer young; no longer beautiful. Would Caryl still love her?

Just then she heard a cry, and turning toward the window, she saw Caryl coming through the gate and Mabel running to meet him. He looked but little older than when she last saw him, but he was handsomer and his bearing was more dignified. Her heart leaped to her throat, her breath came thick and fast, as she watched him unseen.

Mabel met him, her cheeks aglow with the wild-rose bloom of early youth, her long hair floating in the summer breeze. As Caryl's eyes rested upon her, his face seemed transfigured. Coralie could think of no other word. He took her outstretched hands in his and held them silently, as he looked down into her upturned eyes.

There was no mistaking the look—the look of worshipping love. Coralie remembered how he had looked at her one day in that very garden. But that was the look of a youth mad with an unreasoning passion; this was a man, glorified with love. She staggered back to her place before the mirror. With the memory of Mabel's fresh beauty in her mind, she looked years older to herself than she did five minutes before—old, and haggard and unlovely.

Her beauty had been of that rich type dependent upon her bloom and roundness. So long as she was well and happy she was beautiful. But when sickness came and bloom and flesh vanished, and the excess of the sphinx ebbed away, she looked older than 30 years; and now with this new and terrible knowledge that had just come upon her, it seemed to her she had leaped suddenly into middle age.

Mabel came bounding into her room and ran up behind her and kissed one arm where [illegible]

She drew herself up proudly, and turned to meet her lover.

'Oh, Caryl, dear, you cannot know of half my happiness. My dreams are more than realized. I am the rain wherever I go. But, though I have two excellent offers of marriage—one with a title—I would not for the world marry a foreigner. There is something unwillingly distasteful to me in the idea of marrying out of one's own country. I don't see how American girls can do it. I like to be a belle here, but when I am ready to settle down I want it to be in my own land, with my own countrymen.'

But she was not ready to settle down. Caryl knew that very well.

The next year his mother—Coralie's foster-mother as well—died. He was left alone with the housekeeper and her daughter Mabel, now a slip of a girl 13 years old. More than ever he longed for Coralie and a home. He wrote her of his loss and loneliness, but did not ask her to return. Yet he had a secret hope she might. He opened her letters with trembling hands. She expressed sincere sorrow for the death of his mother, and was full of sympathy and love, but did not speak of her return. They were going to Switzerland in a few days.

He dropped the letter and buried his face in his hands, and the tears fell through upon the letter that had done so much toward slaying a strong love.

A soft step sounded near, a gentle hand fell upon his bowed head, a sweet, tremulous voice whispered, 'I am so sorry for you, Caryl—so sorry for you. Mamma and I both miss your dear mother, and we will do all we can to make your life bright.'

It was Mabel Lee, the housekeeper's daughter.

* * * * * * *

Coralie had been in Europe almost five years when she wrote she was coming home. The last year had been a hard one for her. She had stayed in Rome too long one summer and had fallen ill of a low fever. It had never left her, though as soon as she was able she had travelled from place to place, trying to regain her old health. She was worn and depleted with a winter's dissipation in London when the fever took hold of her, and it made fearful inroads upon her beauty. It chilled her with a dread alarm when she looked in the mirror and saw the wan face and wasted form of her once radiant self.

Her fine bloom was entirely gone, and there were actually hollows in her cheeks. She was too languid to care for festivities, and besides, she was tated. She thought of home and Caryl with sudden, hungry longing.

'I am coming back to you, Caryl,' she wrote, 'to stay with you always, if you want me. You have been a dear, patient boy, and I realize your worth since my sickness as I never did before. I fear I have been selfish to make you wait so long, and I wonder now how I could do it. It is strange, Caryl, but ever since I was taken ill a year ago I have felt myself falling in love with you. Although separated by such width of land and sea, and with five years lying between us, I yet have felt as if you were with me and I were for the first time learning the worth of your love. All your words and acts have recurred to me over and over, and I find more happiness in remembering your words of love than in all the praises of the world so lavished upon me. I have been so eager for your letters the last year and I never had so few, nor were they ever so cold, as they have been during a twelvemonth past. But I cannot blame you. I silenced you love-words long ago—seven long years ago—and no wonder you write rarely and coldly. But I am coming home, Caryl, and will never leave you again.'

She sailed the next week for America. The voyage was a rough one and she was deathly ill. As she lay in her berth one thought burned like fire in her heart and brain. She was going back to Caryl—to Caryl, her lover. This bore her up out of death's reach like angel arms.

When she reached her old home Caryl was not there to receive her. He had been called suddenly away by a business telegram, to be absent a week or more.

It was just as well, she thought, as she looked in her mirror. Ill and worn from sickness and travel, there was scarcely a vestige of her former beauty left. Her form was thin, her cheeks hollow, her face gray with a sickly pallor, and a strange look of care about her mouth. She would sleep and rest, and gain color and strength by the time Caryl came.

Two weeks went by, and the housekeeper treated Coralie like a pet child, and Mabel made her lie upon the lounge while she waited upon her. Coralie plied her with questions concerning Caryl.

'Was he changed—had he grown older—did he talk of her?'

'No, never'—and Mabel's eyes drooped.

'That is well,' thought Coralie. 'Men do not talk of things most dear to them.'

Suddenly she said:

'You have grown very pretty, Mabel, did you know it?'

Mabel blushed scarlet. 'No one ever told me so,' she answered.

'That is strange,' said Coralie; 'I wonder Caryl never told you—but I suppose you are still a child to him. You must be nearly 17, Mabel.'

'Seventeen last month.'

'Just ten years my junior,' said Coralie and sighed, she could not tell why.

One day there came a telegram. Caryl was coming home.

Coralie arose from the lounge where she had been lying, and began to make her toilet. In all her life she had never felt so anxious and excited about her personal appearance.

She chose a delicate, pale blue robe, one that had been very becoming to her in her health. She arranged her beautiful and still plentiful hair in the manner Caryl had liked of old—and then she threw open the blind and let in a flood of warm, clear sunlight upon herself as she stood before the mirror. She used to do that in days gone by and glory in the beauty that showed no flaw. But now—ah! the sunlight was cruel, cruel. It showed the thin figure, with all its lack of rounded outlines. It showed the wasted cheeks, the flesh with that gray look of middle life upon it; the cruel little lines about the mouth and eyes. Ah, God! she was no longer young; no longer beautiful. Would Caryl still love her?

Just then she heard a cry, and turning toward the window, she saw Caryl coming through the gate and Mabel running to meet him. He looked but little older than when she last saw him, but he was handsomer and his bearing was more dignified. Her heart leaped to her throat, her breath came thick and fast, as she watched him unseen.

Mabel met him, her cheeks aglow with the wild-rose bloom of early youth, her long hair floating in the summer breeze. As Caryl's eyes rested upon her, his face seemed transfigured. Coralie could think of no other word. He took her outstretched hands in his and held them silently, as he looked down into her upturned eyes.

There was no mistaking the look—the look of worshipping love. Coralie remembered how he had looked at her one day in that very garden. But that was the look of a youth mad with an unreasoning passion; this was a man, glorified with love. She staggered back to her place before the mirror. With the memory of Mabel's fresh beauty in her mind, she looked years older to herself than she did five minutes before—old, and haggard and unlovely.

Her beauty had been of that rich type dependent upon her bloom and roundness. So long as she was well and happy she was beautiful. But when sickness came and bloom and flesh vanished, and the excess of the sphinx ebbed away, she looked older than 30 years; and now with this new and terrible knowledge that had just come upon her, it seemed to her she had leaped suddenly into middle age.

Mabel came bounding into her room and ran up behind her and kissed one arm where [illegible]

Goods Sold Direct to the People at Wholesale Price.

The Only Business in Canada Conducted on the Same Principle.

Over $200,000 Worth of Boots and Shoes so Supplied Last Year.

The great loss annually sustained by selling to Dealers, first led to our establishing of Branch Stores, where we could supply direct to the people for Cash all the goods we could manufacture, thus giving to the people the goods less the dealer's profit, and saving to ourselves the annual loss. We were the more forcibly impressed into this step from the fact that cheap Eastern-made shoddy goods were being palmed off as our goods. We now sell our own goods, warrant what we sell, use no shoddy or inferior material of any kind, and can and do supply goods of the best quality 25 per cent. less than they can be bought elsewhere.

Everything Marked in Plain Figures. Only One Price.

CUSTOM DEPARTMENT.

Our arrangements are now complete in this department, and we can make to measure promptly either Ladies', Gentlemen's, or Children's Goods, in the Latest Styles, at little over half the prices usually charged.

IMPROVED CHURN DASHER.

(Patented July, 1878.)

Is adapted to all the old fashioned Round, Tub or Crock Churns. It will churn and gather the butter in from 4 to 10 minutes, and turn out 10 per cent more butter than anything of the kind in use. Each section or flange is an Air Chamber, which forces a large volume of atmosphere down into the milk or cream at each stroke, the cream or milk at the same time is forced over or upward of four hundred inches of surface, and is thrown with such great velocity square against the walls of the churn that it ruptures the globules and frees the butter with a few strokes. It is perfectly simple and easily constructed,—no machinery about it to get out of order.

Grand Medal and Diploma at the Centennial, Philadelphia; Grand Medal at the Universal Exhibition, Paris, France. Recommended by a large number of our leading medical men.

Charles Clothe's Pat'd Spiral Truss Pad has been the result of many years' study and material experience. Its perfect adaptability for Rupture is proven by the thousands now in use. Among its many advantages are, gentle, constant and even pressure; it gives to the motion of the body without friction; complete ventilation (as shown in engraving); a clamping pressure which does not open (as all oval pads) but closes the aperture of Hernia, hence only one-third pressure is required. It is this latter feature that has made this truss so eminently successful and proved a Radical Cure of from 50 to 70 per cent. of cases treated. This Truss cured persons of over 50 years of age. Only one belt round the waist, no leg straps and no springs required for its use.

Apparatus for straightening Spinal Curvature, Hip Disease, Bow Leg, Wry Neck, Club Foot, etc., made on most scientific principles. Price same as at my office.

CATARRH.

Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Cures Catarrh.

T. J. B. HARDING, Esq., BROCKVILLE, ONT.

DEAR SIR.—It is now two years since your "Constitutional Catarrh Remedy" was introduced to me. I have waited this long to see if the cure would remain permanent before doing this, my duty, to you, as at first the happy effects seemed to me to be too good to be true.

I was afflicted in my head for years before I suspected it to be Catarrh. In reading in your Corrector I saw my case described in many particulars. The fetured "drop" from the head had become very disagreeable, and a choking sensation often preventing me from living long. I would feel like smothering and be compelled to sit up in the bed. My health and spirits were seriously affected. When your Agent came to Walkerton in August 1877, I procured three bottles. Before I had used a quarter of the contents of one bottle I found decided relief, and when I had used two bottles and a third, I quit taking it, feeling quite cured of that ailment, and have not used any since until of late I have taken some for a cold in my head.

A sense of duty to sufferers from that loathsome disease, Catarrh, prompts me to send you this Certificate, unsolicited, with leave to make what use of it you may see proper. Yours truly,

W. TINDALL, Methodist minister.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, JULY 24, 1879.

A MIXING OF RAILWAY INTERESTS.

The cool propositions of the Grand Junction Railway Company, in regard to the construction of their line to this town and to Omemee, carry on their face the possibility of their entertainment by the people of Peterborough. In the first place, the very connection at Omemee with the Midland road for Georgian Bay, is a paving of the way for an amalgamation of the lines such as would render the $75,000 asked, if given, just so much money thrown away by the town. The main argument in favor of another line of railway is, that it may enter into competition with any existing line or lines which may hold a monopoly of trade and impose rates at will. But a new line constructed through this town with the avowed purpose of an agreement with and dependence on the old line, must dispel every idea of competition. More than that: it suggests the extension of a monopolising grasp over the carrying trade of the people of this district and the townships and villages to the north. The same remarks made in reference to this town, will apply with almost equal force to the township of Otonabee, from which $20,000 is asked, for no apparent benefit, present or prospective. If, as they seem determined, the Grand Junction Railway Company is determined to shun the eastern part of the county, they must build their line through Otonabee and this town. A bonus from either cannot then effect the mere fact of the road; and unless there is a certainty of its independent competition there is no sense—rather perfect madness—in giving a dollar of municipal money towards its construction.

But were the money to be asked, and given, on no other conditions than those we have just mentioned, it would only be be a bit of folly on the part of the town of Peterborough and the township of Otonabee, in their assumption of a perfectly useless debt for a term of years. But the propositions in their entirety go farther than this, in suggesting an interference with the bonus voted to the Toronto & Ottawa project. Herein the carrying out of the propositions (if such could be) would necessitate a triangular agreement between the town and the two companies. Such an understanding was attempted month's ago, and it was the fault of the Grand Junction Company that it came to naught. Indeed, at that time the representatives of that Company treated this town and the other Company in a manner far from courteous. They then shunned the overtures made to them, and shirked a discussion of the whole case on its merits; yet they now expect their propositions, inconsistent as they are with those they shrank from, to be entertained with favor. They must be either very simple or endowed with an unlimited amount of cheek. There was a time when the town and the Toronto & Ottawa Company—the county not being averse either—were willing to treat with the Grand Junction Company, on condition that arrangements be made to build their line to Norwood, and for the joint use of rails between Norwood and this town by both companies. We have already remarked upon the reception these suggestions met with at the hands of the Grand Junction Company, the members of which appear to have been so tied up with or enamored of connection with the Midland road as to studiously avoid any dealing with the Toronto & Ottawa scheme, or fair discussion with representatives of the eastern part of Peterborough county. Yet they now have the frigid assurance to propose to assume part of the Toronto & Ottawa Railway bonus, and, as a mere matter of course, pocket the county bonus they long ago forfeited, morally, by their conduct, to say nothing of the legal requirements attached to it.

Apart altogether from the least sentimentalism in regard to the conduct thus far of the Grand Junction Railway Company, it would plainly be a very dangerous thing to attempt, this changing of the terms on which the Toronto & Ottawa bonus is granted. Even if the latter company agreed to it, the transfer would place the town in a most awkward condition; not only as being under an obligation to, and hence expected to be grateful to the company, but also at being the first to temper with the terms and thus break the whole force of the agreement. Then again the mutual concessions of the two companies, the already acknowledged dependence of one of them on the Midland Railway Company, would further preclude all possibility of that independence on the part of the Toronto & Ottawa road so desirable and necessary to insure its usefulness as a through line.

If the town of Peterborough and the Toronto & Ottawa Railway Company desire to give away part of that bonus; if the township of Otonabee must get rid of a troublesome $30,000, they had better burn the money then use it in aiding an entanglement from which they and the whole country must in the end suffer. But if they seek an indirect investment for their ultimate good it were better to devote the funds to helping to finish the Credit Valley Railway to Toronto, from the west; for its promoters and the country it serves will be as anxious as we in this locality can be to secure a new and independent outlet to the East, by means of the Toronto & Ottawa Railway. It is a road that must and will be built, sooner or later; and its true friends cannot patiently bear of its subjection to the Grand Junction speculation, which in its tern is confessedly throwing itself into the lap and power of the Midland Railway Company.

THE N. P. AND J.&M.

The Tory N. P. organs are in great dudgeon because some sufferer has written to the Globe, complaining of the increased cost of fruit jars under the new tariff, and the consequent tax on the poor man. Some of the frantic journals declare that "jam" is not an article of family use by the poor. That depends upon whom you call poor; for it must be said that the word has a wider signification now than it had under a less oppressive tariff. But jam or no jam, the poorer classes of the country do depend to a very considerable extent on the fruit they can gather in the season of growth, and put away for winter use, and the glass bottles referred to are just what are used in this canning of fruits. Another "argument" is that the increased duty on fruit jars is 12½ per cent. and that therefore the extra cost can't be very much. But the fact remains as stated by the Globe's correspondent, that they cost from thirty to forty cents a dozen more than they did last year. Those who do not admit the dealer's explanation that it is because of the N. P. must accuse him of deceit in word and fraud in trade. And these two things are what the N. P. has principally led to in the commercial community, the people being the victims.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Red paths have raised the price of sugar.

Sir A. T. Galt and Sir John Macdonald leave for England in the Sarmatian on Saturday.

The Irish Canadian has invented a new name for the distinguished Orangeman, Mr. Johnston. It is "Ballykillpaphisher."

The contractors for the Grand Junction R.R.; have difficulty in procuring laborers, though paying one dollar and twenty-five cents per day.

Senator Haviland's appointment as Lieutenant-Governor of Prince Edward Island, vice Sir R. Hodgson, has been gazetted.

The insolvency figures show that the trade of the country is improving, as indeed it had to in the natural order of things.

Is it not about time that the Letellier matter was settled? On that point the Government is between two fires, but standing still will not improve matters. There should be either an advance or a retreat.

We have the N. P., which was to do immediate wonders, yet Mr. Goldwin Smith in his recent letter speaks of the "deepening commercial distress" of the country and "the increasing prospect of financial disaster."

The Galt Reformer says Messrs. Blake and Mackenzie have consented to visit Galt on August 14, when the portraits purchased by the workingmen of Galt will be presented to these gentlemen. The presentation of a silver service to Mr. Young will take place the same time.

Will some farmer who has received $20 more for one of his horses since the advent of the N. P. give us a communication on the subject. This time last year the farmers were told that the K. P. would add $ 0 to the value of every horse in the country.

"Honesty is the best policy," though a journalist should be honest without regard to its being the best of policy. As was said at Markham, the public can do something in this matter by patronizing only those newspapers which evince a desire to be honest and fair.

Mr. Rykert, at last session, introduced a Bill to further secure the independence of Parliament. At the present time the same gentleman is accused of selling his influence with the Government to a firm of contractors for $10,000. Verily, Mr. Rykert's morals are of a peculiar shading.

In one of the Eastern townships, the Government has strangled the only new industry started since the adoption of the National Policy—an illicit whiskey still. The ultra-protectionist who owned it thinks he has not been treated kindly after having done so much for his party previous to the 17th of September.

Sir Leonard Tilley is in Manchester, and has a communication in the newspapers, giving his views of the new Canadian Tariff. He tells the people of Manchester that the tariff will promote certain manufactures in the Dominion and will diminish imports from the United States without decreasing the imports from Great Britain.

London Advertiser: We believe it may be accurately said that since, say, Confederation, the average newspaper of Canada has made advancement in everything that goes to make a good journal, greater than the average advancement of the Dominion itself, considerable as that has been.

Telegram: Sir John Macdonald's failing health recalls to the minds of his followers the unpleasant fact that he is getting old and feeble, and that the day cannot be far off when he will have to give up the leadership of the Conservative party and make way for some younger and more vigorous man. To use a favorite phrase of his own, he has outstanded. If Sir John remains at the head of the party for another year, that will probably be the extent of it.

The result of the election in Vershire is not alone gratifying because it gives Mr. Joly a working majority of four in the House, but also because of the fact that the increased majority in a striking indication of the popular will in Quebec. It is to be taken as an indication that the dismissal of the DeBoucherville Government by Lieut-Governor Letellier is endorsed by the people of the Province most affected. In fact, all of the recent elections point in this direction and Vershere is to be congratulated on showing such an increased majority on the Liberal side.

Everybody knows that the N. P. has given a great impetus to smuggling on the frontier, but everybody does not know that it is developing new enterprises in various parts of the country in the shape of illicit distilleries. Ottawa, whose labouring men were promised abundant employment as a result of the establishment of new factories immediately after the change of Government, is now awake to the fact that the only new enterprise started here since the 17th September was the "experimental" distillery, seized the other day by Inspector Borrodaile.—Free Press.

It is said that the lumber trade is looking up. Mr. Daniel Hayes, a prominent lumber merchant of Toronto, reports a general looking up of the business in hard wood, such as oak and white ash for the American market, that large shipments have been made for Buffalo and Tonawanda and that the demand is daily increasing. Mr. Hayes states that while the prices obtained are not extraordinary large, the transactions are on a cash basis, and he is of opinion that before the season closes, a brisk Western trade will be established, the results of which will be beneficially felt in the Eastern districts, especially in the Valley of the Ottawa.

The Mail says:—"Many Ontario farmers who are about to spend hundreds of dollars and endure the hardships and uncertainties of life in the new Province of Manitoba, are not aware there are 200,000 acres of land within two days' journey from Toronto open for settlement. The Government has placed no less than 238,026 acres of land on Manitoulin, Barrie, and Cockburn islands on the market. The land is offered to settlers for a nominal price, one dollar per acre being the highest. It is represented to be of excellent quality for farming purposes, heavy fields of hay and promising hay being reported from sections of Manitoulin Island now under cultivation. Farmers with limited means would probably do better by taking up new land nearer home than by risking their whole capital in a Manitoba venture.

THE OLDEN TIME.

Mr. James Jack, of Smith, has placed before us a copy of 'The Despatch' dated July 31st, 1851, just 28 years ago next Thursday. To many living the time looks very short in the retrospect, but it is a good portion of a generation that has gilded into the past, leaving many changes in families and the town at large. The Despatch was afterwards changed to the Examiner. One article is headed "The Riot in Toronto," and contains an account of the same, caused by a meeting to further the interests of those who were opposed to the Clergy Reserve. The riot continued until midnight, when a company of the 71st Regiment arrived and were stationed at the entrance to the hall. The article goes on denouncing such scenes, and stating that the row will only row the deeper the determination of those opposed to the reserve to demolish every vestige of state-churchism.

Another matter of interest then, was the cemetery, which had just been opened at the west end of the town. The article continues:—

"The locality is most judiciously selected; the distance from town not being so great as to make it inconvenient, nor yet so near as to render it likely ever to become a nuisance. The soil is admirably adapted to the purpose for which it is designed. The surface which has been thoroughly cleared and levelled, and which slopes gradually towards the town, will, when the contemplated embellishments shall be completed, present a most beautiful appearance. Altogether we think it is the most eligible spot which could have been selected for such a purpose anywhere in the vicinity of Peterborough.

The grounds have been regularly laid out into blocks of 4 lots each, with suitable allowance for walks, by J. Reid, Esq., The lots are 12x9 feet in size and are sold at the remarkably low price of Ten Shillings each—the purchaser obtaining a deed or lease of his property.

Item:—The receipts at the centre table, alone, at the Bazaar, in aid of the funds for the restoration of St. John's Church is reported as being upwards of £70.

A communication on the assessment law of Otonabee, for school purposes signed "R," appears, also one signed "An Observer," from Mariposa, giving an account of a political meeting which had been addressed by Col. Langton.

A report of a council meeting is also given, the councillors being Messrs. Reid, Chamberlen, Hagyart, Lundy, Spencelly, Dr. Perry and Rutherford. Mr. Hudson appears as Mayor.

Parliament being in session, a report is given of the proceedings.

One column is occupied by the address of Jas. Hall, Esq., asking the support of the electors to give him a seat in the Legislative Council, as representative of the County of Peterborough.

Item:—We are requested to give notice, that the new Steamboat recently built for the ferry from Monaghan to Gove's Landing having been found too expensive for a ferry, has been purchased for the purpose of establishing a direct daily line for forwarding freight and conveying passengers between this place and Cobourg, and will commence her trips in time for fall business. This announcement we are satisfied will be read with much satisfaction. The enterprising spirit which has undertaken to form this line, deserves a due share of encouragement. We have every assurance, from our knowledge of the ability and experience of Captain Campbell, the commander of the boat, that the public will be well served.

Public notice is given by the Mayor that it is the intention of the Town Council to take necessary steps for having the trees of the cemetery grounds neatly trimmed, and the plot enclosed with a respectable fence for the sacred protection of present graves and monuments, and it further forbids the use thereof, as far as regards burying therein. This was caused by various evils which were increasing, arising from the frequent interments to the present burial ground within the limits of the town.

We know of nothing more interesting than an old newspaper. The items are penned by those who have laid it aside forever, and the men who were in business then are in the cave and yellow leaf, or their names are inscribed on the marbles of the cemeteries.

Rice Lake Items.

(From our own Correspondent.)

—Both saw mills are running full blast and are rapidly filling up their yards with lumber.

—Mosquitos are a good crop this year, and judging from what we hear from camping parties they also do good work.

—Mr. Robert Dreps's new hotel is rapidly approaching completion under the supervision of Reuben Green, who appears to be the right man in the right place.

—Our Rice Lake Hunkm is out doing practice nearly every evening, and site will shoot splendidly. Look out for his fellows on the fall reunion.

—A very heavy rain squall visited us Tuesday afternoon that lasted for about half an hour. It is said by old residents to have been the most severe ever seen here. It is feared it has done considerable damage to the crops.

—The steamboats all seem to be doing a good business. The Golden Eye and Fairy having a large number of pic-nics.

The Maggie Summerville is busy towing shingles, etc., for Mr. F. Barrett. The Arlington still reps her daily route to Hastings and is well patronized.

—Mr. Isaac Batte, one of the largest cattle buyers, and Mr. Jas. R. Barker, Supt. of the C. P. & M. R. R. & M. Co., were out inspecting the piers of Rice Lake Bridge, with a view it is said of going on with the work of rebuilding. We trust it may be correct and that we will at last have rail communication with Peterboro'.

—This week has been a noted one for pic-nics, there being four from Cobourg, three from Peterboro', three from Hastings, and one from Cold Springs. The greater number went to Idyl Wild, where their wants were supplied by Mr. Edward Calcutt, Manager of the Island, who seems to be quite a favorite with the pic-nic public. The others went to the several points and islands on the lake.

Sabbath Desecration.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—It is a matter of regret that some of the young men of your town have not that respect for the Sabbath which Christian surroundings inculcate. Situated at a considerable distance from Peterborough, we had imagined ourselves safe from any annoyance, but our quiet dreams have been dispelled. For three or four Sundays back, a crowd of young men, hailing from Peterborough, have encamped near the river's edge, and through whiskey, profanity, obscure songs, and bathing openly near a thickly settled part, have shocked the residents for miles around. We have no objections to visits from orderly young men; but when fellows with considerably more whiskey than piety, make the neighborhood disreputable, with their oaths and antics, severe measures will have to be taken. Hereafter if such proceedings do not cease, the farmers around, in absence of better means, will take upon themselves to insti kindly principles into bodies now unhappily unacquainted with self-respect. The names of several young men engaged in the disturbances last Sunday I have with send you. Hoping that you will give this a place in your columns, and that it may be a warning to others, I am

Yours Truly,
NORTH MONAGHAN.

[We have omitted the names from the above communication, thinking that there must be some mistake, as there are among them the names of several young men who are supposed to be above such caperings on the Sabbath. Should it occur again, and a correspondent vouches for their correctness, we will be under the necessity of making them public.—Ed. Ex.]

Railway Matters Again.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir,—The appearance of Mr. Loch's letter in your last number, reminds me that I partially promised to mention some few of the benefits, and, disadvantages to the Town of Peterborough, of giving a bonus of $150,000 to the Toronto and Ottawa Railway. In the first place, the advantages to be derived from this Railway are said to be the ready money circulating while the Road is being made, —the expeditious mode of reaching the extreme points as well as those on the whole route—the cheapening of freight by a more direct and shorter line, the increased facilities of transporting farm produce of all kinds to the cities at the other end. It is also spoken of as a competing line with the Grand Trunk. Now, let us for a moment look at the other side of the question. The money scattered, by building the Road will soon end. Our $150,000 will very soon be "sown"—"What will the harvest be"? The Interest and Sinking fund of this sum will require the sum of $10,500 to be raised yearly, involving a rate of over 4 mills to the Dollar, for all time to come. The whole of the real and personal property of the Town of Peterborough will be mortgaged if this money is given away. There will be no shirking of paying this special rate, unless the whole Town becomes insolvent. If this proposed debt is incurred, it will operate to curtail the growth of the Town. High Taxes will ruin any Town, and what is the quid pro quo for our follies—simply, or almost so, hearing the whistle of the freight cars passing through our Town. The facilities for travel are very fair at present. If they are improved it will be at a fearful cost. As to the saving on freigh it is small in proportion to the price paid yearly to the Road. While the market spoken of will doubtless benefit the farmer, it will operate against the Town, increasing the cost of living. The benefits of competition are very slim indeed.

[Some persons tell me they consider that this road, if built, will increase very much the price of real estate in the county as well as the town, and of all men, Mr. Loch had a chance of proving this assertion. But what is the finale of his convictions, in his advocacy of what will benefit the town. First, he denounces the Grand Junction R. R. scheme, and warns the Town Council not to saddle the town with such a debt, as it would be "folly." Next, he says the town of Peterborough is morally bound to give the Cobourg Railway $60,000, though legally they are not! Then he winds up in this fashion. "Nothing remains for us but to unite with one effort to build the Peterborough and Ottawa road, connecting with the Midland." With one, nothing will save Peterborough but $75,000 bonus to the Grand Junction R.R., with another nothing will save the town but building the Ottawa and Peterborough road, and the paying to the Cobourg road $60,000 although he says, "it is a foolish undertaking from the beginning." This is needless markers with a vengeance. If Mr. Loch had his way, he would sink us so that we should never rise. I am sure Mr. L. is sincere in what he says for the interests of the town, but somehow he seems to me to have been influenced by the "Planets," and it may take him some time to get to be himself again. Certainly his remedy for the ills we now labor under, remind me more of the N.P., than anything else I know of. To grant bonuses to railroads just now, would be ruinous to the town, and I advise every ratepayer to oppose all such strenuously. Better a thousand fold to stand still than run into debt. It is easy to incur debt, but very hard to get out of it. All I say is to keep clear while you can.

Yours truly,
J. K.

MARKET BY-LAW.

Having been repeatedly asked respecting the provisions of the amended Market By-law of the Town of Peterborough, we this week give it in extenso, believing it will be of much interest, not only to our country readers, but to many in town as well. It is as follows:

The Corporation of the Town of Peterborough by the Municipal Council thereof enacts as follows:—

1.—This By-law shall come into force on from and after the first day of March next.

2.—On from and after the said day the By-law of the said Corporation numbered 260, passed on the twenty-sixth day of February, 1877, entitled a By-law to repeal By-laws No's 146, 180, 239 and all other By-laws relating to a Public Market and for the better establishing and regulating a Public Market in the Town of Peterborough, and By-law number 212, entitled "A By-law to regulate the Sale of Firewood in the Town of Peterborough," passed on the sixth day of January, 1868, and By-law No. 217, entitled "A By-law to amend By-law No. 212, entitled a By-law to regulate the Sale of Firewood in the Town of Peterborough," passed on the 17th day of February, 1868, shall be repealed, provided, however, that the repeal of such By-laws shall not revive any By-law repealed thereby, and provided also that such repeal shall not effect any act done, or any right of action existing, or any penalty or forfeiture incurred, or any proceeding or matter pending under said By-laws respectively at the time of the repeal thereof but proceedings then pending and all proceedings for any act done, a penalty, a forfeiture incurred, shall be carried on as if such By-law had not been repealed.

3.—That the present Market House, of the said Town, and so much of the Market Block as is not now, or may not hereafter be, disposed of for other purposes together with those portions of the Public Streets now used in connection therewith, subject to the rights of the public as to the said streets, shall be the Market House and Market Place for the said Town of Peterborough, and all such agricultural produce as is usually sold in the open air and brought into the Town for sale except Grain, Wool, Hides, Skins and Furs, and Fresh Fish, but including Potatoes, Vegetables, Fruits, Eggs, Butter, Cheese, Lard, Tallow, Poultry, Game, also Horses, Cattle, Sheep, Swine, Fresh Meat by the Carcase, Side or Quarter, Hay, Straw and Fodder shall not be sold or offered, or exposed for sale elsewhere in the Town than in the said Market. And Grain offered for sale shall not be sold, or offered or exposed for sale elsewhere in the said Town, than on the said Market Place, or at any mill or storehouse in the said Town, and in no case shall any Grain or other agricultural produce be sold, or exposed, or offered for sale upon any of the Public Streets in the Town of Peterborough.

4.—That every day in the year shall be a market day except New Year's Day, the Birthday of the Sovereign, Sunday, Good Friday, Christmas Day, and all such other days as may be set apart by Royal Proclamation, or by the Mayor with the authority of the Council.

5.—That on all such Market days as aforesaid that part of the Market Place used as a Butcher's Market shall be kept open from six o'clock a.m. until one o'clock p.m. from the First day of April until the First day of October, and during the rest of the year from 7 o'clock a.m. until 1 o'clock p.m. except on Saturdays when it shall be kept open until nine o'clock p.m. But the said Market Place may in the discretion of the Market Clerk be kept open for the sale of articles at all times during the day. The upper storey of the Market House shall be under the sole control of the Market Inspector or such other officer as may be appointed by By-law or Resolution of the Council from time to time, and such Inspector or other officer so to be appointed shall keep the same open and in order, and heated when necessary, during the Market hours above mentioned, provided, however, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to deprive the Market Clerk of his fees in respect of any articles offered for sale therein.

6.—That all tainted and unwholesome meat, fish, poultry or other articles offered or exposed for sale shall be seized and destroyed by the Market Clerk, and the person or persons so offering or exposing the same shall upon conviction be fined as hereinafter provided.

7.—That all Hay and Straw sold within the Town when required to be weighed shall be weighed upon the Public Scales of the Town, and the Market Clerk or such other person having charge of the said Scales shall give the seller thereof a ticket with the gross and net weight thereon with the date and hour of the day, and a like ticket shall be given to the seller or owner of anything weighed on the Public Scales by the Clerk or his assistant.

8.—That all Butchers occupying Stalls in the Butcher's Market and all other persons who shall have obtained Licenses as hereinafter provided to open and keep a shop for the sale of butcher's meat elsewhere within the town shall keep their stalls and shops open during market hours of each and every market day.

9.—That farmers and others shall be permitted to sell fresh meat from their wagons, carts, sleighs, &c., while standing on the Market Place by the Carcase, Side or Quarter only.

10.—That on and after the first day of May in any year, any person or persons who may desire to open and keep a shop for the sale of butcher's meat elsewhere in the town than in the present Market house, shall be at liberty to do so upon obtaining license for that purpose from the Town Council, as hereinafter provided, but not otherwise, nor until such license has been obtained, nor until such applicant shall have paid to the Town Treasurer a fee of ten dollars for such license, which fee shall thereafter be paid annually. No such license however shall be given to any person to keep such shop in the following limits, that is to say: within that portion of the town lying within and between Brock Street on the North, Rubidge Street on the West, King Street on the South, and the Otonabee on the East, except to butchers now possessing licenses.

11.—That all persons wishing to obtain Licenses of or from the Council to open or keep a shop for the sale of Butcher's Meat, as in the preceding paragraph of this By-law mentioned, shall apply to the Council by petition for the same, which petition [illegible] locality where such Shop is to be opened and kept. And upon such petition being presented, the Council shall be at liberty to give and grant Licenses to such person or persons to open and keep such shop or shops, for any period of time not more than one year, from and after the thirtieth day of April of the then current year, provided that no such License shall be granted without payment of the full fee for twelve months.

12.—That any Huckster, Butcher, or Runner, living within the Municipality or within one mile of the outer limits thereof, who shall be guilty of forestalling, regrating, or monopolizing either in person or by an agent or by a person by him or her directed or requested so to do, Market grains, fish, fruits, roots, vegetables, poultry, dairy products, eggs, and all other articles for family use, and such as are usually sold on the market either in the Market Place, the Streets, or within the limits of the said Town, shall be guilty of an infraction of this By-law. Provided always that the buying or offering to buy by any Huckster, Butcher, or Runner, or offering for sale or the bargaining for by any farmer or other person to any Huckster, Butcher, or Runner, either as to quantity or price of any of the said articles brought in for sale to the Town, shall be deemed forestalling, and is hereby prohibited, if done before the hour of ten o'clock in the forenoon in the case of Grain other than wheat, barley, and rye, and the hour of eleven o'clock in the forenoon in the case of the articles enumerated herein, other than grain. Provided always that wheat, barley and rye may be purchased by any person, at any time on the Market Place or at the mills and storehouses in the said Town. Provided, however, that millers may purchase Grain at any time on the Market or at their mills. Provided further that wheat may be purchased by any person, at any time on the Market Place or at the mills or storehouses, and no tolls shall be payable thereon.

13.—That the Butchers shall keep their stalls neat and orderly and shall not have them encumbered with any other articles or things besides those legitimately belonging to their business. Nor shall any Butcher incommode the passage through the Market House with blocks, hooks, meat, or anything else. No dogs shall be allowed in the Butcher's Market, and any Butcher keeping or harboring any dog or dogs in the Market House, shall be deemed guilty of an infraction of this By-law and subject to the penalty hereinafter imposed.

14.—That no gambling of any nature whatsoever, nor games, nor obscene, indecent, abusive, or blasphemous language, or profane swearing shall be permitted in the Market House or Market Place.

15.—That the following Market Tolls, and charges, and none other, shall be imposed and collected upon articles offered for sale, and upon the Vehicles, Vessels or other things hereinafter mentioned, in which anything is exposed for sale on the Market Place under this By-law, viz:

16.—That the sale by retail in the Public Streets of the Town, of any vegetables, fruit, or beverages, is hereby prohibited, and shall be deemed an infraction of this By-law.

Provided, however, that any Auctioneer, Bailiff, or Sheriff may sell any of the articles hereinbefore mentioned in any private place without the payment of any Tolls.

18.—That a Set of small Scales shall be kept by the Market Inspector, and that the same may be used free of Tolls for weighing articles under fifteen pounds each.

20.—That the Market Tolls and charges enumerated shall be offered at Public Auction or let by tender as the Council may direct, on some day in the last week of February in each year, Public Notice of which shall be previously given by the Town Clerk. Provided, however, that no bid or tender shall be received or accepted which shall not be accompanied by the names of two good and sufficient persons willing to bind themselves individually and collectively for the due performance of the Contract, and for the faithful payment of such amount as may be offered for such Tolls and Charges, the payment to be made quarterly in advance.

21.—The purchaser of the Tolls and Charges as aforesaid, shall be the Market Clerk of the said Town. He shall open and close the Market House on the days and at the hours appointed by this By-law, see that the Market House and Butcher's Stalls are kept orderly and clean, and that the provisions of this By-law are carried out. He shall direct farmers and others bringing in produce, articles, or animals for sale, where they are to stand on the Market Place, and such farmers and others shall comply with such directions of the Market Clerk. He shall see that the passages to and through the Market House are kept clean and clear so as to produce order and regularity. He shall not appoint or employ a substitute to act for him without the sanction of the Council. He shall not purchase produce, articles, or animals, either for himself or others to be sold again, nor shall he act as agent for the purchase of such for any one else. He shall have charge of the Scales belonging to the Corporation, except the small scales, and shall be entitled to demand and receive from all persons resorting to the Market, or having produce, animals, or articles weighed, the fees as hereinbefore enumerated. The Market Clerk shall be an officer of the Corporation and shall be under the control of a committee of the Council to be called the Market Committee, and shall obey their lawful directions as to the management of the said Market not being inconsistent with the provisions of this By-law. The said committee shall have power to decide all disputes between the said Market Clerk and any other person as to the management of the said Market, and shall have power to annul or rescind the contract with the Market Clerk for the purchase of the Tolls, in which case a proportionate and reasonable part in the discretion of the committee shall be deducted from the amount payable by such Market Clerk in respect of the Tolls, provided, always, that an appeal shall lie from any decision of the committee to the whole Council, by whom such decision may be reversed, modified or altered, and any tender or purchase of the said Market Tolls, and any contract or agreement with any Market Clerk shall be subject to the provisions herein contained, whether so expressed or not in the tender or contract. —Barley will be a large crop and good grain if favorable weather for harvesting.

—The root crop cannot be well estimated yet. Turnips especially do not promise much.

LOCAL NEWS.

A Business Move.—First-class work at reasonable prices, is the motto at W. J. Lermont's. Sign of the Red Boot.

Personal.—We are pleased to notice that Mr. James Kendry has again assumed the management of the Auburn Woolen Mills.

Selling Off.—Mr. S. White this week commences a clearing sale of his summer stock of boots and shoes. Having lately made large additions to it, it will be found well assorted, and as the goods are offered at almost cost, genuine bargains may be expected.

The Late Shooting Case.—We have received a communication from "A Settler," in Harvey, in connection with the late shooting case in that township. The facts as stated may be quite correct, but we never pay any attention to anonymous communications. If the writer will only send us his name, not for publication but as a guarantee of good faith, the communication will appear in our next issue. Probably the better way would be to leave the matter as it now stands until after the trial which is pending.

"Fun and Laughter."—On Thursday evening last Mr. E. Carswell, of Oshawa, delivered his humorous lecture as above, in the Opera House to a good sized audience, who applauded to the echo the lecturer's narratives and anecdotes. Dr. Kincaid acted as Chairman, and at the close of the lecture received the thanks of the meeting for the satisfactory discharge of his duties. A second lecture was given on Friday evening in the Temperance Hall, which passed off equally entertaining and enjoyable.

Through Trains.—The Guide speaking in connection with the through trains, says:—"Our hotel keepers grumble greatly at the new railway arrangement, complaining that it cuts off a great deal of their trade, as people are not now compelled to stay over night; and yet they rather illogically say that it will not pay the railway owing to the limited number of passengers carried. There is a discrepancy somewhere; because if there are but few passengers on these trains, the hotels cannot be losing much by the arrangement.

The Fire Brigade Band.—The Port Hope Times in commenting on the merits of the several bands playing in that town on the 12th, says the Peterborough Band were the second best in attendance—the first place, of course, being given the 46th. The Cobourg Sentinel, however, takes a different view, and says:—"In our opinion, Hand's Times is a little "prejudiced," for we believe that the Peterborough Band was the best in the procession; and as far as we could see, the Cobourg and Port Hope bands were not very widely separated in regard to their playing."

Lack of Courtesy.—The Herald says, that while at Millbrook station on their return trip from Port Hope on the 12th, the Omemee Band was requested to play "Grandfather's Clock." They had just concluded, when the Peterborough Band, which was also at the station, struck up the same tune evidently with the intention of showing their superiority of playing. The Omemee Band do not pretend to be as "great shakes" as their Peterborough confreres, and the latter if not deficient in courtesy would have adopted a plan different to what they did to exhibit the difference in the playing of the two Bands in question.

The Rain and the Crops.—The costly, and lowering weather, with repeated rainfalls, are viewed with some alarm by the farmers, who sincerely hope that there will be a cessation in this respect until harvest is over. They fear that the warm weather and showers, alternating as they do, will cause ripening grain to rust. Such a visitation would be deplorable for as the evil is widespread, the damage the crops would sustain would be equally general. This at a time when we require all the advantages a bountiful harvest will yield us, would be very discouraging in its nature, and delay the better times which appear to be in fair prospect. It is to be hoped, therefore, that there will be no more heavy rainfalls for the present, and that the weather will enable the farmers to house their crops in good condition, and reap the full benefits of their industry and long-suffering patience.

Accident to Mr. G. Munro.—The many friends of Mr. George Munro, miller, formerly of this town, heard with regret that he had met with a very severe accident in his new home, at Goderich, Ont. The particulars are as follows: He had some workmen engaged repairing the fish slide, and was himself superintending their operations. He was compelled to cross the river again to attend some business, and on his return undertook to take over some boards in his punt, which became unmanageable, and was swept over the dam, into the eddy beneath, where he would have been speedily drowned but for the strong arms which came at once to his relief. He was unconscious when taken out, but medical aid was at once summoned and he was revived. It was then discovered that one leg was broken near the hip and he had received internal contusions. He is, however, in a fair way to recover, and in time, hopes to be around as well as ever.

Smith and Dempsey. An excellent paper on "Fruit Raising in This Country" was read by the Rev. V. Chenoud. The President read an interesting paper on "Pruning," which was followed by a general discussion from those present. The subject of manufacturing was also taken up and thoroughly ventilated.

Cricket Match.—A lively though rather one-sided game of cricket was played last Thursday on the Ashburnham Cricket Ground between two elevens from Peterborough and Lakefield. The visiting club did not show themselves to any advantage, their bowling and batting being any thing but exceptionally fine, whilst their fielding in some cases was extremely bad. The home eleven, no doubt owing to the easy bowling, made handsome scores; Stratton, Hartley, Hogan, [illegible] and Burnham especially distinguishing themselves. Draper was the only man on the Lakefield side who succeeded in [illegible] figures. The following is the score:—

The Mowing.

BY S. R. M. BYERS.

The clock has struck six,
And the morning is late,
While the east in red splendor is glowing;
There's a dew on the grass, and a song in the air,
Let's up and be off to the mowing.

Wouldst know why I wait,
Ere the sunlight has crept
O'er the fields where the daisies are growing?
Why all nights I've kept my own vigils, nor slept?
'Tis to-day is the day of the mowing.

This day and this hour
Maud has promised to hail
What the blush on her cheek was but half show-ing;
If she waits at the lane, I'm to know all is well
And there'll be a good time at the mowing.

Maud's mother has said,
And I'll never deny,
That a girl's heart there can be no knowing.
Oh, I pray not to live, and I rather would die,
If Maud does not come to the mowing.

What to-day I see!
'Tis a sheen of brown hair
In the lane where the roses are blowing.
Thank God! it is Maud! she is waiting me there,
And we'll be wed time at the mowing.

Six years have passed by,
And I fondly declare
That I never have noticed the sighing;
Sweet Maud is my wife, with the sheen of brown hair,
And we had a good time at the mowing.

For Twenty Years.

Mr. Paul Bradford, a tall, lean, dark gentleman of forty-five, picked his way through a side street of the metropolis one night, and started with glad surprise when he saw a cab hurry away from the door he was about to open with his key. He had lived in this house on and off for over twenty years before Mr. Dunbar, the owner, died, and when Mr. Dunbar's daughter Elinor was a mere girl. Paul was an accountant in Mr. Dunbar's office, and having no family or friends in the city, had found a home with his employer. Even at that time a source of commercial depression and some melancholy overcame Mr. Dunbar to means, and deepened the ruts of care between his eyebrows, and made his manner rougher and his voice gruffer. The board of young Paul Bradford became a very acceptable addition to the weekly allowance of Mrs. Dunbar; it bought many a pretty furbelow for little Miss Nelly, and saved her mother many a troublesome encounter with her lean lord, who sternly declared he had no money to spare for ribbons and gewgaws, which, indeed, was the truth.

But Miss Elinor was now in her seventeenth year, and ribbons and gewgaws were as needful for her well-being as her daily food. What in the world these two women would have done without that money from Paul they could not conceive. It was impossible to discern any difference in the house expenses with or without Paul. There was plenty of room for him; the same light and fire and food did for him as for the rest; so that the precious money seemed altogether extra, and like a boon from heaven to Mrs. Dunbar. She was naturally an affectionate woman, and her heart went out to the young man in gratitude. She taught Elinor to look upon him as their common benefactor, and the sincere and honest wheedling of these two gentle creatures warmed the heart of Paul, and charmed many an extra five-dollar bill from his pocket in their behalf. Shortly after pay day there was always to be seen some new trinket about Nelly's pretty person that betrayed the generous giver. Paul had plenty of money after that little sum was given to Mrs. Dunbar, and what more natural than for him to ask Miss Elinor to take a walk down the avenue to get some bonbons? and the shop windows being all aglow with glittering merchandise, what more natural than for the pretty maiden to clap her hands and utter little musical shrieks of admiration? The end of it was that Paul went home with his purse lightened as well as his heart; but the best of it was that when pay-day came again the one could be made heavy, while the other remained light. The young lady grew prettier and prettier with each day that came to her, and it was not to be expected that Mr. Bradford was the only appreciative person in the vicinity. A young gentleman upon the block below, who had once been a school mate of Nelly's, and who now attended the same dancing academy, was known to be wildly in love with her. But he was only a lad of nineteen; his mother was a widow, and kept a boarding-house for a living, of course there could be nothing serious in that attachment; and it really was convenient as Nelly to have somebody to go with her to the dancing academy and to the little parties in the neighborhood. Paul was twenty-five years old, exceedingly grave and decorous for his age, and while he held these juvenile recreations for others in high esteem, he had no desire for them himself. So time went by; Paul bought the ribbons and trinkets for the dancing lessons, and Nelly and young Harry Haver waltzed away many happy nights at the academy. On one of these occasions Elinor was putting the last touches to her toilet, and young Haver was waiting in the parlor, when a cry of dismay came up from the dining-room, and Elinor, rushing down the stairs, met Paul coming up. He caught her in his arms and carried her back to her room again.

'Don't come down, Nelly,' he said, gravely. 'Your father is very ill; I am going for the doctor. Don't come down, dear, till I get back.'

When he got back with the doctor he found Nelly bending over the white, rigid lips that never again would growl about bills, or discounts, or extravagances. It was quite natural that one of her little hands should be clasped in her mother's, but the other one was held just as affectionately by young Haver who stood there by Nelly's side. He was only a lad, and evidently quite overcome by the sudden calamity. His face was pale, and tears were running down his cheeks. It would not do, of course, to speak harshly to the boy, but Paul felt that it was no place for him.

'You'd better go home, Harry,' he said, kindly. 'It is better that no strangers should be here just now.

'Strangers!' repeated the lad, flinging a fierce look upon Paul; but Nelly whispered in his ear, and pushed him gently away. Harry went, without another word; and there was something in the boy's face that made Paul follow him.

'It is much better they should be alone,' said Paul.

'Are you going to stay out too?' said Harry.

'Yes,' replied Paul.

'Oh!' said Harry; and there was a world of meaning in that little monosyllable. 'I beg your pardon, Mr. Bradford, but I thought you stayed me out as a stranger, you know, and I ain't. I never can be. I—I'm so very sorry for Nelly!'

'So am I,' said Paul, gravely.

'I—I love Nelly,' blurted out the poor lad, 'I love her better than any body in the world.'

'So do I,' said Paul, gravely; and as Harry stood there upon the sill, he gently shut the door.

Paul was pale enough himself when he went back to the two bereaved women. He had left the love of yonder lad upon the door-step to cool, but what about his own? Surely it had served long enough. Nelly and her mother would need a protector now. Mr. Dunbar's business affairs could not well be concealed from his accountant; he knew he would have the winding up of the whole concern in his hands, and he prayed fervently that God would so deal with him as he would with these two dear women left to his mercy. A secret delight beset him that they were so dependent upon him—a delight he could not well conceal. He wanted all for himself—all the joy and sorrow, all the care and perplexity, all the sweet incense of gratitude and love.

When the sad ceremony was over, and the shutters were opened so that more light could be thrown upon the legal affairs of the deceased, and the two women, in their black dresses, stood trembling by the big grim safe where the sacred papers that had been so dear to the dead man as the apple of his eye were jostled rudely about by the lawyers, and it was found that when all was paid there would be but a pitiful maintenance for the widow and her child, Paul drew the weeping girl close to his side, and took Mrs. Dunbar's hand in his own. 'I am here,' he said; 'I will take care of you.'

To the people that were present went away, remarking what a providential thing it was, and how every thing was held in the hollow of a wise but unseen hand. Some of them went back to tea the next night to console poor Mrs. Dunbar, and others went the night after, and Mrs. Dunbar wept, but was consoled as the days went by. In her husband's time there was very little tea-drinking of a neighborly sort, and nobody dropped in of an evening. Mr. Dunbar's manner was severe to austerity, and not calculated to encourage the little amenities of life. Night after night he sat by the big grim safe, never throwing a word to poor Mrs. Dunbar, who heard nothing hear in and hear on but the rustling of the dreadful papers, the hard breathing of her lord and master, and the doleful ticking of the clock.

No wonder the poor lady took heart and brightened even on the spot. The ten-bottle ning fourteenly near upon the brass hob of the grate, and Mrs. Dunbar fastened upon the mild beverage. Her comely face put off many a wrinkle, and her friends declared that nobody could believe she could have a daughter old enough to be married. For it became settled that Paul should have the little maiden shortly for his wife. He had not pressed his suit with Nelly, an intuitive fear restraining him, but the widow and her friends had settled it all. Nelly made no complaint; she went about, pale and listless, took long solitary walks, coming back all unstrung and hysterical; but the neighbors declared it was only natural. The poor child had suffered a shock; time would do everything—time and getting married, they added, nodding their heads and taking more cups of tea.

Paul began to be vaguely uneasy, he scarcely knew why, and scarcely hurried on the simple preparations for the marriage. Nelly was but a child, he thought, and had a child's fear for the future. Once safe upon his heart, his own for ever, he would make her life again one long summer sunshine. His own somewhat wearied heart basked in the sweet anticipation, and the brief barrier of time that lay between fretted his longing soul.

Scarcely a fortnight before the ceremony was to take place. Paul had been late at the office, a queer congition of his nerves stretching homeward, and quivering over a cold apprehension hard to define. He shut up the book at last, and went through the familiar streets, where the lamps began to glimmer through the fog of a November night. A cab recklessly turned the corner in his direction; a chest from the driver brought the pale face of a woman to the window; the swinging lamp threw a flickering ray over features that seemed to Paul strangely like—wonderfully like— He crossed to the curb, thinking confusedly over it, stopped, turned. The cab was hurrying on. Paul began to run after it, increasing his speed with every step. His blood began to grow warm, his heart to grow savage in the intensity of the chase; the tension of his nerves never gave way, nor did his pace slacken, till the cab stopped at a down town wharf, where a South American ship had taken her last freight. A little tug-boat was spattering close by; a voice from the deck shouted 'All aboard!' Two figures hurried out of the cab, both slight and young, the one supporting the other. But when Paul stood out from the gloom of the wharf, confronting them, the lad drew himself up proudly, and put his arm about his companion. 'She is mine, he cried, in his high, husky voice; 'we are married, Mr. Bradford; it's useless to come prowling after us now.'

'Great God! Nelly, is it you?' said Paul, almost doubting his senses, as he saw the sweet face taking shape under his eyes.

'Yes, it is I,' she replied, 'and this is Harry Haver, that you put out the door that night.'

Harry's slim form began to tremble with excitement and the chill wind that blew from the black turgid water beyond. His blonde locks blew about his handsome eyes. 'We are married, Sir,' he cried again.

They seemed such absolute children to Paul! There was no room for wrath in the heart that throbbed up in his throat; the utter frustration of the moment brought hot tears to his eyes. These melted the heart of the obdurate girl, and she left Harry's side to run to Paul.

'Oh, don't! please don't!' she said. 'If you do, I shall break down. Please comfort mamma—take care of mamma—'

'All aboard!' shouted the voice from the deck.

'Stand aside, Sir,' cried Harry to Mr. Bradford. 'Let her go. Come, Nelly, come.'

She stood one moment irresolute, went on a step or two with Harry, then ran back to the motionless figure of Bradford, lifted her arms to his neck, lay a half second upon his throbbing heart, struggled away again, and disappeared in the murky gloom of the wharf. The ship was already moving uneasily, the tug-boat sputtered out into the water, and the big black hulk moved slowly on. Paul walked after the receding ship like one in a dream; an ugly gap yawned before him; the thick green water below was covered with slime.

'Stop back, my good fellow,' said a stevedore, who had been watching him. 'You can't call that 'ere water invitin', now, can you? You'd no sooner be into it than you'd be hollerin' to get out again, and I ain't in the same humor for a bath. I've seen such things afore.'

But the man was mistaken. Paul had no idea of committing suicide. He was only regretting that he had not held Nelly when he had her in his arms, and taken her home again. She was married, to be sure, but that was an additional reason for preventing her from making further misery. Paul was naturally of a philosophic turn of mind, even his wretchedness was of the dogged, enduring kind. The cab that brought the young people was still within call. Paul hailed it, and was soon on his way homeward. He abstained from asking any questions of the cabman. What was the use? Besides, an instinctive delicacy restrained him. An outgrowth of this feeling made him shiver when he put his weary head back upon the cushion of the cab, and found the faint odor of violets there. It was all over now. What a life she had chosen with that wild ridiculous boy, whose neck he would like to wring! Why had he lost sight of the little serpent when he left him there upon the door-step? So many cares and anxieties had intervened, what room could there be for that yellow-haired boy?

Before the cab fairly stopped, Paul saw the confusion at the house. Lights were glancing to and fro. A woman came out upon the porch with a shawl thrown over her head.

'Here he is now,' she said. 'Oh, Mr. Bradford, something dreadful has happened! Nelly has run away with young Haver—he has an uncle in the South American trade.'

Paul walked straight on through the hall The sympathizing neighbor ran ahead to get a glimpse of his face. Was it pale? Contorted? Why, no; there wasn't much difference. So was always solemn and dark. The man hadn't any feeling, or else his feelings were well kept down. The sympathizing neighbor told her friends, who were waiting to hear how he had borne the shock, that it was her opinion he didn't feel it so much as the mother did. Mrs. Dunbar had gone from one fainting fit to another from the time she had read Nelly's note, but Mr. Bradford was as cool as an icicle, and had taken it upon himself to send Mrs. Dunbar's friends away, and wait on her himself. It began to be soon whispered about that Mr. Bradford would marry the widow. After all, she had the property, and was such a very young-looking woman for her age! Such things has happened. She took interest when she went out with him, and he brought home flowers, just as he used to in Miss Nelly's time. A pot of violets could always be seen at the upper window.

A year went by—two years—five; then these two people, Mrs. Dunbar and Paul, were given an for more interesting subjects. Mr. Bradford was getting to be quite an old bachelor, and the widow's hair was plentiful with gray. It was a commencement life they led. Mr. Bradford went to business every morning, as usual, at the same old hour, and returned in the evening to a quiet dinner with Mrs. Dunbar. Sometimes he spent the night with his newspaper, and sometimes accompanied. At rare intervals he went to a theatre or concert, when Mrs. Dunbar generally accompanied him.

Interspersed with these little amusements were letters from South America—letters from a little seaport where Nelly was charmed with the climate, and the little circle of society, in which she was evidently a favorite Harry was engaged in the turpentine trade, and made long journeys into the interior. Mrs. Dunbar became interested in turpentine, the ramifications of which manufacture Paul was made to explain at length. But soon that subject was forgotten; another took its place. Letters came which Paul was not allowed to read—page after page, crossed and interlined, which Mrs. Dunbar read with increasing difficulty, as her sight was unsatisfactory. Paul would look over his newspaper, and ask if he could assist her in any way; whereupon the widow would grow confused, and reply that she could not let him steal Nelly's letters just now; they were of a private nature. Not that she had any secrets from Paul but he was a man—

'An old humdrum fellow, that might as well be an old woman,' plended Paul.

But Mrs. Dunbar shook her head. He was a man, and a single man.

'Which is certainly no fault of mine,' said Paul, who was able now to joke about the past.

Well, this much she would tell him, that she was very anxious about Nelly—in that climate. She didn't know what might be the consequences; a fever might set in.

Paul said that nature would take care of everything, but went down town the next day with a weight at his heart, which grew heavier as the months went by. One day a letter came that Paul sacrificed the best business hours to hasten home, that Mrs. Dunbar seized with avidity, and broke down at the first line. 'It's a girl,' she said giving the letter to Paul, 'and she named it after you; she said she would all along.'

Paul took the letter; his hand shook a little, and he found it hard at first to make out the weak, crooked line. 'I have called my baby Pauline, mamma,' Nelly wrote. 'It is a pretty name, and you will not think it strange, after all that I have told you.'

Paul read these lines over and over again He was not a cautious man, but he would have been glad to know all that Nelly had told her mother. He held his newspaper that night at its usual length from his eyes, and it had the accustomed mediocre of news; but the close little print consolidated into a broad black background whereon Paul saw nothing but the dreamy picture of a Madonna and child.

This was the first year of Nelly's marriage. Three years later a boy was born to her, which barely lived a week. Other children followed, that scarcely survived their birth. Nelly's health had begun to fail, when it became necessary for them to move to the interior of the country, where Harry could better attend to his business. It was a primitive way of living, Nelly wrote, but one could get used to everything.

'I have no doubt it's a thatched hut with an earthen floor,' said Mrs. Dunbar. 'I never expect to see my child again—never! What with the boa-constrictors, and centipedes, and scorpions, and lovers, and floods, and every thing, I never expect to see her again! I've no doubt she is suffering for the necessities of life.'

Paul had reasons of his own for knowing that Nelly did not want for luxuries that money could buy. It was a place where money was of little avail, but comfortable sums had been sent her at various times as her share of her father's estate. Paul had been compelled to give a fictitious rotundity to the amounts derived from this patrimony; it had scarcely sufficed for the wants of the widow but she had not wanted, nevertheless. Paul was not alone in the world. It had been his chiefest comfort to minister to the happiness of these two women. Why should he deny himself that pleasure now? Poor Harry had not been successful in business ventures; one after another had failed. Nelly's letters began to be few and far between. In one of them she spoke of Pauline's beauty and grace.

'When I look at my sweet daughter, wrote Nelly, 'I tremble. If any thing should befall her, I should die. She is like one of the fresh sweet violets I used to love. Her whole life is a sacrifice—to me, to her English neighbors, to the poor natives, even to her cockatoo and monkey. Harry is never here, and I am never well; the dear child's happiness consists in assuaging the miseries of others.'

'She ought to send the child North,' said poor Mrs. Dunbar. 'If I could even have my grand-daughter, Paul?'

'What would Nelly do without her?' said Paul, and turned upon his heel and walked away. How selfish old women were! Here was Mr. Dunbar willing to rob her daughter of the one thing that made life endurable.

But the old lady yearned and fretted till her desire seemed to bring its own fruition. A malignant fever had broken out, and Nelly would send Pauline immediately North.

'Nelly will come too,' cried Paul, his dark face beginning to glow.

'She will not leave her husband,' said Mrs. Dunbar.

'Then let her bring him along,' said Paul who always held Harry as a sort of auxiliary. Paul went out of the house with a light step and a lighter heart. It was settled how they all must come North. He immediately wrote the only lines that he had ever addressed to Harry Haver. Paul could only remember him as the proud slender boy that stood upon the dock that night, with his yellow hair blown about his eyes. Those eyes were closed in death even as Paul wrote and many a weary month went by of silence and anxiety. Just as Paul was casting about for time to go in search of them, a few almost illegible lines came from Nelly announcing their departure. Then more weary months were spent, and Paul's almost despairing heart leaped up within him when at last he saw that cab before the door.

It seemed only yesterday when another cab had crossed his path. It was November again, the street lamps were beginning to glimmer as they did twenty years ago, and the fog to thicken about him. The cab dashed by, but its sweet burden was left here at the house before him —her mother's house, the same old place where she had been so happy long ago. Now she was there at last, with her child and—yes, her husband, poor Harry Haver. Ah, well! it was a merry thing to leave him out upon the door-step with his heart in such a heat. Something must be done for the unfortunate boy. Paul felt his heart expanding as he stood there with the boy in his hand. It was big enough to hold Harry with the rest. There was something quite in Harry's line of business that had come under his notice that day. He would speak of it at once, and get friends with the lad, so that no shadow should rest upon the threshold of this new great joy.

Paul opened the door with trembling fingers. A light shone from the parlor; a tall, slender girl stood there by the big stove rubbing her little hands to-gether, as it seemed to Paul the old only yesterday—twenty years ago. There she stood, with the old starry eyes and the ripe red lips.

'Nell! Nell!' stammered Paul, enabling both her little hands in his. But the girl drew back, and looked at the big bearded man with startled eyes.

A laugh came from the sofa—a laugh that turned into a sob. 'That is Pauline, my daughter. People say she is the image I was long ago, when—when you—

The voice was cured yet, like [illegible] this. Was that Nell?—that [illegible] upon the lounge, with the big [illegible] eyes, the [illegible] face—was that Nelly? Paul looked to her with as much wonderment as the man that Fell opened the door with his hands.

'Don't Paul,' she said. 'If you do I shall break down.'

The very words she had said on the old wharf. Paul took one stride over to the sofa, then stopped short. 'Where is Harry?' he said, in a tone of constraint that he meant to be easy and natural. 'I have a good berth waiting for Harry. He and I must be warm friends. Why, we must be happy yet.'

Nell burst into loud sobs. 'Harry is dead,' she said—'dead of the dreadful fever, many horrible months ago.'

'Dead!' said Paul, with an accent of horror. 'Dead!' he repeated, with a softer inflection. A flush came into his face, which deepened and deepened, then suddenly fled, and left him pale again. A man can't help his thoughts, and those of Paul came so fast and thick they nearly stifled him. Then the young girl came into the room again with her grandmother, who could not take her eyes from the beautiful face.

'Have no Mrs Nell was twenty years ago, isn't she, Paul?' said the old lady, with gleaming eyes, leading the handsome creature straight to Paul's arms. 'There, give her a kiss for her mamma,' said the foolish, fond old lady.

The ripe red lips touched Paul's. A low, shivering cry came from the lounge. The old lady thought it only natural that Nelly should cry just now. Pauline began to cry too. But Paul understood. Paul knew the bitter loneliness, the craving, the unspeakable yearning. It was so plain to him. 'Take Pauline out to supper,' he said to the old lady; 'I will bring Nelly.'

The happy old lady carried her treasure away, but the poor pale creature on the lounge refused to go. 'I want nothing,' she said, 'only to be left alone.'

'Alone!' echoed Paul

'Yes, alone. I am only a wreck. Paul, you and mamma have my old self in my sweet daughter. I am only a burden; let me die. Oh, my sweet daughter! God forgive me! what a miserable creature I am!'

Paul knelt down by her side His face looked so dark beside Nelli's; it was almost fierce in the intensity of feeling. A man can't help his words sometimes; those of Paul were like the tumultuous surging sea, they had been pent up so long. As he spoke, a faint color crept to Nell's wasted cheek. 'Hush! hush!' she said soothingly.

'Think of it,' he went on. 'Twenty long years to eat and drink and sleep, and have the one gnawing sense of loneliness and misery; to go out in the morning, and come back at night to the one monotonous, listless life, the unutilized longing, year in and year out, till twenty have come and gone! You had your husband, your children, your hours of joy. Even your hours of bitterness, your hours of agony, were sweet compared to mine.

'Hush! hush!' said Nelly, taking his trembling hands in her own. 'Come, Paul, mamma is calling us to supper. How nice every thing looks!' she cried, looking about the old-fashioned dining-room. 'See, Pauline, the old sideboard that I have described to you so often! See the pretty brass rings, and the brass hobs on the door old glowing fire. Come to me Pauline, just one little minute, dear.'

Nelly's sweet eyes were wet when she kissed Pauline: she could not forgive herself for her foolish jealousy.

'Let us say grace to-night,' said Paul, from the head of the table, looking over the happy group. He had not been used to the simple ceremony, but he bent his head, and their hearts were full and Paul was happy for the first time in twenty years.

Joy Among the Children.

COPLAND'S SWEET CASTOR OIL, equally suitable for children and adults. Endorsed by over 600 doctors in Canada.

The difficulty of administering nauseous medicines, and the desirability of having the most pleasant to the taste, induced T. Copland to undertake researches which resulted in the discovery of a Sweet Castor Oil, perfectly palatable, of the same strength and medical qualities as the ordinary Castor Oil, and while equally safe and harmless, yet acting with more certainty, and producing neither nausea nor griping. Some children say it is honey; others call it syrup—they all say they like it. One parent says—'My children drink it like water;' another—'We used to hide the bottle or they would have finished it right off;' another—'My little girl has taken it twice without any trouble, and does not know what it is, though she hates the ordinary Castor Oil and we never could get her to take it without a fight;' yet another—'I wish you success of your Sweet Castor Oil; it is a splendid thing —sure to take the place of all the common oil.'

The extraordinary demand for this improvement on a staple household medicine has brought fraudulent imitations into the market, but the public can guard themselves against substitutes (which unprincipled parties are attempting to sell on the reputation of this article) by noting that the name of 'COPLAND'S SWEET CASTOR OIL,' is on both wrapper and direction label.

The Great Shoshonees Remedy

The Great Shoshonees Remedy is an Indian vegetable compound composed of the juices of a variety of remarkable medicinal plants and herbs; the various properties of these different ingredients, when combined as so constituted as to act simultaneously upon the Blood, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys diegestive, Organs, Nervous System, &c. restoring their functions to healthy action, and being purely vegetable, is as harmless a nature's own beverage. This medicine is a decided benefit in all, and a permanent cure in a large majority of diseases of the blood, such as Scrofula, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Canker Pimples, &c. In prescribing this medicine we do not claim that it always performs cures; but this we do say, that it purifies and enriches the blood, permanently curing a large majority of diseases arising from its impurities. It stands far ahead and unequalled among the hundreds of competing medicines of the day It has stood the test of ten years, and is to day more popular than ever. As a summer restorative it stands unrivaled; it enables the system to bear up against the constant drain to which it is subjected by a high temperature. Persons who are subject to bilious Colic, Dysentery, Indigestion, &c., should take the Shoshonees Remedy. Price of the Remedy in pint bottles $1; Pills, 25 cts. a box. Sold by all medicine dealers.

PETITT'S EYE-SALVE.

An Infallible Remedy for all Diseases of the Eye (acute or chronic, Granulation of the Lids, Ulceration of the Lachrymal Glands, Films, and Weakness of the Vision from any cause.

THE AMERICAN EYE-SALVE is presented to the public with the assurance of its efficacy as a curative of the most diseases of the eye, acute or chronic inflammation whether induced by scrofulous origin or otherwise, weakness or defect of vision, diminished tone of the optic nerve, or a diseased state of the tissues constituting that organ. Also for all persons whose vocation requires an incessant action of the eyes, the Salve will act as a charm in restoring a uniform healthy action, wherein pain, and misery may have long threatened a fatal termination. It is the most simple, safe, and effective remedy ever discovered. The materials of which it is made are pure, perfect, and costly, compounded with chemical care and accuracy, safe in its application, being used externally, and, of course, lessening the pain and danger, which necessarily attends the introduction of minerals and eye-washes. Numerous and Oak Certificates, of scrofulous origin, or resulting from whatever cause, yield to the AMERICAN EYE-SALVE. It is used successfully for Piles. Its soothing effect is immediate, permanence once required but a few applications. The proprietors of "Dr. J. PETITT'S AMERICAN EYE-SALVE," while making new and improved machinery for making a more perfect box for the Eye-Salve, have changed the Trade Mark on the wrapper, as an additional safeguard, and to prevent imitation in this, as it might otherwise be supposed as counterfeit.

PETERBORO' BRANCH, - DIXON'S BLOCK.

Goods Sold Direct to the People at Wholesale Price.

The Only Business in Canada Conducted on the Same Principle.

Over $200,000 Worth of Boots and Shoes so Supplied Last Year.

The great loss annually sustained by selling to Dealers, first led to our establishing of Branch Stores, where we could supply direct to the people for Cash all the goods we could manufacture, thus giving to the people the goods less the dealer's profit, and saving to ourselves the annual loss. We were the more forcibly impressed into this step from the fact that cheap Eastern-made shoddy goods were being palmed off as our goods. We now sell our own goods, warrant what we sell, use no shoddy or inferior material of any kind, and can and do supply goods of the best quality 25 per cent less than they can be bought elsewhere.

Everything Marked in Plain Figures. Only One Price.

CUSTOM DEPARTMENT.

Our arrangements are now complete in this department, and we can make to measure promptly either Ladies', Gentlemen's, or Children's Goods, in the Latest Styles, at little over half the price usually charged.

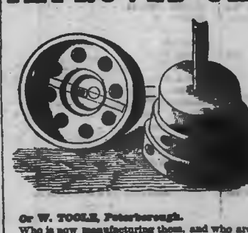
IMPROVED CHURN DASHER.



(Patented, July, 1878.)

Is adapted to all the old fashioned Round, Tub or Crock Churns. It will churn and gather the butter in from 4 to 10 minutes, and turn out 10 per cent more butter than anything of the kind in use. Each motion or Stroke is an Air Chamber, which forces a large volume of atmosphere down into the milk or cream at each stroke, the cream or milk at the same time is forced over upward of four hundred inches of surface, and is thrown with such great velocity square against the walls of the churn that it ruptures the globules and frees the butter with a few strokes. It is perfectly simple and easily constructed,—no machinery about it to get out of order.

Charles Clarke's Perfect Spiral Truss Pad has been the result of many years' study and careful experience. Its perfect adaptability for Ruptures is proven by the thousands now in use. Among its many advantages are its great comfort, the unnecessary waist over garments; it gives to the motion of the body without [illegible] as shown in suppressing a clogging overcome which does not open (as all oval pads) but closes the aperture of Hernia, hence only one-third pressure is required. It is this latter feature that has made this truss so eminently successful and proved a Radical Cure of from 50 to 70 per cent. of cases treated. This Truss cured patient of over 20 years of age. Only one belt round the waist, no leg straps and no springs required for its use.

CATARRH.

Constitutional Catarrh Remedy. Cures Catarrh.

T. J. B. HARDING, Esq., BROCKVILLE, ONT.

DEAR SIR.—It is now two years since your "Constitutional Catarrh Remedy" was introduced to me. I have waited this long to see if the cure would remain permanent before doing this, my duty, to you, as at first the happy effects seemed to me to be "too good to be true."

I was afflicted in my head for years before I commenced it to be Catarrh. In reading in your Circular I saw my case described in many particulars. The inward "drop" from the head had become very disagreeable, and a choking sensation often prevented me from lying long. I would feel this approaching and be compelled to sit up in the bed. My hearing and spirits were seriously affected. When your Agent came to Walkerton in August 1877, I secured three bottles. Before I had used a quarter of the contents of one bottle I decided relief, and when I had used two bottles and a third, I quite believe it, the entire cause of that ailment, and have not used any since until of late I have taken some for a cold in my head.

A sense of duty to sufferers from that loathsome disease, Catarrh, prompts me to send you this Certificate, unsolicited, with leave to make what use of it you may see proper. Yours truly,

W. TINDALL, Methodist minister,
Fort Elgin, Ont., Aug. 24, 1878.

PETERBOROUGH, JULY 31, 1879.

PROVINCIAL RIGHTS.

Mr. Letellier has been dismissed from the position of Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Quebec.

Why?

The notification sent him from the Secretary of State's Office assigns the cause in the following words :—"After "the vote of the House of Commons last "session, and that of the Senate during "the preceding session, relative to your "conduct as Lieutenant-Governor, your "usefulness as such has ceased." And the resolutions of the Senate and House of Commons referred to in the notification are no more explicit of any cause than are the words of the notification itself. The only declaration made is that the usefulness of the Lieutenant-Governor had ceased. When or how is not explained, neither is any reference made to the manner or direction of the gentleman's usefulness in his official position.

Of what use is a Lieutenant-Governor, anyway? If he has no power to stand between an injurious government and the people whom they injure, why does he hold office at all? If he has no power beyond blind and implicit obedience to his ministers he certainly can have no usefulness, he is rather an expensive and useless figure-head—a mere point—having position, but no magnitude in the realm. If this decision of the "Letellier case" is to be taken as a precedent it may be said, in a general sense of each and every Lieutenant-Governor in the Dominion:—"His usefulness is gone," and Mr. Letellier's successor, as well as his fellows in the other Provinces, may as well be gone.

But this, we take it, is not the desire of the people of the Dominion, though it is the logical sequence of the dismissal of Mr. Letellier. Canadians know well the importance of preserving their local rights of self-government. At Confederation it was distinctly understood and affirmed that in matters of local concern, each of the Provinces should be entirely self-governing—free from the interference of other Provinces, either independently or as constituted in the Dominion. Then Sir John Macdonald wanted a Legislative Union; but this was strenuously opposed by the friends of popular liberty. And strange it is that the very Province that saw itself menaced most directly by the prospect of a Legislative Union, now has the humiliation of seeing its representatives in the Dominion Parliament taking action in that direction. They seem to utterly disregard the rights of their Province, if they can but gratify the truly Tory idea of centralisation of power in one place, and in their party.

This idea of a Legislative Union was, it will be remembered, advanced by the Tories early in the last Dominion election campaign; but they, seeing it would not take in Ontario at least, soon dropped it. But since their accession to power the leaders of the party have been working towards it and as the matter turns out, only too successfully. So great a step toward it in this dismissal of Lieutenant-Governor Letellier, that it becomes the friends of popular and Provincial rights to be up and doing in opposition to the evident centralization tactics of the Tory leaders.

We shall soon have the cry revived concerning the great expense of Provincial Governments, and suggestions that they might better be abolished in favor of one government body. That is the proposition; but it is just like one for the doing away of township, town and village councils in favor of the county council! The people of Canada are not surely willing that such a change should be made in the constitution.

All those who stand by Provincial rights as opposed to Dominion control of Provincial votes, must condemn the dismissal of Lieutenant-Governor Letellier. He, that is, his Ministers, were sustained by the votes of the people of the Province of Quebec, and Mr. Joly and his colleagues are still so sustained. But the persecutors of Mr. Letellier attempt to defend themselves by holding that the dismissal was based on errors of the people's representatives in the Senate and House of Commons—the Dominion Chambers. In this way the right of deciding on their own Provincial affairs by the people of Quebec, has been over-ruled by the votes of men from other Provinces, elected to a Chamber (the House of Commons) entirely outside Quebec or its Provincial concerns, and sent to that Chamber on entirely different grounds than those upon which are based the affairs upon which they pretend to judge for the Province. Where is such interference going to end?

Mr. Letellier is not officially accused of any unconstitutional action. It is safe to say, this is because his persecutors found it impossible to bring such an accusation against him. In dismissing his Ministers, (De Boucherville & Co.) even when they had a majority in Parliament, he exercised a power perfectly within his constitutional functions. He is not then dismissed on constitutional grounds. What then? On partisan grounds mainly. This being the case, will the party that has compassed his dismissal rest satisfied with that? Can they, indeed, consistently stop short now? If he were wrong in dismissing the De Boucherville government, the Joly Ministry holds office wrongfully; and these avengers of wrong and champions of right, to be perfectly consistent, must bring about the downfall of the Joly, and the return of the De Boucherville Cabinet. How will this be accomplished? It can only be by the electors of Quebec giving up entirely their rights and liberties, and suffering themselves cowardly to be throttled.

The Reform press having argued against the probability of the Governor-General agreeing to the dismissal of Mr. Letellier, the Tory papers have expected an outcry against the Marquis of Lorne personally. But it was not likely that those who condemned the personal abuse of a Lieutenant-Governor for an official act, would themselves indulge in abuse of the Governor-General for a similar act. As the Joly Ministry was, and is responsible for the dismissal of De Boucherville and his colleagues, so Sir John Macdonald and his fellow-Ministers are responsible for the removal of Mr. Letellier from his office. We cannot understand, for we cannot imagine, the causes that led the Governor-General to acquiesce in the demand for Mr. Letellier's dismissal. We are of opinion that he and the world in general will yet look on it as the greatest mistake of his life. But that is neither here nor there. His present Ministers are alone responsible; just as their successors would have been had he taken the opposite course. On his advisers lies the whole blame, and to them it will be attached.

WHAT IT COSTS.

The question of money is always attractive. If it is gain the hope of it allures to consideration, and anticipated loss or undue expense is certain to gain attentive ears. At the present time the great attractions are, the sea-board, the camp, the fishing ground, or excursions. Matters of money, whether outlay or income, are of little moment, compared with recreation, recuperation, or associations of pleasure, or of friendship. These times of fun and frolic will soon pass, and then all must return to matters of fact, and of every day life. It may not be out of place for us to consider some questions which relate to how our money goes, or what things cost us.

All our outlays come under four general heads, viz :- county rate or criminal justice; town rate, or sidewalks, bridges and officials; and school rate, public and collegiate. Almost forty ($39) thousand dollars of our taxes are disposed under one or other of these heads. The rate has been divided thus :

County Rate.....8/10 mills.
Town Rate.....63/10 mills.
Public S. Rate.....50/10 mills.
Collegiate I. Rate....13/10 mills.

And we find also that the separate school education costs 47/10 mills, but the latter is a private matter. The county rate we cannot control, until crime and the causes that lead to it are controlled or removed, and this, we fear, we need not expect for a long time to come. Crime must be punished, and peace-loving and law-abiding citizens must pay to punish it. The Town rate is large. About one-half of all our taxes is absorbed annually in keeping our town respectable, and some of its less thrifty citizens in respectability, or from starvation. At present we do not propose to investigate the wisdom or on the contrary of the outlay of these $16,000 or $20,000 of the people's money. The people appear satisfied with the Town Council's management of their finances in this respect, and why should we disturb our, or their repose in searching after where the money goes? The remainder of our taxes goes to educate the rising generation, to prepare them for active life when the present men shall have laid aside the struggle for the opportunity to manage the town finances for it is a hand in the management of the people's money, that induces men to sacrifice their time, and to engage in the bustle of municipal elections, and the noisy debates of the council room from week to week. But then it is all in the interests of the people. Nothing else could induce men to undergo such annoyances and abuse as are heaped on Councillors for their great sacrifice of ease repose

The cost of our educational machinery has been a fruitful source of debate and unpleasant animadversion for some years; some holding that too much money is spent on education, especially on higher education to the neglect, it has been urged, of public school education, and Trustees have sought election avowedly to remedy this fancied or real evil. How far they have redeemed their pledges we leave others to determine. The figures on the tax collector's receipt, give us a glance at comparative costs. Public school education costs the ratepayers five mills on the dollar, higher, or Collegiate, one and three-tenth mills, or one-fourth of what common school education costs. These figures include all outlay in connection with their respective divisions, which the ratepayers are called upon to provide. The comparative costs too, are fairly in proportion to the numbers taught. Government grants meet what might be termed outlay for teaching subjects which might be dispensed with in seeking to impart a good common school education.

The question that in supporting higher education, the poor man is educating the rich man's children, will vanish by comparing the division of the rate. We may safely state that three-fourths of all the taxes are paid by persons desirous of giving their children a liberal education, leaving not more than one-fourth to be paid by those who might be termed poor men. The rich man, therefore, must pay three-fourths of all paid for education, and on this basis he would pay 48/10 mills, nearly, while the poor man would contribute 1½ mills for all purposes of education. It is therefore very evident that if left to educate his children without aid, the sum he now pays would provide for them a very limited education indeed, and then they would reasonably be debarred from the advantages of our Collegiate Institute, unless at an increased expenditure which they would be ill prepared to meet; and this would deprive them of those avenues to progress and future respectability, which education opens up to the child of the poor man, as freely as to the child of the rich man. The question that education is costing to much, must be a mere myth, for we find our Trustees are just now building fences, and platforms, and making repairs that will cost over $1000, and we are not ready to accuse them of extravagant outlay. They must have the money, and the people must have paid it over, or soon will do so, or our Board of Education would not be now expending it.

The Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec.

The Hon. Theodore Robitaille, the new Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec, was sworn in by his Excellency the Governor-General at Quebec on Saturday, in the presence of Ministers, Langevin, Bowell, and Baby. Mr. Robitaille became Receiver-General of the Macdonald Administration in the beginning of 1878, and held that office until its downfall in November of the same year. He has represented the County of Bonaventure in the House of Commons since confederation, and he represented it also in the Quebec Assembly from 1871 to 1874, in which latter year he was succeeded by his present colleague, Mr. Tarte. The Hon. Theodore Robitaille, M. D., is descended from one of the oldest French families in Canada. His grand uncles served their country in various ways; one as chaplain to the active militia force during the war of 1812, another was one of the founders of St. Anne College, and another was a member of the Canadian Legislature from 1809 to 1829, a period of twenty years. He is the son of the late Louis Adolphe Robitaille, Esq., N. P., and was born at Varennes in 1834, and is consequently a comparatively young man—forty-five years of age. He was educated at the Model School of his native village, and after study at Ste. Therese Seminary and the Laval University, graduated M. D. at the University of McGill College in 1858. The appointment has been received with no expressions of disapprobation upon either side, and has caused no disappointment so far as we know, although an English-speaking Lieutenant-Governor was promised by those journals which are supposed to possess the confidence of Sir John Macdonald.

RAILWAY MEETING.

We learn that on Friday (to-morrow) there will be a meeting at "Oak Orchard," of gentlemen from Bobcaygeon, Peterborough and Cobourg, to promote the extension of the Cobourg Railway to the village of Bobcaygeon. The question of railway connection with our sister village to the north, has been so often before the public and with so much uncertainty, that we dare not even surmise the probable results of the approaching assembly of railway promoters. The utmost we can do at present is to wish that something definite may be arrived at. The road is already completed to Chemong Lake, 10 miles north of this town. There are 14 miles, nearly, to be completed. So far as labor is concerned the present time is opportune for constructing the remaining portion. All that is wanted is money to ensure immediate action. If Bobcaygeon had been true to its interests in the past, the railway would have been there long ago, and we believe that even yet, if united, the road will soon be constructed. If not now, the chances are against that village having communication in the present generation. The meeting will be in the form of a social gathering, a report of which will appear in our next issue.

The Montreal Witness in commenting on the dismissal of Mr. Letellier, says:—Public opinion in this province was so strong against the dismissal of Mr. Letellier, and found open and official expression so many occasions, that it appeared very improbable that Sir John A Macdonald would ignore it. Up to the very latest hour, even when the announcement had been made in such a form as to appear semi-official; many, including, it appears, the persons most chiefly concerned, Lieutenant-Governor Letellier and his Ministers, refused to believe that it had been decided upon. Lieut. Governor Letellier will retire from his office with the assurance of having earned the respect and gratitude of the majority of the people of the province, the welfare of which he has done so much to promote, and with, what is far better, the consciousness of having fearlessly performed the duties entrusted to him at a time when their performance was urgently needed. The province will reap the benefit of his action, a benefit which is now so manifest that it is not endangered by the injustice which has been meted out to him.

Says an American exchange: The high tariff agony in Canada continues. The report of customs receipts are now in for April, May and June, and show a decrease under the new tariff of $704,912 as compared with the receipts under the lower revenue tariff for the same months of 1875. As to exports, the returns for June are not at hand, but for May the decrease in values in comparison with May of 1878 is $926,020. The decrease in the value of imports for the same month reaches the large total of $3,251,736. Canada, therefore, is losing exports, losing imports and losing duties. Her ill-made tariff sends leaks at loopholes, fissure and between the staves.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The yellow fever at Memphis continues to spread, yet the death rate is not as large as in 1878.

The Orange and Green factions had a fight in Ottawa Saturday evening. A hundred shots were fired, and two Y.B.'s were hit.

A fatal epidemic has broken out in a section of Nebraska, and they are dying at the rate of 50 per day. The mortality is principally among milch cows.

Chicago Times: There was no fuss made in Canada over the Duke of Argyle. It was discovered that he was merely the father of the Marquis of Lorne, and no relative of Haslan.

The passenger steamer City of Toronto, running on the Toronto and Niagara route, ran aground off Mississauga Fort, on Friday, during a thick fog. All the passengers were safely landed.

The 5th of June seems to have witnessed a tolerably honest fight. There are only, we think, five contested election cases to be tried. Four of the seats thereto-fore are held by Conservatives.

In Manitoba the Orangemen appear to be demanding what is tantamount to an act of Incorporation, which may lead to a little unpleasantness, as the subject has done in several other Provinces.

The Toronto Mail says Sir A. T. Galt will reside in England as a sort of Canadian ambassador—with, no doubt, a large salary, and a big allowance for "expenses." That's the way the money goes!

The Philadelphia Leader, talking of the lives lost, the persons maimed, and the property destroyed, through Fourth of July fireworks, earnestly urges municipalities every where to prohibit the use of fireworks in toto.

Mr. Sidney Hunter, of Ottawa, carried off the first prize for mathematics at the London, Eng. University. Now, shall we charter a fleet of vessels to meet him on his return and take up a subscription for the purchase of a homestead? Or are successful rowers only heroes?

Boston Traveller: From almost every department of trade and manufactures there comes reports that business is improving. There is an increased demand for goods, larger sales, better prices, more employment for men and women, and, what is of much consequence to those who have lost so heavily in the past years, a credit on the right side of the ledger.

The late Prince Imperial made a will in which he gave about $100,000 to friends besides providing life pensions of something like $30,000 a year to certain others But it is understood that the ex-Empress has scarcely more means at her command than will enable her to live in the modest style she now supports. Where is the legacy money to come from? It is mentioned as a fact that Napoleon 1., by his will made at St. Helena, bequeathed millions of francs to various persons, but his estate only proved to be worth about $300,000.

The United States Treasury Department is engaged in the preparations of a circular to show the price paid for skilled labour during the past ten years and the cost of the necessaries of life of each year embraced in a decade. It is understood that while it will show that a workman received more for his labour ten years ago, it will also demonstrate that the reduction in the price of all commodities will enable him now to buy for the same money a third more than he could ten years ago.

Messrs. Dun, Wiman & Co. report that there were 1067 failures in Canada, during the last six months, ending July 30th, with liabilities aggregating $17,495, 943. In the same time last year, there were 947 failures with liabilities of $13,-509, 729. There is thus an increase of 120 in the number of failures and $3,916,-214 in the amount of liabilities, the average liabilities having swelled to $16,381 per failure against $14, 265 in 1878. Whatever else the N. P. has done it certainly has not lessened the number of bankupts, nor the amount of their liabilities. On the contrary they have largely increased since it was foisted on the country, which is anything but an evidence of prosperity.

The Ottawa Free Press contains the following:—The bravery displayed by Mr. Letellier in upholding the dignity and independence of his province must challenge the admiration of all true lovers of liberty, whether enrolled in the Liberal or the Conservative ranks. He has fallen from power for having had the courage to exercise his constitutional prerogative and for having rid the province of a nest of cormorants who were eating at its very vitals. In the eyes of a partisan majority his "usefulness" may have gone, but his name will be enshrined in the hearts of his countrymen when men like Messrs. Chapleau, Angers and Mousseau are forgotten.

Guelph Mercury: The Prussian idea of making every man a soldier is likely to be introduced, to some extent at least, in Canada. At the present time, when so much of the power and influence of nations is made to depend on the proficiency with which the subject can handle a rifle and a battalion, the proposal to drill the students of Colleges, High Schools, and other places of education will probably meet with a good deal of favour. Besides furnishing good healthy amusement for our young men and boys, this scheme will tend to foster that methodical precision which is absolutely necessary in every business. A sufficient sum has already been set apart in this year's Estimates for the purpose referred to, and the young Canadian will no doubt in the course of a year or to, feel every inch a soldier.

The Canadian rifle team has carried off a good many honors at Wimbledon this year. Lieut.-Col. Gibson, M.P.P., Hamilton, won the Prince of Wales' prize of one hundred pounds and a badge, on scoring 94 points out of a possible 105. The Duke of Cambridge visited the camp the same day and inspected the Canadian team. He expressed great pleasure in seeing them again, and congratulated them upon winning the Prince of Wales' prize the second most important contest at the meeting. England, he said did not grudge the Canadians the honor they won, for they formed part of the same Empire, engaged in the same duty of defence. He concluded by assuring the Canadians that they would be always welcome there. The Colonial Secretary joined in the congratulations offered by the Duke of Cambridge, and expressed the pleasure it afforded him to see the team again engaged in the contest. He took the opportunity of announcing that in future a certain proportion of cadets from the Military Academy of Kingston would be allowed annually to take commission in the British Army.

Toronto and Ottawa Railway.

MR. W. H. SCOTT BEFORE THE OTTAWA CITY COUNCIL.

A special meeting of the Ottawa city council was held in Ottawa on Friday evening last, for the purpose of hearing Mr. Scott in relation to the project west from Ottawa.

Mr. Scott said that he had not much to state, as they were all aware of the condition of the railway project, for no change had occurred in its position during the last year and a half, at which time a bonus was asked from Toronto and one was to be voted upon in this city the day following the vote in Toronto. At Toronto the bonus by-law was defeated, and the one in Ottawa was not put to the test. Of the proposed Toronto and Ottawa Railway, 140 miles of the line had been surveyed—40 miles from Toronto to Port Perry; and 100 miles from Peterborough to Lanark County. The surveys being made by Mr. Murdoch and by Mr. Stewart, the latter having been the Chief Engineer of the Midland Railway. The bonus voted by the various municipalities remained intact, with the exception of the one voted by a group in Lanark County, the Council of which through some reason or other, did not extend the time, but he had been assured by prominent residents of Lanark that the bonus would be re-voted at any time it was desired. Ottawa had been asked to vote $200,000 in favor of the scheme, and the request was now repeated by the company. The Toronto by-law was for $300,-000 but he was satisfied from what he had learned that its defeat was mainly due to influences of a very questionable character brought into operation by the Grand Trunk Railway Company, whose business would be injured to some extent by the construction of the proposed Toronto and Ottawa Railway. He was satisfied that the people of Toronto—ever alive to their interests—would have adopted the by-law had there been no outside interference. The original proposition was that Toronto should hold one-third of the stock of the railway, Peterborough one-third, and Ottawa the other third. It was now purposed that the proprietary interest in the company be apportioned between Ottawa, Perth and Peterboro' until the city of Toronto came into the scheme. The building of that section of the line between Ottawa and Peterboro', forming connection with the Midland Railway, would give a shorter route to the Georgian Bay, the terminus being one of the finest harbors on our inland lakes. The route would be much shorter than by the proposed Georgian Bay Branch of the Canada Pacific, and would therefore control the trade of the North West to and from the seaboard. The construction of the road would place Ottawa at once upon a most important highway and could not help but be of great benefit to it, in addition to which the country through which the line would pass would be opened out. The company desired to learn the feeling of the people of the city in regard to the project, which he considered was the most advantageous brought before the public for a good length of time. He had given considerable time and attention to the scheme, and wished it to be brought to a head soon, or else dropped. The $2300,000 asked from Ottawa, they would like to have it fixed so that two-thirds could be expended on the section between Ottawa and Peterborough, and the other third on the other portion of the line, from Peterboro' west, so that in this latter section not being built, two-thirds of the purposed bonus could be called for. He might say that the company so far had expended some $15,000 for the furtherance of the work, no part of which was paid to any of the members of the Board for services. The accounts had been duly audited by the City Clerk of Peterboro'. He was ready to give any further explanations to the Council or ratepayers that might be desired.

THE CITIZEN'S PUBLIC MEETING.

On Tuesday evening a large and influential meeting of the ratepayers was held to consider the propriety of submitting a by-law granting $300,000 to the road.

Mr. SCOTT, after some preliminary discussion, addressed the meeting, the substance of which was similar to that delivered before the Council.

Senator SEMAD spoke in favor of granting a bonus for the road direct to Toronto, but entertained doubts as to the advisability of terminating the road at Peterborough and switching of on the Midland Road. He advocated the utilization of the Canada Central Railway.

Mr. W. G. PERLEY moved, seconded by Dr. SWEETLAND:

That this meeting endorse the proposed scheme of building the Toronto & Ottawa Railway, and recommends that measures should be adopted for the submission of a carefully considered By-law granting a bonus of $300,000 to the project; and this meeting would further recommend that one-third of the total amount be reserved, and only become payable after the City of Toronto has voted the amount of the bonus asked by the promoters in order to complete a direct and through route connecting the capital of Ontario with the capital of the Dominion.

Mr. PERLEY spoke briefly in support of the motion, and pointed out the advantages which would accrue to Ottawa from its construction. Without decrying the times or the city, he had no hesitation in saying that the city was in a most deplorable condition, and that large numbers of men were unemployed who should be employed at this season of the year. He claimed that the construction of the road would relieve to a considerable extent these difficulties.

Mr. R. LEES, seconded by Ald. CLARCY, moved in amendment,

That in opinion of this meeting it would be unwise to submit a by-law for a bonus to said road to the ratepayers of Ottawa or its vicinity until the decision of the Government regarding the Ottawa Bridge—which it is confidently anticipated by many well informed on the subject will be favorable—be obtained.

Both the mover and seconder of the amendment supported it by brief speeches.

The amendment and motion were then put. Only four persons voted for the former, and the latter was carried by an almost unanimous vote. The results was received with loud applause.

A Fatal Storm.

A CHILD KILLED IN ITS MOTHER'S ARMS AND THE MOTHER MORTALLY INJURED.

BROCKVILLE, July 27.—About 3 p. m. a terrible thunder storm passed over this place. Hail-stones as large as marbles fell. The lightning was very severe. The wife and child of George Hutton, boat builder, who were on the American shore opposite here, took refuge under a tree. The child was killed in its mother's arms and Mrs. Hutton fatally injured. She appears paralized and unconscious. It is reported that a man named Larocque was also struck on one of the Islands up the river. The lightning also struck the residence of Wm. Gilmour, splintering the cornice. It made a large hole in the roof of Mrs. Loft's residence on George street. It riddled a dozen telegraph poles on the Canada Central just outside the town. A bolt struck in the yard of Mr. Abbott and ploughed the ground up for several yards. It also tore the slates from the roof of the Roman Catholic church.

OBITUARY.

Port Hope Guide.)

In another column will be found the announcement of the death of Mr. Joseph Barnard, one of the oldest settlers in the district, who, during the last seven years has resided in Port Hope. The subject of our notice was born on the 15th of February, 1797, and was consequently in his 83rd year when he died. He was born near Doncaster, in Yorkshire, England, where he lived until he was 23 years of age. He was married and the father of five children when he emigrated to this country in 1821, coming first to Smith's Creek, where he lived a short time, but finally settled in the township of South Monaghan. He continued to reside in that township until some seven years ago when he came to Port Hope and lived a retired life. Mr. Barnard was long connected with the municipal and other public matters affecting the municipality where he resided. As Reeve, he was re-elected time and again, and was only compelled to relinquish public office by declining years and strength. At the age of 17 he was converted and became a devoted member of the Methodist church, with which church he had journeyed his connection up to the day of his death, about 60 years. During many of years he had been a local preacher and for many years a class leader. He leaves behind him an aged widow, two sons and one daughter to mourn his loss. One of his sons, Mr. Joseph Barnard, has been for years Reeve of South Monaghan. These are the only survivors of a family of twelve children. His funeral takes place to-morrow (Sunday) from the family residence on Bramley street, to the Methodist Cemetery in South Monaghan.

Quebec's Finances.

Mr. Langelier, Treasurer of the Province of Quebec, delivered his budget speech on Tuesday. The total revenue of the Province up to the 30th of June 1879, was $2,784,838,08 and the expenditure $2,-838,444,36, leaving a deficit of $43,606.64. There was a deficit discovered in the accounts of the late Government, of $685,-603. While it cost the De Boucherville Administration $2,220,165 to conduct the affairs of the Province during their last year of office, Mr. Joly's Government spent only $1,958,243, a saving of $270,-922. So much for honest Reform against Tory rule. Is it any wonder that the Province has declared so emphatically and frequently in favor of Mr. Joly. The Treasurer expects a surplus of $370,-000 on the operations of the current year! There is hope yet for our sister Province —while Mr. Joly holds the reins of Government. It matters comparatively little who occupies Spencerwood so long as Mr. Joly is Premier.

The Prairie Province.

WHAT IS GOING ON IN WINNIPEG.

THE FOLLOWING LETTER FROM WINNIPEG WILL BE FOUND INTERESTING.

I happened rather unluckily to arrive here about the middle of the rainy season and it rained with a vengeance ever since. If the people of Ontario want to understand what three months rainy weather will do in Manitoba I would advise them to come out here about the beginning of April, for the effect is better imagined than described. In the first place, you will have to imagine the adhesiveness of Manitoba mud, for Ontario boasts of no such stickitiveness in her Province. In the road to the station at St. Boniface (about two miles from Winnipeg) I have seen no less than six vehicles fast in the mud at the same time, and the air almost thick with the curs-orary remarks of their drivers, who were fast getting into the same fix. The mud has, however, one redeeming feature, and that is that it only requires about two hours sun to dry it up so as to be quite safe to walk on, although the sensation is something like walking on rubber, it is so springy.

There have been seven deaths by drowning since I have been here, and indeed it seems as if when the Red or Assiniboine Rivers once get a human being into their grasp they never relinquish their hold. They are both very swift and have strong undercurrents, so that it is very hard for a swimmer to keep on top, and if he once touches bottom he will never rise again, for the treacherous mud holds him fast. Want of good water is felt a great deal here, as there are only two or three good wells in it, and the water from either of the rivers is not fit to drink without filtering.

Notwithstanding a great many disadvantages that it possesses, there is no doubt but that Manitoba offers good homes for farmers with a little capital (at least $800), but it is no place to come looking for work. It is true enough that there is considerable work going on in connection with the Railway and Surveys, but it is also true that there are a great many men in Manitoba who are looking for just such work and a great many more arriving every day from all parts of Canada and the United States.

Winnipeg is growing very fast, and although it is quite an important city now in a few more years it will be doubly so. Several new brick stores have gone up during the past few weeks, and there are several more starting. There are a large number of Mennonites around the vicinity of Winnipeg, and they can be seen on the streets at any time. They are slow phlegmatic people, and seem closely allied to the Germans in habit, though not in form, for they are all tall and thin, and are always dressed in dull sombre colors with a small cap.

Mr. Ben Gordon, from Ottawa, walked in a twenty-five mile heel and toe match, a short time since, and took second prize. A man named Walker—by the way a good man for a pedestrian—taking first, but of course, he could not be expected to win the race from a born "Walker." Pedestrianism is all the rage here at the present time.

Sitting Bull's nephew and confidential clerk, Wild Elk, was one of the defeated contestants in a former match. He is a tall and well built Indian, with long curly hair and is good looking for an Indian, though, if he were white, he would not be considered a beauty. He is very reticent and will not speak of his uncle at all, but gives a broad grin and a sharp glance from his piercing black eyes whenever spoken to on that point.

Beautiful Pictures For All.

The Great Art Publishing House of George Stinson & Co., of Portland, Maine moves steadily on the even tenor of its way, apparently not feeling the dull times. During the year 1878 they sold over Four Million pictures of all descriptions. They publish every description of fine pictures, and the prices range from ten cents upwards to twenty dollars per copy. Their correspondence for this large business is immense; they receive, on an average, over one thousand letters per day. Messrs. Stinson & Co. publish only the better class of pictures, and it is well known that anything coming from this reliable house is of standard merit. We have just received copies of four very fine steel engravings, which they have just brought out. The plates were engraved in London, at an expense of four thousand pounds sterling, or twenty thousand dollars, to which great sum must be added the customs duty of twenty-five per cent on account of their being imported into the United States. These engravings are after paintings by great modern masters of art, and the artists who engraved the plates stand in the front rank of the worlds renowned engravers.

It is believed and generally conceded, that these engravings make up the finest and most elegant set of works of high art ever brought out by American publishers. This enterprising firm, though many years in the Art Publishing business, have not grown old and unprogressive, but on the other hand make improvement and progress year by year, giving the people better and better pictures for the same or less money. They may, we feel sure, fairly claim to stand at the head of the Art Publishing business in America. We can only understand the colossal proportions their trade has assumed by remembering that this is a great and mighty nation of nearly fifty million people. We cannot better illustrate the magnitude of their business than to state the amount of money paid by them for postage stamps during the years 1876, 1877, and 1878. We have the figures direct from the firm, or we should think there was some error. In 1876, they paid for postage $33,104,-92. In 1877, they paid for postage $37,-396, 76. In 1878 the amount of money that they paid for postage stamps was simply enormous—a little over $50,000-000. Stinson & Co stand among the largest and most judicious advertisers in the country, and a short time since paid in a single day $24,000, 00 in cash on a contract for advertising. They employ agents everywhere throughout the United States and Dominion of Canada for the sale of their pictures by subscription; we call attention to their advertisement for agents in another column. Those who need pleasant profitable work, should correspond with them.

Besides paying the amounts of postage stated above, their express and freight bills are enormous—only small orders are sent by mail, the larger being sent by express and freight. American homes should be made beautiful by refined works of art, and prices for really meritorious pictures are now so low that there can be no excuse for the walls to remain glaring, unadorned and useless. American homes should be made beautiful, and the time is coming of this will be to make some one of Stinson's the Boy of [illegible] Maine.

The Montgomery Examination.

His Friends "Bailey," and is Committed on Two Charges.

(From the Port Hope Guide.)

PORT HOPE, July 19th.—James A. Montgomery was brought up this morning for examination, before R. H. Holland, Esq., P.M. The prisoner arrived by carriage about 8 a.m., in charge of C. Calver, Esq., Governor of Cobourg Jail, and on the arrival of the train from Toronto, about 10 o'clock, there appeared Detective Reburn, Mr. James B. Boustead, who was present on behalf of the creditors, and his counsel, from Toronto. About half-past ten, the prisoner was brought in by Chief Marshall, and given a seat near the bench. As he entered he held his hat before his face and tried to avoid the gaze of the crowd. His face bore an appearance of anxiety, and looked thin and haggard, although in body he appeared stout and healthy. He sank into the seat and breathed heavily, holding his head to his face. His father and brother arrived and sat beside him, and he occasionally, but not often conversed with them. At last, about 11:20, his worship took his seat on the bench, and having called James A. Montgomery, the prisoner stood up. The first charge against him was for having forged the endorsement of C. Quinlan, to a certain promissory note, for $600, made by himself, on the 2nd of December, 1878, and payable on year from date, and to this he pleaded guilty.

The next charge was that he had within thirty days before the issue of a writ of attachment against him under the insolvent act, embezzled, concealed and removed from his place of business eleven gentlemen's gold watches, of the value of $1,252.52 and that he withheld the production of a certain passbook containing a list of articles taken away. When asked what he had to say to this charge he said as regards the taking away or withholding the book, he withheld no book of any kind. Any list he may have had was made afterward. As to the taking away of the goods he was guilty.

The counsel for the prosecution said that they would withdraw that part of the charge relating to the book.

On both the charges his worship made an order for his committment for trial. The Chief then announced that the business was over, and the crowd quietly dispersed.

Mr. Ira D. Sankey, after a sojourn of several months in England, sailed for the United States July 17, with the intention of joining Mr. Moody in a fall and winter campaign in the West. He was laid aside for two months in England by a severe cold, but received his voice before sailing.

The Hastings Star says:—The Grand Junction—so far as Hastings is concerned—is un fait accompli. The station house—a neat little brick structure—will be completed in a few days The track-layers, with, the engine and cars used for that purpose are now engaged at ballasting drawing the ballast from Lennox's cutting, and as the road is ballasted for five miles west of Campbellford, but a very few days will be required to complete it for travel. Bickford is about to erect a grain warehouse at the G. J. Depot here for the accommodation of our farmers. This will be a great benefit to all.

LOCAL NEWS.

Retrenching.—Mr. T. G. Hazlitt has finally decided to build in Minden, and will start on two stores immediately on Dixon's corner.

Cobourg V.M.C.A. Excursion.—About seventy-five persons left this town yesterday morning for Rochester, by the cheap excursion under the auspices of the Cobourg Young Men's Christian Association.

Gun Overheard.—The Band will accompany the members of the Council and those attending the railway meeting on Friday, and in consequence will not be able to give their usual open air rehearsal to-morrow evening.

Still Offering.—S. White is still offering his summer stock of Boots and Shoes at and below cost, in order to clear it out before the fall trade sets in. Genuine bargains may be relied upon, as the stock is all of the latest patterns and best material. 31-tin

Miscellaneous.—Among the names of those who successfully passed the late matriculation examinations in connection with the University of Toronto, we find those of Messrs. E. L. Hunt and W. Scott, from the Collegiate Institute, Peterborough.

The Moral of Bigamy.—Speaking of bigamy trials in London, the St. Mary's Argus draws this moral: "This should be a warning to all married ladies to preserve the letters they receive from their husbands since they do not know the hour that they will need them."

Special Bargains.—For the next four weeks W. J. Larmour will offer the largest and best selected stock of summer boots and shoes in town at a small advance on cost, to make room for fall importations. The custom department of the Red Boot is still maintaining its reputation for style, comfort and durability, at moderate prices. 31-tin

A Freak of Nature.—Our genial friend, Mr. James Jack, of Smith, called upon us on Saturday last "wi' an item." Dame Nature has been playing a freak with Mrs. John Jack's geese and has produced a prodigy in the shape of one with two pairs of wings, both appendages being in close proximity to each other. It is considered quite a curiosity.

Artistic Show Card.—Messrs. Wilson & Davis have this week placed in the Post Office a beautifully illuminated business show card, or sign, painted on glass in inlaid pearl and fancy gilt work. The painting was done by Mr. R. W. Watson, Peterborough. Artistic Painter, and is highly creditable to his taste and skill.

Submerged.—In order to demonstrate the impervious nature of [illegible] to water, Messrs. Muncaster & Sanderson have on exhibition in their show window a chronometer of this celebrated make suspended in a glass vessel filled with water. The time-piece ticks away without the slightest perceptible inconvenience from its surroundings.

An Extraordinary Find.—The Port Hope Daily Guide of Tuesday has the following paragraph:—A man a few days ago found in a gravel pit near Mount Hope in the township of Otonabee, a sword, knife, and a number of gold coins to the amount of about $950. The treasure is supposed to have been buried there when the French were in possession of the country. The box had decayed and left only its form moulded in the earth. As it is not likely any claimant will turn up at this late date, the finder will be just that much richer than before.

Oddfellows' Gathering.—Representatives to the Grand Lodge which meets in Hamilton on the 18th August will be royally treated by the lodges in that city. Arrangements are now about completed for the holding of a grand union fete of the Oddfellows of Ontario in Dunbarn Park, on the occasion of the meeting of the Grand Lodge. There will be games and other amusements during the day and fireworks, music, etc., in the evening. It is believed the gathering will be the largest ever held under the auspices of the I. O. O. F. in the Province.

Press Association.—The annual meeting of the Canadian Press Association was held in the City Council Chamber, Kingston, on Tuesday a.m., Mr. James Shannon, President, in the chair, and a fair representation of members present. Twenty new members were admitted. The following are elected officers for the ensuing year:—A. Matheson, Brantford, President; J. B. Trayes, Port Hope, 1st Vice-President; E. J. B. Pense, Kingston, 2nd Vice-President; W. R. Climie, Bowmanville, Secretary-Treasurer. Executive Committee,—C. D. Barr, Lindsay; H. Hough, Cobourg; E. Jackson, Newmarket; Jas. Innes, Guelph; C. B. Robinson, Toronto. In the afternoon the party visited the public institutions of the city, under escort of the civic authorities, and are entertained at a special reunion in the evening.

School Drill.—The regulations regarding drill instructions in connection with educational institutions are published. The organization of companies is to be confined to universities, colleges and high schools. The number of companies is limited to 74, being divided as follows: Ontario, 28; Quebec, 24; Maritime Provinces, 13; Manitoba, 3; British Columbia, 1. Arms and accoutrements will be furnished, but not to any company numbering less than 40. The rifles are to be Snider-Enfields. Drill Instructors will be supplied from A and B Batteries by the Government. The batteries are to be increased by the appointment of nine additional sergeants. Applications for the formation of companies should be forwarded to the Deputy Adjt-General.

Dog Tax.—Among the rates and assessments for the town of Peterborough for the present year, we observe that statute labor, income and dog taxes become due to-morrow. In the latter items, there is always a certain amount of "shinning," and the experience of former years demonstrates clearly that during the time of assessment one half of the dogs in town are ownerless. It is not an unusual occurrence for petition after petition to be received by the Council, asking for remission of dog tax on the grounds of erroneous taxation. Would it not be well, and worthy of consideration by our civic representatives, that the system which prevails in many of our cities should be inaugurated here, namely, the granting of a cheque, to be worn by the dogs—by those parties who pay dog tax, and that all canines found without this badge of distinction, should be impounded, and if not claimed within a reasonable time, annihilated. By the adoption of this system, or some similar one, the town would be seen rid of one half of the worthless curs that infest our streets, and the town treasury become richer—at all events nothing the poorer.

A Fun Worth Recommending.—We have been favored with samples of the celebrated Spencerian Double Elastic Steel Pens, and after trying them feel justified in highly commending them to our readers. They are made of the best steel, and by the most expert workmen in England, and have a national reputation for certain desirable qualities which no other pens seem to have attained in so great perfection, among which are uniform evenness of point, durability, flexibility, and quill action. It is quite natural that the Spencerian should be preferred and used by professional penmen, in business colleges, counting-rooms, government offices, public schools, and largely throughout the country. Indeed, we ponder have they become, that of the "Number One" alone, as many as eight millions are sold annually in the United States. The Spencerian Pens may be had, as a rule, from any dealer; but, when not thus obtainable, the agents, Messrs. Alexander Bruce & Co., 88 Bond Street, Montreal, will send for trial, samples of each of the twenty numbers on receipt of twenty cents.

Excursion.—A match game of lacrosse took place on the Ashburnham Cricket Grounds, on Monday afternoon last, between the "Mechanics" and "Peterborough" Clubs,—both local organizations. The ball was faced at half-past three o'clock, and after an extensive contest of thirty-three minutes duration the first game was taken by the "Mechanics." This result surprised alike the players and the spectators, for the "Peterboroughs," having been longer under training, had expected a comparatively easy victory over their opponents. The second game was commenced after a short interval for rest, resulting in favor of the "Peterboroughs," their defeat in the first game apparently inciting them on to keener playing and less trifling with their adversaries, whom they found to be quite equal to them in features of fleet and physical strength, although their inferiors in the "science" of the game. The third and fourth games were likewise secured by the "Peterboroughs" in twenty-five and thirty-eight minutes, respectively, thus winning the match by three games to one. The failure of the "Mechanics" may perhaps be chiefly attributed to their lack of practice, which evidently had not been sufficient to teach them the art of playing into one another's hands, and thus concentrate their physical resources. The contest throughout, on the part of the "Peterboroughs," was a winning one, for although each game was prolonged over a considerable space of time, the "Mechanics" were on the defensive, and while succeeding in troubling their opponents by manœuvring their forces round the "Peterborough" "home," were making no headway for themselves. In a game of lacrosse this disposition is an error, and usually a fatal one. When it becomes necessary to augment the power of the "defence" by withdrawing a portion of the "home" to its support, the game is virtually in the hands of the other side, and although a game may then be protracted the ultimate success of the aggressive party is merely a matter of time. Quite a crowd of spectators witnessed the contest (which was of the most sedentary nature), and applauded lustily at intervals, as occasion demanded.

MERE MENTIONS.

—The moon is now out evenings in all her glory.

—"My dear," said a gentleman to his wife, "our cloth is going to have all the home comforts." "Indeed," replied the wife, "and when, pray, is our home to have all the cloth comforts?"

—The boats with the patent sliding seat are now the most popular.

—Good farm hands are said to be scarce in the country. A hint for the idle denizens of the town.

—The most recent addition to fashionable slang is, "Are you intense?" It threatens to become as popular as "What? never?" "Well, hardly ever."

LAKEFIELD.

(From our own correspondent.)

—Several nice showers of rain have fallen during the past week.

—A large drive of saw logs, the property of Mr. Haslitt, are now passing through Lakefield.

—The village is very quiet and will no doubt remain so until after the harvest.

—The steamers have met with a number of annoying delays of late, on both their up and down trips, owning to logs in the lake.

—Any quantity of berries are being offered for sale both huckleberries and raspberries 50 cents a pail of ten quarts being the price asked.

—Harvest operations are in full blast in this neighborhood, and many of the farmers have been compelled to leave their hay to attend to their fall wheat, cash in the rush upon them.

—During the past week several of the most beautiful islands in Stoney Lake have been destroyed by fire, whether by design or from the carelessness of camping parties in leaving fires burning, I am unable to say. At the rate they are being destroyed it will not take long to render our beautiful summer resort useless. Could no means be taken to prevent it or punish those who are guilty?

RAILROADS AGAIN.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER.

DEAR SIR,—The letter appearing in the EXAMINER of July 17, over my signature, must have struck any sensible man that the motive was a different one than the advocacy of the Peterboro & Ottawa R. R.; and, therefore, I not in the least expected the onslaught from the correspondent signing himself "J. R." I should have passed the same in silence, as I do not wish for notoriety, but the writer's statements being so contradictory, I feel compelled to make a few remarks.

Taking my letter as a protest, to make good one of his promises, to expatiate on the advantages and disadvantages of the Toronto & Ottawa R. R; commencing with the advantages, your correspondent enumerates as such: the circulating of money, the easy access to extreme points, cheapening freight by way of a cheaper road as an independent line in competition with the Grand Trunk. Next comes the lamentable tale of disadvantages to the town, viz:—the money will soon be scattered, and the town will be taxed 4 mills on the dollar for interest and sinking fund for all time to come,—that means into eternity. Pray what is the sinking fund provided for? High taxes will rain any town, he says, it will curtail the growth of the town. How is it that the taxes for building roads have not ruined numerous other places, and acted as a hindrance to their growth? I need only point to one case to refute such a statement. Was it not the want of competition to carry freight cheaply that drove the two lumber mills from Peterborough to Harwood; and is not that a serious loss to our town? And how is it that your correspondent mentions, that some say if the road is built it will raise the value of property? Now, if this be the result, and your correspondent does not attempt to contradict it, and this be accomplished without the town growing, would we not be better able then to bear the paying of 4 mills on the dollar than by having empty houses and shops to pay the taxes as at present. I admit, as your correspondent remarks, the facilities for travelling are tolerably sufficient. No doubt he feels delighted over the late revision of the time table on the Midland. As to the improved market for the farmer, whereby the town would be the looser, I hardly think your correspondent's pocket would be much affected by it; and as for the town, it would trouble him very little, as the benefits he receives from the town are materially of such a substantial kind, that I doubt whether the town is benefitted by him to the same extent. But to show how narrow-minded his views are, for such they are, else he could not be capable of writing such arrant nonsense, I would advise him to get a little information on the subject of high prices from the merchants, and he will learn that by high prices to the farmers, business will prosper all around, with the merchant, mechanic and laborer, for on the farmer and on good prices the whole population depends. But what need we care for the farmer and the rest, if your correspondent gets cheap living? Your correspondent seems also to differ with me on the Cobourg R. R., but why not let us know his, views? Is it republican? Tell Cobourg, Peterborough is insolvent, eh! My reasons for not wishing to saddle the town with a debt of $75,000 to the Grand Junction, I have plainly stated, as well as my reasons for the bonus to the Peterborough & Ottawa R. R.; but your correspondent is ready to solve the question, Solomon like, with a sword, when he proclaims that he thinks me insincere in wishing the prosperity of the town, and that if I had my own way I would sink her into debt, out of which she never would rise. Although not so long a resident of the town as your correspondent, my interests in the welfare of the town are greater at say rate, and I cannot but wonder at this bold accusation against me, as the public must well be aware that my actions are guided by carefulness. Therefore, advocating extravagance is out of the question, where, in all cases, I would have to contribute more than your correspondent. Nor is this all, by passing such a sentence on me, the municipalities having voted a bonus to the Road, he proclaims them fools, taxing themselves for all time to come. He winds up saying that it is a thousand fold better to stand still, then to run into debt. This is hardly in accord with nature, as the world was made to move, and according to your correspondent's notions, we would have at the present no other means of locomotion than the stage-coach of a hundred years ago.

As I do not intend to trouble you again on the subject, I will close with the remark, that this line will be built, and it only remains a question of time.

Thanking you Mr. Editor for your space.

Yours,
W. LECH.

Good for Peterborough and Worthy of Notice.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER.

SIR,—Among the various manufacturing establishments in town, we notice the Messrs. McKee moving towards the establishing of a furniture factory on Dixon's race, well calculated for the manufacture of chairs and parlor frames which are so largely imported by the numerous dealers in town, evidently showing the necessity of utilizing our facilities for the manufacture of such articles as require the very material we are surrounded with.

Then we have Mr. Tanner's steam Furniture Factory, which is a neat three-storey brick structure, with the latest improved machinery. The building is heated with steam pipes, and has glue-heaters in each flat, with access by bridge to his ware-rooms on Hunter street, which are rapidly being filled with a superior stock. In passing through this establishment I notice a system of order and cleanliness, the machine work is evidently unexcelled by any this side of Toronto, and with Mr. Tanner's well known ability, and experience, he is likely to lessen the imports of the better class of furniture. Give them a bonus.

Yours truly,
CITIZEN.

FENELON FALLS.

Off Again.—The Gazette says:—On Monday last Mr. Jas. Dickson, P. L. S., Reeve of Fenelon Falls, left home for the township of Ballantyne, which he has recently received instructions from the Government to survey. Ballantyne is east of the township of Laurier, in the Nipissing District, and not far from the lake of that name. Mr. Dickson will be occupied about three months, during which period it is probable he will pay at least one visit to the village, in order to see that the machinery of the municipality—of which he is of course chief engineer—is in good running order.

NORWOOD.

(From our own Correspondent.)

"Now is the winter of our year
Made sunny summer by this son of York."

So say all Hastings in general and Dave Anderson in particular. (Richford comes from York county). The Grand Junction to Hastings is un fait accompli. When attending an excursion which left Hastings on Tuesday of last week—of which I shall speak presently—on the wharf I met the veritable Dave. 'Look,' said he, while his extended arm swept towards the southern horizon, "Look, there they are, ain't it nice, steamers to the right of us, cars to the front of us, and factories to the left of us. Being a Norwood man 'I couldn't see it' for some time; eventually I made out four gravel trucks, and the station house partly built. Dave was very anxious for the Norwoodites, first, that they might know in truth, that the R. R. was in Hastings, and secondly, that Norwood now should have communication with the front. To meet the first difficulty it was proposed that four persons would forthwith carry one of the trucks, mentioned before, to Norwood, so that everyone might see and be convinced. This might have been carried into effect but for three reasons:—first the Norwood people would not, even were the car in their streets, believe that it came from Hastings. They would say it came from Peterboro' on the Golden Eye, or from Cobourg on our stage—we love that old stage, it fails not, it never leaves us—or they would shut their eyes and declare it was not. The second reason why the attempt to carry up the car would not succeed is, Hastings would not let it come, Hastings let the cars go to Norwood! Are you mad, man, to propose such a thing? Why if they saw one of those precious gravel trucks moving northward the village would be in a furore, and would turn out en masse to prevent the sacrilege. Thirdly it couldn't be done. To meet our second difficulty, Dave proposes a tramway from Hastings to Norwood, vans to be drawn by mules. I am afraid this last proposition springs not from pure unselfish regard for Norwood—in he not looking out for a probable office—conductor.

—That pic-nic and excursion from Hastings to Idyl Wild was a very nice affair. Norwood and Hastings Methodist S. S's. united in pleasure seeking for the day, and had a good time—weather fine, sail capital, boat and her officers all that could be wished. At the Wild the excursionists found that a Presbyterian Church S. S. excursion party had forestalled them and occupied the best places and shadiest retreats, thus practically verifying a certain political journal of repeated utterance—Scotchmen to the front.

—The Rev. Mr. Fotheringham has returned from his trip as active and energetic as ever, to be more so would be almost impossible.

—The Rev. Soward had rather a squally time Sunday when a pair of juveniles, twins, insisted on performing a duet at their baptismal service.

—I neglected to mention that the Norwood Cornet Band accompanied that excursion up the river and was the great attraction of the day. May they long live to enjoy their good reputation.

—Our village is quiet. Farmers are too busy to come in save when a break occurs. The haying is about over. It was a grand crop. Mr. W. Scott, is said to have cut one hundred and fifty tons; Mr. D. Hurley, one hundred tons; Mr. T. Bock seventy-five tons, and others more or less. Our village is quiet, except when a pair of combative amorous youths unable otherwise to decide which of them is lord of certain young lady's affections, make the evening hideous by their howlings at each other and the court of justice a farce.

BETRAYED.

A Young Lady Abducted from her English Home and Deserted in Canada.

HAMILTON, July, 29.—To-day a rumor was whispered among the guests of one of the leading hotels in this city, to the effect that a young lady had been deserted by her reputed husband, with whom she was living in the hotel for a few days past. The facts, as far as can be learned by your correspondent, showed that the rumor was too true; a most respectable and well connected young lady was abducted from her home in England, on a promise of marriage; that her honor had been destroyed, and that the heart-wounded who perpetrated the deed had abandoned her for the arms of an actress. It appears that the principals in this story were brought up together in a southern town in England and had lately formed a warm attachment for each other. A few years ago the young man emigrated to this country, where he remained until a short time since, when he determined upon revisiting his home and once more seeing the young and innocent companion he had left behind. After a short courtship, the marriage was arranged and it was to be consummated in England. Meeting her one evening, he said, "We must fly to America; I have just taken £2,000 from my father, and unless I leave the country now he will have me punished. When once there we can be married." Still trusting in his love, the young girl scarcely hesitated, and that evening any one on reside for Liverpool, where they took steamer, and on the 23rd inst., they were registered at the hotel in this city as man and wife. Here they remained until yesterday, when the deceiver, who had previously introduced his betrayed lover to a friend, and requested her to take a drive with him as a favor, complied with the desire. Almost before they left the door of the hotel, the plotting villain opened her heart-sick trick, threw from a quantity of his clothes, and called a carriage. departed by the first train from the city. During the remainder of the day the unfortunate lounged about the hotel, in company with one of the officials, until an arrangement with her, he left to meet her at some given point.

PETERBOROUGH MARKET.

Corrected Weekly by Mr. W. H. Wrightson, Grain and Produce Dealer.

On the streets receipts of wheat have been small—prices remain steady. Spring bringing $1.09 to $1.10; fall sells for two or three cents more. There is very little difference between the price of spring and fall. Oats are in good demand at about 35 to 40 cents. No peas or other coarse grain offering. On Market the supply of butter has fallen off, but the prices continues low. Eggs are plentiful and lower, selling from 9 to 10 cents. Potatoes are plentiful and [illegible] and sells in a retail way at 50 to 60 cents per bushel. Green vegetables of all kinds are abundant and rather slow sale. The principal meat offering is lamb, which brings from 6 to 8 cents. Chickens are scarce and would sell freely, if young, at 35 to 40 cents per pair.

SATURDAY'S MARKET.

Raspberries were very plentiful, and sold down to 40 cents per pail before they could be disposed of. Huckleberries, cherries and gooseberries are in fair supply—other slow sales.

WINNEMAH'S MARKET

was poorly attended; the principal offerings were potatoes, eggs and raspberries. Potatoes were very dull sale and lower; eggs sold freely at 9 cents; not much butter offering. The quality of the, butter is much poorer than it was a month ago.

How they smile as they coolly epitomize us,
So cordial, good-humored and gay.
But O, when the sun of prosperity
Hath set, then how quickly they frown,
And cry out in tones of severity,
"Kick the man, don't you see he is down?"

What though you know not a sorrow,
Your heart was as open as day,
And your "friends," when they wanted to borrow,
Yet would oblige and ne'er ask them to "pay?"
What though not a soul you had slighted,
As you wandered about through the town,
Your "friends" become very near-sighted,
And don't seem to see you when down.

When you're "up" you are kindly cuffed,
And traders all sing out your praise,
When you are down you have greatly befuddled,
And they really don't fancy your ways.
Your style was "tip-top" when you'd money,
To sing every measure and chorus,
But now, as exceedingly funny,
Things are altered because you are down.

O give me the heart that forever
In free frame the world's cobweb rips,
And the soul whose high noble endeavor
Is to raise fallen man from the dust;
And when in adversity's cosom
A victim is likely to drown,
All hail to the man whose devotion,
Will lift up a man when he's "down."

THE RIGHTFUL HEIR.

CHAPTER I.

For some weeks past the engagement between the Earl of Beauvray and Miss Millicent Moyle had been chronicled in the fashionable intelligence of newspapers, and the marriage was appointed to take place in July. Beauvray house, Piccadilly, had been placed in the hands of the decorators; Beauvray castle, in Northshire, was being refurnished and beautified by the combined energies of upholsterers, painters and landscape gardeners, and grand subscriptions had been set on foot amongst his Lordship's tenants, his brother-officers of the Guard and his fellow-members of the Northshire hunt to make the new countess some handsome presents. There were many who considered Miss Moyle a lucky girl, for Lord Beauvray was not only of ancient family, young, immensely wealthy and well looking, but he was popular everywhere owing to his sunny temper and sprightliness of character. There are young noblemen who make their grandeur consist in throwing away their money and making their reputation into decks and drakes. But Lord Beauvray had been merry without being dissolute. He was the most irreproachable of gentlemen, just as his betrothed, Miss Moyle, was the fairest flower among the bouquet of pretty girls who had been presented at court in the same season as herself. Millicent Moyle was a rich heiress as well as a pretty girl; but this was about all that could be said of her. Her father, Josiah Moyle, a bill-discounter of Lombard street, was a 'new man' of the city plutocracy—one of those financiers who had made such rapid fortunes that everybody expects to hear of them next in the bankruptcy court. It was said that he and Lord Beauvray had become acquainted while travelling abroad, and that the peer's relatives had been much scandalized on hearing of his Lordship's intention to marry the daughter of a man whose antecedents were just a little misty.

As for Mr. Moyle, quite conscious of how great a piece of luck had befallen him, he could not refrain from bragging before his city friends about his future son-in-law, 'the earl.' He talked of retiring from business, of obtaining a seat in Parliament through Lord Beauvray's influence, and devoting himself henceforth to the assiduous study of conservative politics and the cultivation of aristocratic connections. The poor man had been admitted, on Lord Beauvray's presentation, to one or two first-rate clubs, and he had been introduced to so many ladies and 'gentlemen of title that his head was turned. He sighed over his business ledgers from twelve to four every day as if he had begun to realise the degradation of commercial pursuits; and as soon as his counting house closed he would hurry off in a white waistcoat and with a flower in his button-hole, to take a drive round the park in his spanking phaeton, drawn by a pair of bays whom he could ill manage. It was honest Moyle's delight in these drives to meet the finely-appointed barouche which carried his wife, his daughter Millie, and Lord Beauvray; and to note the number of bats lifted as it passed. Such bows made him grin in pure glee.

One sunny afternoon, just a fortnight before the date fixed for the marriage, the bill discounter's phaeton was drawn up as usual alongside the pavement of Lombard street, waiting till the stroke of four from an adjoining steeple should bring out the plutocrat, when a brougham, with a coronet on the panels, clattered up behind and Lord Beauvray alighted. He was ghastly pale. The hall porter, who knew him by sight and had always admired his pleasant smile, was startled by his appearance not less than by the broken voice in which he inquired if Mr. Moyle had left. Just then Mr. Moyle himself strutted out, all glorious with a geranium in his coat and a white hat perched acock on his pointed grey head. 'Ah! Beauvray!' cried he, with cheerful welcome, but perceiving the look on the peer's face, he exclaimed: 'Why, what's the matter? Not ill, I'll hope?'

'No, not ill; but I want to speak to you in private,' said Lord Beauvray, hoarsely.

'Shall we go off in the phaeton?' stammered Mr. Moyle, full of uneasiness.

'No, into your room; but let us be quite alone,' repeated the earl, and he himself led the way towards the sanctum, where the bill discounter transacted most of his business.

Mr. Moyle had a trick when agitated of grasping his nose with the whole of his hand and working it up and down as if it were India-rubber which he wished to elongate. His nasal organ underwent a deal of pulling in the brief interval that elapsed before he and Lord Beauvray were closeted together. Then, plumping down in the arm-chair at his writing-table, Mr. Moyle stared in bewilderment while the peer sat down opposite and produced a blue envelope with several black seals. Laying this on the table, Lord Beauvray placed his hand on it, and looked into the financier's eyes.

'Mr. Moyle,' said he, sadly, 'I have a painful communication to make; but I will not beat about the bush. I find that I have no legal right to the title which I bear, or to the fortune which I am using.'

'Eh! what?' exclaimed Mr. Moyle, with a gasp.

'I made the discovery this morning in rummaging through a box of deeds,' continued Lord Beauvray, whose voice grew steadier. 'You know that I inherited the title from my uncle. He was the eldest of three brothers. My father, the youngest, died whilst I was a boy; my second uncle died a few years later, and we fancied he had been a bachelor, but it appears that he had been clandestinely married, and left a son—a lad whom you know, by the by, for I have seen him in your house. His name is Timberel.'

'Timberel?' echoed Mr. Moyle, with a start; 'young Timberel who used to be a clerk in our firm, and whom I dismissed for presuming to make love to our Millie?'

'I was not aware of these particulars,' said Lord Beauvray, 'but young Timberel is the man; he bears his mother's name (she was an actress, and we used to think he was the unnatural son of my second uncle; but his parents were lawfully married.'

'And do you mean to say that Timberel—a vulgar, concealed upstart who is living on his wits at this moment, with not a shilling in his pocket I'll be bound—do you mean to say he has become Earl of Beauvray?'

'Not only that, but he becomes absolute owner of all my estates and property. My poor father left me a mere pittance. When I have put Timberel in possession of his own I shall have nothing but my commission in the Guards and about three hundred a year.'

'Come, come, don't say such bosh,' blurted out old Moyle, grasping his nose again. It had just occurred to him that Lord Beauvray was boasting. 'He wants to find out whether our Millie loves himself or his title,' reflected the parvenu; but in a moment this idea was dispelled by Lord Beauvray displaying the contents of his envelope—a marriage certificate and a number of letters which substantiated his story. Then he entered into explanations. It seems that his uncle, the Hon. Colonel de Vray, being in garrison at Natza, had privately married an Italian actress named Timberelli. After a year's union this feckless person deserted her, leaving her child to his care; and soon afterwards she died.

Under the circumstances the colonel, though he provided for the boy's maintenance, deemed it convenient to conceal his marriage, and eventually he died suddenly without having acknowledged it. Apparently, however, his conscience had tormented him, so that while looking the moral courage to speak the truth during his lifetime, he had left evidence by which it might be known after his death. Unfortunately the envelope containing his marriage certificate had been mixed up with some other documents in a box, which Lord Beauvray (who inherited the deceased's person) had never thought of examining till that morning, when he had begun to sort his family papers in view of his marriage. These were the facts which the young peer explained, whilst old Moyle, with a series of wheezes like whilst old Moyle, with a series of wheezes like mouse, ruefully examined all the documents one by one.

Suddenly the bill-discounter crumpled all the papers in his hand with a feverish grasp, and looked at Lord Beauvray. There was an expression in his dull eyes as of a light behind an uncleaned pane of glass: 'I say,' he whispered, 'have you told any body besides me about this secret?'

'No; I came to you first, as in duty bound.'

'Then what prevents us from destroying these papers? I shan't say anything about it. That young Timberel is a skunk and a snob; it will be ridiculous to see him a lord, and he'll ruin himself, or become mad with conceit—so foolish he be. I say, Beauvray, if I throw this envelope into the fire, who will know anything about it?'

'I shall,' answered Lord Beauvray quietly and he held out his hand for the papers.

The shifty glance of the moneyman quailed before the light of unquenchable honesty in the eyes of one who happened to be a nobleman in something more than the name.

CHAPTER II.

There was a pretty hubbub in society when it became known that the Earl of Beauvray—or George de Vray as he now simply called himself—was going to abandon his title and estates to a man who had been a city clerk. Lord Beauvray himself did his utmost to make the thing public; for as the legal formalities for reinstating his cousin into his rights would require some time, he was anxious that the new peer should obtain at least social recognition of his rank as soon as possible. For this purpose he placed the amazed and elated Mr. Timberel in possession of his mansion in Piccadilly, and a large sum in ready money 'to go on with.' Mr. Timberel was decidedly a mock; Lord Beauvray could not like him, much as he forced himself to be friendly, and he was soon forced to reflect with a sigh that the house of De Vray would be poorly represented by its new chief. But this did not check his diligence in doing his duty, and he quite dismayed his solicitors, who were advising him to defend the action for ejectment that was going to be instituted, and to dispute the claim for the title that would be laid before the House of Lords.

'I wish to have no disputes,' said George de Vray. 'Even if a legal flaw were discovered, I should not avail myself of it so long as a moral certainty existed. And that does exist.' The lawyers grumbled, but they were fain to own that the marriage certificate was genuine, and that nothing but chicanery could spoil the suit of Mr. Timberel, who now described himself as 'Ralph de Vray, claimant to the earldom of Beauvray.'

Of course, George de Vray's marriage was postponed. The turn in his fortunes had thrown so much business on his hands that it was impossible he could devote a month to honeymooning until it was all disposed of; besides which, he felt bound to make Mr. Moyle the offer of releasing his daughter from her engagement. At first this proposal was pooh-poohed equally by the bill-discounter and Miss Moyle herself. Millie who was not quite so sensible as she was pretty, wept a good deal at not becoming a countess; then she wept at the nobility of George's action which everybody was praising. In fact, during a week she bedewed a good many pocket handkerchiefs with her weepings over one thing and another. But, in the main, she was disposed to remain faithful to George, and took some credit to herself for her fortitude.

Now there was staying in the house of the Moyles a poor little cousin of Millie's named Gertrude Brown. She was a soft-eyed brunette of eighteen, who acted as companion to Millie and had to bear much from the whimsical humors of this spoiled child. Gertie had always received marked kindness from Lord Beauvray, who treated her as if she had been his sister; and she looked upon him with admiration as the most noble being she had ever seen. His renunciation of rank and wealth had struck her as an act of surprising heroism, and she could not so much as allude to it without tears gushing from her eyes. Gertie Brown had a heart that beat in unison with all that was great and good. A shrewd, merry little thing, too, in her way, she was capable of discerning the difference that existed between a genuine man of honor like Lord Beauvray, and a mere man of money like her uncle Moyle. When she saw George de Vray after his 'ruin,' as old Moyle called it, behaving with the cheerful grace as usual—not seeking praise, but shunning it—giving himself no airs of a hero, but talking and laughing simply like a man who has done his duty without any fuss and is glad of it—she thought her cousin happy amongst all girls, and sighed to reflect that Millie did not, perhaps, appreciate her treasure as much as she ought.

It was this enthusiasm of poor Gertie Brown's on poor George de Vray's behalf which first began to make the cup of Mr. Moyle's bitterness overflow. That worthy gentleman had taken to musing that there was an end now to his chances of sitting in Parliament, getting a baronetcy, and all that. George de Vray might remain a pet of Society and by means of Millie's money keep a sumptuous town-house; but this was not the same as being an earl, with an enormous rent-roll and influence over a whole county. Old Moyle blasted as much to his daughter, and to make the lesson more forcible, threw out gloomy suggestions that his own fortune was not very secure, and that Millie might some day find herself constrained to live on her husband's £300 a year, and to make her own dresses with the sewing machine. This lamentable prospect caused Millie's tears to burst out afresh, peevishly, so that she flew at Gertie when the latter happened to make some remark in George's praise. Mr. Moyle also scolded his niece, and very roundly, saying she was a silly girl to think that there was anything grand in throwing one's money out of the window, so that all the world might talk about it. Poor Gertie held her tongue, though her heart throbbed wrathfully. She had heard that the new Lord Beauvray, the ex-Mr. Timberel, had been invited to dinner for that evening; and she began to suspect that her precious uncle was forming a plan for making of this former clerk of his a suitor for Millie's hand.

Her intuition was not at fault. Old Moyle had hastened to make peace with his discharged clerk; and the latter, whose vanity was tickled by seeing his grandeur tyrant cringe before him, gradually became a regular guest at the bill-discounter's, though he took care never to come at times when he was likely to meet George there. Thus virtually displaced Gertie Brown, who could find no admiration for the vulgar mannerisms and pompous ostentation of Ralph de Vray. This young man was handsome, however, and not devoid of talent. It was no marvel to Millie that he had aspired to win her hand at a time when such a hope was folly, and he exercised over her then fascination which strong moneymen and a bold sight of gab over do over girls who are weak and giddy. Odd day, after he had been talking to Millie for an hour in his most brilliant vein, some recollection of a droll sally of his made the girl laugh after he was gone, and she exclaimed, 'He is decidedly very amusing.'

'I find him most wearisome,' answered Gertie, dryly.

'You are not bound to sit and listen to him, then,' said Millie, with a flush in her eyes.

'I will withdraw, then, on another occasion—with great pleasure,' was Gertie's reply.

'That's it, do—we shan't miss you. By-the-by, you never make yourself scarce when Mr. George de Vray comes here.'

'There are not the same reasons for doing so. Mr. George is a thorough gentleman.'

'And you mean that Mr. Ralph is not?'

'Certainly not, to my mind.'

'Ah! ah! pray is it simply because Mr. George has given up property that you not his that you consider him so superior to his cousin? I see nothing wonderful in that. If I found one of your trinkets among my things I should restore it without crowing all over the town about my honesty. Indeed, I think it rather strange that Lord Beauvray should have not discovered this secret until he had enjoyed his property several years; it looks much to me as if some other people had discovered it, too, and as if he had only acted under compulsion.'

'Oh, Millie, you are casting an aspersion on one of the most noble acts I have ever heard of!' exclaimed Gertie, quivering all over.

'Well, its your fault,' screamed Millie, exasperated; 'I am sick of hearing you always harp on the same string. If you are so fond of Mr. de Vray, why don't you get him to marry you? That would be two beggars together!'

Naturally, Gertie went to her room to have a good cry, but from that day she ceased speaking about George, and became very civil, compost in her demeanor towards him. When he came to see Millie she left the room. George soon noticed these tactics, for his interviews with Mr. Moyle's daughter were growing more and more irksome by reason of Millie's coldness and irritability. At the least thing she would snap and sulk; and one afternoon when George innocently made some enquiry about Miss Brown, she fired up in a jealous pet. 'You seem very anxious about Miss Brown. I am not obliged to show her off in the drawing-room whenever visitors come. She is only a pauper cousin whom we have taken in for charity.'

'It's queer charity, dear, if you talk of it in that way,' laughed George. 'I don't consider poverty a disgrace, either.'

'No, but it's very inconvenient,' said Millie, still querulously, 'and that reminds me; if we marry, I suppose you don't mean to live on my money? Papa says his banks might break, and all sorts of things. So I suppose you will do something to get an independent income?'

'Yes,' answered George, coloring deeply, 'I have applied for an exchange into the line, and think of going out to the war on the Indian frontier. I shall have a lieutenant-colonel's rank—so if you will wait for me two years, Millie, I may return with a new career and perhaps an income before me.'

'Oh, wait two years to become a soldier's wife, and go out to live in baking Indian heat!' exclaimed Millie, pouting. 'I never bargained for that!'

Just at this minute Gertie Brown came in. She had a message to deliver to Millie from Mr. Moyle, and blushed as she crossed the room where the pair of quarrelling lovers sat: 'Miss Brown,' said George, rising to shake hands with her, 'I will wish you good bye, for I have just been telling Miss Moyle that I am going off to the war in India—'

'You are going to the war! Oh! Mr. de Vray—if anything should happen to you!' exclaimed Gertie, and tears started to her eyes.

'Thank you for those tears,' said George gratefully. 'I shall know that one person here, at least, will feel interested. Now give me, as a keepsake, that red book-marker you are holding in your hand. I will bring back the ribbon with something hanging to it.'

'The Victoria Cross, perhaps,' tittered Millie, rather uncomfortably. 'I declare that's quite poetical. Well, good bye, Mr. de Vray: we part as friends, don't we?'

'Excellent friends,' answered George, as he lifted both her hands to his lips, and kissed them playfully.

That evening when old Mr. Moyle was apprised of what had happened, he rubbed his nose and said, 'Well, well, it's he who has broken off the match, not we. I suppose we have heard the last of him now—for he'll go out to India and stay there. As for the new Lord Beauvray, my dear, I was quite wrong in my estimate of him. He is a remarkable clever man, and he means to get me into Parliament!'

CHAPTER III.

One year passed. There had been a triumph of British arms in India, and the name of Colonel de Vray was associated with it. His name was in everbody's mouth. He had received promotion and other honors, and was returning to England after termination of the campaign as Major-General Sir George de Vray.

As for Millie Moyle, she was betrothed to the new Earl of Beauvray, and when Sir George arrived in London one of the first things he read in the papers was that the marriage between this young lady and his cousin was to take place in a week.

He no longer cared now. He went to Mr. Moyle's house on the very day of his return, in the afternoon, and was ushered into the dining room where luncheon was taking place. He was received like a hero, for Mr. Moyle liked to be on good terms with successful men, and Millie was anxious to obtain something like forgiveness for her jilting. She received it fully and freely, so far as could be judged from the young general's manner, for he was frank and pleasant, but after the first greetings were over he addressed himself principally to poor little Gertie Brown, who sat radiant and trembling. To her he recounted his adventures, and oh, what a brave knight she thought him, with his sunburnt face and the modesty of true glory that breathed in all his words! The new Lord Beauvray was not present.

At last when a toast had been drunk to Georges honor and Millie's happiness—honest Mr. Moyle acting as toastmaster—the general drew a parcel from his pocket and extracted from it Gertie's book-marker. No longer scarlet now, but faded pink from exposure to the air, for it had seen many a battle, entwined with the soldier's sword knot. There was hanging from it the Cross of the Bath, a Victoria Cross, and something else—a wedding ring. 'Will you take all three, Gertie?' said George, approaching Millie's little cousin.

'Bravo, Sir George,' exclaimed Millie, clapping her hands, though she turned a little pale, 'I always said that Gertie and you were made for each other.'

'So did I,' cried worthy Mr. Moyle; but, I say, hullo! what's that?'

There had been a loud knock at the door, and a footman entered with a telegram on a tray. Mr. Moyle opened the missive and uttered an exclamation of horror and dismay: 'Great heavens, my lord, read this!' he faltered.

The telegram announced that the new Lord Beauvray had been killed in a railway accident. So the Indian hero got his title and estates again. He showed no emotion but seemed, on the contrary, much shocked, and was the first to lend assistance to Millie when she swooned in a somewhat flexed attack of hysterics.

Old Moyle had sunk on a chair, helpless like one was and thing to see.

A druggist, mentioning the Latin compliment to the goodness of the vineyard, in some cordial, has put up this inscription to the credit of his cedit fountain: In vain medico.

There has a man who for fifty years has paid his newspaper subscription in advance. How much? This may has never been killed, notwithstanding his continual state of danger!

WIT AND HUMOR.

Good resolutions, like a squalling baby at church, should always be carried out.

The funeral notice of a western murderer read: 'Suddenly, on the —— instant, of dropsy.'

It is one of the curious things of the world that a male hairdresser often dyes an old maid.

'If I am stuck up, I am not proud,' as the butterfly said when pinned to the side of the show-case.

A woman with two heads has just arrived from Europe. Right bonnets a year!—only think of it!

The boss of a tea-battle that is paid for is far more beautiful than an operatic air on a piano that is not.

'Daughter,' said an anxious parent to his little one, 'didn't I tell you to eat no more green apples?' 'Yes, papa; but this is a yellow one.'

'My son,' said an old lady, 'how must Jonah have felt when the whale swallowed him?' 'Down in the mouth,' was the young hopeful's reply.

No man can ever tell just how much money a widow is worth until he marries her for it. It is one of those cases where you have to take your chances.

Because a man is 'greatly tickled,' it is no sign that he is pleased. For instance, take the case of a man who is greatly tickled by a fly alighting on his nose.

A distinguished violinist went the other day into a hairdresser's to have his hair cut. 'You really, sir, ought to allow me to take a little more off if you do not wish to be taken for a fiddler,' said the operator.

A preacher out west announced on his Sunday night bulletin: 'The Funeral of Judas Iscariot.' To which an obliging fellow added: 'Friends of the deceased are cordially invited.' The church was filled.

'Be ever ready to acknowledge a favor,' said a writer. 'We are, sir; we are. What troubles us is that one side is completely loaded down with readiness, while on the other side opportunity is painfully scarce.'

Miraculous Recovery.

A Woman Believed to be Dead Revives in Her Coffin.

ROXABELL, N.C. July 24.—During a terrible wind storm the house of Mrs. Adelaide Barton was blown down and the lady covered with debris. She was finally taken out apparently dead, and preparations were made yesterday afternoon for her burial. After the funeral sermon, as the casket was being removed to the hearse, she raised up and asked what this all meant. Her sudden revival created consternation as well as joy, and it was found she had only been in a trance. She is perfectly well, and in a few hours was superintending the workmen clearing away her wrecked dwelling.

Mitchell's Bellandona Improved India Rubber Porous Paster.

There never has been a time when the healing of so many different diseases has been treated by outward application as the present. It is an undisputed fact that over half of the entire population of the globe resort to the use of ordinary plasters.

The principal ingredients used in making these Plasters are Gum Olibanum—or better known as the Frankincense of the Bible—Rubber, and Burgundy Pitch which, when scientifically compounded, is full of electricity and when combined with the pure medicinal gums, is found to be one greatest healing mediums ever brought before the human race.

They are acknowledged by all who have used them to act quicker than any other Plasters they ever before tried, and that one of these Plasters will do more real service than a hundred of the ordinary kind. All other Plasters are slow of action, and require to be worn continually to effect a cure; but with these it is entirely different; the instant one is applied the patient will feel its effect.

They possess all the soothing, warming, supporting and strengthening qualities of all other Plasters. Many who have been relieved of RHEUMATISM, TIC DOLOREUX, and various other pains in the KIDNEYS, BREAST or SIDE, and believe it is solely done by the electrical qualities which the Porous Plasters contain, and which is imparted to the system, thus restoring them to a healthy condition.

They are very soft and pliable, still very adhesive; and a sure cure for WEAK BACKS PAINS IN THE SIDE AND BREAST, and are invaluable to those who have a COLD of long standing, and often prevents CONSUMPTION. Some even tell us they believe they were entirely cured by the use of them of a long seated Consumption.

Joy Among the Children.

COPLAND'S SWEET CASTOR OIL, equally suitable for children and adults. Endorsed by over 600 doctors in Canada.

The difficulty of administering nauseous medicines, and the desirability of having them pleasant to the taste, induced T. Copland to undertake researches which resulted in the discovery of a Sweet Castor Oil, perfectly palatable, of the same strength and medical qualities as the ordinary Castor Oil, and while equally safe and harmless, yet acting with more certainty, and producing neither nausea nor griping. Some children say it is honey; others call it syrup—they all say they like it. One parent says—'My children drink it like water;' another—'We had to hide the bottle or they would have finished it right off;' another—'My little girl has taken it twice without any trouble, and does not know what it is though she hates the ordinary Castor Oil and we never could get her to take it without a fight; just another—'I wish you success of your Sweet Castor Oil; it is a splendid thing—sure to take the place of all the common oil.'

The extraordinary demand for this improvement on a staple household medicine has brought fraudulent imitations into the market, but the public can guard themselves against substances (which unprincipled parties are attempting to sell on the reputation of this article) by seeing that the name of 'COPLAND'S SWEET CASTOR OIL' is on both wrapper and Steamer label.

The undersigned having purchased Messrs. T. Copland & Co.'s interest in the above preparation, are now manufacturing it from the original recipe. NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto.

IMPROVED CHURN DASHER.

(Patented July, 1878.)

Is adapted to all the old fashioned Round, Tub or Crock Churns. It will churn and gather the butter in from 4 to 10 minutes, and turn out 10 per cent more butter than anything of the kind in use. Each section or flange is an Air Chamber, which forces a large volume of atmosphere down into the milk or cream at each stroke, the cream or milk at the same time is forced over upward of four hundred inches of surface, and is thrown with such great velocity against the walls of the churn that it ruptures the globules and frees the butter with a few strokes. It is perfectly simple and easily constructed,—no machinery about it to get out of order.

Grand Medal and Diploma at the Centennial, Philadelphia; Grand Medal at the Universal Exhibition, Paris, France. Recommended by a large number of our leading medical men.

Charles Clarke's Pat'd Spiral Truss Pad has been the result of many years' study and material experience. Its perfect adaptability for Rupture is proven by the thousands now in use. Among its many advantages are, a gentle, constant and even pressure; is given to the motion of the body without friction; complete ventilation (as shown in engraving); a clinching pressure which does not open (as all oval pads) but closes the aperture of Hernia, hence only one-third pressure is required. It is this latter feature that has made this truss so eminently successful and proved a Radical Cure of from 90 to 95 per cent. of cases treated. This Truss cured persons of over 50 years of age. Only one belt round the waist, no leg straps and no spring required for its use.

Apparatus for straightening Spinal Curvature, Hip Disease, Bow Leg, Wry Neck, Club Feet, etc., made on most scientific principles. Price same as at my office.

CATARRH.

Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Cures Catarrh.

T. J. B. HARDING, Esq., BROCKVILLE, ONT.

DEAR SIR,—It is now two years since your "Constitutional Catarrh Remedy" was introduced to me. I have waited this long to see if the cure would be most permanent before doing this, my duty, to you, as at first the happy effects seemed to me to be "too good to be true."

I was afflicted in my head for years before I was recommended to be Catarrh. In reading to your Circular I saw my case described in many particulars. The inward "hawking" from the head had become very disagreeable, and a shocking sensation often prevented me from lying long. I would feel like something had to be coughed to get up in the bed. My hearing and sight were very seriously affected. When your Agent came to Walkerton in August 1877, I procured three bottles. Before I had used a quarter of the contents of one bottle I found decided relief, and when I had used two bottles and a third, I could declare it, feeling quite cured of that ailment, and have not used any since until of late I have taken some for a cold in my head.

A sense of duty to sufferers from that loathsome disease, Catarrah, prompts me to send you this Certificate, unsolicited, with leave to make what use of it you may see proper. Yours truly,

W. TINDALL, Methodist minister.

Prince Jerome Napoleon.

The head of the Bonapartes and His Way of Life.

(From the Paris Figaro, July 15.)

The interest with which Prince Jerome Napoleon is now regarded, as the head of the Bonaparte family and the chief of the Imperialist Party, amply justifies any details that may be given respecting him, whether in the past or in the present. That admirable portrait word-painter Ignotus, recognising this fact, has devoted his energies this week to an excellent account of the Prince, from which a few particulars may be gleamed that will afford your readers a clearer insight into his life and character. It was in 1846 that Prince Jerome first set foot in Paris in company with his father, who claimed of the Government of Louis Philippe a military pension, which was accorded to him. He lived in the Rue Mogador—then the Rue d'Alger—and so quietly that he himself used to open the door to his visitors. In 1848 Prince Jerome was elected Deputy for the Yonne, and then came the coup d'etat by which, although innocent thereof, he greatly profited. But the Prince became vastly unpopular. His opinions were regarded with distrust, and he displayed in his character rather the craft of the statesman than the generous courage of the military man. He served, however, as everybody knows, in the Crimea as well as in the Italian campaign. At the beginning of the war the Emperor Napoleon III. sent Prince Jerome to his father-in-law, King Victor Emmanuel, to beg a contingent of 100,000 men and when the ill-starred monarch was interned in Prussia his cousin wrote him to ask to be allowed to share his seclusion. Then he was elected Deputy for Corsica, and would doubtless have been chosen a second time but for the well known letter of the late Prince Imperial, written at M. Rouher's dictation. Soon afterward Prince Jerome left his apartment, which looked on the Parc Monceaux, and moved to No. 10 Avenue d'Antin. The salon, hung in red, and containing eight busts of the first Napoleon, is described as exceedingly striking; its principal piece of furniture is a large armoire, filled with a variety of articles that belonged to the founder of his family, and to his father King Jerome. Next to the darning-room is the study or library, on the book-shelves of which are ranged the works of the great Emperor, profusely annotated by the Prince's own hand. Now for a portrait of the tenant himself: A larger man than either the First Napoleon or his father, Prince Jerome resembles the latter more than the former, though in his earlier years his likeness to the Great Emperor was simply extraordinary. His expression is placid, and often extremely agreeable, but now and then the fire of the Corsican burns in his eye, and his finely-chiseled mouth adds to the intensity of his look. The Prince is 57 years of age, not yet gray though somewhat bald. His head, says Ignotus, is a superb one, worthy alike of the Prince and the thinker, and second only in what the enthusiastic reactionary writer calls aristocratic beauty to that of the Comte de Chambord. At home he usually walks to and fro while conversing, smoking cigarettes, and keeping one or both hands in his pockets. Suddenly he stops before the visitor; his language becomes animated and even vehement, while his words teem with colour and picturesqueness. He never laughs, but only smiles. The Prince has a wonderful collection of anecdotes at his disposal. In the street Prince Jerome may be recognised by his broad-brimmed hat; mincing along, he will suddenly quicken his steps when deep in thought. He rides every morning, being accompanied on Thursdays by his two sons. Although a fair horseman, he does not shine particularly in the saddle. The Prince is a faithful friend, and among those who are welcome guests at the Avenue d'Antin are M. Emile Ollivier, Admiral La Roncière le Noury, Baron Boyer, Gen. de Chanal, Col. Stoffel, M. Renan, and M. Alfred Arago. Now for the two sons, the Princes Victor and Louis. The former is taller and looks more than his age, 17. The upper part of his face is that of Napoleon, the lower reminds one of the Hapsburg type. Quiet, intelligent, and reserved is this Prince Victor. Prince Louis, is 13, and unlike his brother small for his age. He is pale, and as yet resembles none of the members of the royal and Imperial families from which he is descended. His hair is very black, and he is lively and intelligent. He is full of fun, but hardly a prodigy at school. Such is the family which has just been raised out of semi-obscurity to that fierce light which beats upon a throne. There are in all eight males now living who bear the name of Bonaparte, namely, three nephews and five grand-nephews of the First Napoleon. They are: Prince Jerome Napoleon, son of Jerome, fourth brother of Napoleon I.; and his two sons, the Princes Victor and Louis, then the descendants of Prince Charles, son of Lucien Bonaparte; second brother of the great Emperor. This Prince Charles' sons are Prince Lucien Bonaparte, the Cardinal Prince Napoleon Charles, ex-Prefect of the Council-General of Corsica; Prince Louis Lucien, formerly Senator, and long a resident in London; and, lastly, Prince Pierre, whose son Prince Roland Bonaparte, is studying at the Military School of St. Cyr.

If then canst not obtain a kindness which thou desirest, put a good face on it; show not discontent nor restiveness; for that may come when thy request may readily be granted.

As Vanquish'd Brin.

(PUBLISHED BY REQUEST.)

As vanquish'd Brin sat beside
The Rideau's ill-fated river,
He saw, whose shroud in the tide,
Had drifted his bridal quiver.
"Alas," he cried, "ye vessels of death,
Long mantled you many shore you;
Ye will not, oh! the state of hearts
That bled for me is in you."

But vain her wish, her wandering wish,
As time has well her taught her—
Sunk your the flood returned again,
And driven into that water;
And brings tormentment from beneath
His sheets of desolation,
And sends them wing'd with worse than death,
Throughout our sundering nation.

Alas for her who sits and mourns,
For now, beside that river—
Unwearied still the flood returns,
And ever'd still is his quiver.
When will thirsted, ye powers of good,
The weeping ache forever;
But only hears from out the flood,
The Demon answer, 'Never.'

A Voice From the Backwoods.

CHANDOS AND ARSTRUTHER.

(From our own correspondent.)

Whatever may be the shortcomings of the Ontario Government (and most will admit they are fewer than we should in all probability have experienced under a change) they have paid considerable attention to the back country—they have at least improved our roads, and thus manifested willingness to help those who are willing to help themselves.

The Crown Lands Department is administered not only with marked ability but with equal fairness to all parties. No land up here is offered for settlement but such as a man willing to apply himself to work with a will, can in a very short time earn a good living on it. The system of speculation by men taking up land and in a little time afterwards disposing of it without performing the required settlement duties is pretty sharply looked after, which is much to the advantage of the honest hard-working man whose axe is constantly at work, and by whose industry and energy the thick woods are converted into fertile fields.

There is no reason why men should rush to Manitoba and other places to procure land, if they really mean business. The land here is good, and I venture to assert that any one visiting this locality at the present season will find as fine crops as can be raised in most parts of the Dominion. Too often men seeking land reach the Burleigh road and not finding free lands (without stone) with gravel roads leading to every vacant lot, return in disappointment, or if they do summon up courage to search these townships and find as fine land as man can wish for, the first question generally is, where is the road? where is the bridge across the creek? forgetting that others before them had to cut their own roads and build their own bridges. There are thousands of acres of as fine land as the sun ever shone on up here, and now as we have an energetic and practical member to represent us, and a Government we believe willing to assist us, we shall doubtless ere long have a leading road to these lands. But intending settlers must be prepared to make their own roads to the section they particularlily wish to occupy, and unless a man is willing to go to work in earnest—to face the huge maples and beeches, axe in hand and muscles braced—to work as others before him have done (and who are now receiving their reward), he had better keep away. The Government terms are very properly such as not to suit idle speculators, but admirably adapted to suit any able-bodied industrious man, whose toil for a few years cannot fail to lead to independence.

The Great Lone Land.

It will startle a good many, in the first place, to be suddenly reminded that the actual area of the Hudson's Bay Territory, now annexed to the Dominion of Canada, is greater than that of the United States. In the second place, it will surprise a good many more people to learn that in north-western Canada, the wheat yield more than doubles that of Minnesota, and triples that of Pennsylvania and Ohio. In the third place, it will interest political economists deeply to be told that within a few years the Winnipeg watershed of north-western Canada alone may be reasonably expected to be thrown into the commerce of the New World with the Old, an annual wheat yield equal to the whole present exportation of all America to the United Kingdom of great Britain and Ireland, and that it is within the limits of possibility that this enormous competition with our own Western grain fields may be pushed eastward down a great navigable stream to a port on salt water, which, though situated in the 93rd degree of west longitude, is eighty miles nearer to Liverpool than New York is. These are things, we repeat, to set men thinking. The great centres of agriculture, population and trade have been moved about too frequently, and too far on this continent within the current century to make it safe for any man to predict where they may be found twenty or ten years hence. All that we can be quite sure of is that the price of prosperity as well as that of liberty is an eternal vigilance. Neither New York nor Chicago nor St. Louis nor the United States themselves need expect to hold any good thing now in their grasp by any other tenure or upon any other condition.—N. Y. World.

Implements For Flogging.

(From London Truth, July 17.)

William III. is generally supposed to have invented, or rather to have introduced into England, the modern "cat." Before his time the whip used on the backs of sailors only had three thongs. The Romans had three whips with which to punish their slaves—the ferula, a flat strap of leather; the scutica, an instrument made of parchment, and the flagellum, which was made of plaited thongs of ox leather. The Russians have or had the stick, the plet, and the knout. The plet is a strip made of strips of raw hide, with three lashes tipped with small leaden balls. The knout is a heavy leather thong, about eight feet in length, attached to a handle two feet long, the lash being about the breath of a small tape, and carved so as to give two sharp edges along its entire length. It is bound with wire thread, the end terminating in a little hook.

In China the instrument of punishment is the bamboo, and as the following is one of the laws of that country, few escape its application: "Whoever shall observe a line of conduct that offends propriety, and that is contrary to the spirit of the laws, even without any special infraction of their enactments, shall be punished by 40 blows, or 80 if the impropriety be very great.

The bastinado, which is so common in the East, is thus inflicted: Two men support between them a strong pole, which is kept in a horizontal position; about the middle of the pole are placed some cords, with two running nooses; through these the naked feet of the sufferer are forced, and then made tight in such a manner that the soles of the culprit are fairly exposed; the patient is then thrown on his back with his feet towards, which are flesh with beaten by a thick cane with a heavy whit.

A Canadian Quicksand Story.

(From the Simcoe Sun.)

A few days ago a boy residing in Sunnidale, thinking by digging into the ground he would be able to find a cool spot, took a hoe and scooped a hole about a foot deep and stepped into it. No sooner had he stepped into the excavation than he found himself sinking. Gradually he was going out of sight, until the sand was up to his hips, and the more he struggled to free himself, the deeper he sank. He gave the alarm, and when his mother reached him he was covered to the chin. A few minutes more and he would have been buried alive beneath the treacherous sand.

Sad Cases Of Insanity.

(Lindsay Post.)

A sad spectacle was witnessed at the gaol yesterday afternoon. Two middle-aged women, sisters, named respectively Mrs. Mary McDougall and Miss Catherine McCuaig, from Eldon, were committed on the warrants of two Woodville magistrates as being insane, and they were accompanied to the cells allotted them by a half-dozen much-troubled relatives. Mrs. McDougall is the mother of a full-grown family, and among those who followed her to the gaol was a son of about twenty-five years of age who showed signs of deep sorrow for his mother in her affliction. He expressed much concern that she should be kindly treated. The other sister is unmarried, and is a strongly-built pleasant-looking woman. From the time of her incarceration until eventually she passed the floor of her ward, exclaiming at intervals in Gaelic, "Oh, dear! oh, dear!" Both women are quite harmless and have only been about five months afflicted with insanity. Mrs. McDougall was undemonstrative, and gave no trouble to the gaol authorities.

Masonic Fair.

The Masonic fraternity at Saint John, New Brunswick, are to hold, commencing on the 15th September next, a Fair in aid of Freemason's Hall at that place. This hall has been erected since the great fire of June, 1877, by which the whole property of the Society at Saint John was destroyed, and an appeal was now made for outside aid in consequence. The Fair is to be an Art and Industrial Exhibition, to which all classes of contributions will be welcome, the design, being if possible to illustrate the natural resources and capabilites of the United States, of Canada, and other countries. Contributions of all kinds are solicited, and as the circulars sent out by the Fraternity may not come under the notice of every Mason, it is requested that all who desire to contribute whether they have been specially addressed or not, will communicate with the Secretary to the General Committee, Mr. T. Nisbet Robertson, Saint John, N. B. During the week of the Fair the fares on all railways and steamers running to Saint John will be placed at reduced rates.

The British Grain Trade.

THE CONTINUANCE OF RAIN—FIRMER MARKETS.

The Mark Lane Express, in its weekly review of the English grain trade, says: —The rain, which held off during the greater part of last week, recommenced on Saturday, and still continues. The harvest, even in the South, will hardly commence before the middle of August. Of all the crops barley gives the least promise of a satisfactory yield, which is doubly deplored as an unusually large acreage is sown therewith. Wheat came into ear nearly a month later, and its prospects are not very hopeful even on the lightest soils, while on heavy lands, even should the weather next month be most favourable, two-thirds of a crop are all that can be expected. Oats in the south have been coming into ear moderately well, but the cereal drops are in no case up to the average promise of ordinary years. During the past week a good part of a fair hay crop was secured in the counties near to London, but throughout the country the hay has suffered from too long standing. Potatoes are also suffering. Farmers have now become strong holders of grain. English wheat is reduced supply, and the demand is considerably increased. Prices advanced irregularly 2s., 3s., and even 5s on the week. The quotations depended upon the quantity offering at each agricultural market.

Arrested For Kissing.

THEY WERE MARRIED.

The New York police are remarkable for the facility with which they adopt theories, and this one of affection and matrimony being incompatible meets with their approval. Consequently, when on a certain evening a Central Park policeman saw a young-looking couple wandering through the arbors of wisteria and the willow groves, apparently in confidential conversation, he kept his eagle eye upon them. Soon he saw a manly arm steal around a slender waist, a little later a feminine head bowed down upon a masculine shoulder, and next—cold chills benumbed the circulation of the guardian of the peace—two mouths made "red cherries on a stalk." Rudely and wrathfully did the goblin in gray descend upon the touching tableau, and walked the dramatis personæ off to the station house. In vain the woman wept, and the man swore by all that was holy that they were husband and wife, and there "was no wrang in kissin." They were told to keep that "taffy" to themselves, and not to try and cheat policemen. Both the people were well dressed and well appearing. The lady seemed terribly mortified, and, at last after long arguing, the gentleman succeeded in getting permission to telegraph to his friends. This the officer said would cost $2, twenty cents for message and the remainder to suppress the matter in the newspapers. The couple spent the night in the station. Early in the morning their friends came to the rescue, and they were found to be highly respectable people—Mr. and Mrs. Cottier. The judge at once ordered their release, and offered, if they would bring suit against the man for cruelty in their behalf. When asked why he suppressed them to be unmarried, the policeman gloomily

PETERBOROUGH, AUGUST 7, 1879.

THE CATTLE TRADE AND CULTIVATION.

Only four years ago a number of enterprising men got together a cargo of cattle in Canada and shipped them to the British market as a trade experiment. It succeeded beyond their most lively hopes. The opening once made, the trade grew. It soon became important enough enough to give rise to violent opposition from those whose selfish interests it interfered. These made most of British prejudice against everything colonial, and especially against colonial beef. It was of no use, however. The flow of importation to England went on, it being demonstrated to the unerring British palate that the imported beef was very nearly, if not quite as good as the home-grown article, and so much cheaper as to make it decidedly acceptable to those who had been in the habit of paying what Canadians would consider enormous prices. To the cattle trade, which has grown with almost unprecedented rapidity, has been added the exportation of sheep from Canada to Great Britain; and now the main difficulty is, to get vessel accommodation sufficient for the droves of animals bought up by dealers in this country for the British markets. Not alone are fat cattle now shipped, for so invincible is the Canadian bovine that even English prejudice had to succumb to him to the extent of admitting him in the lean state, to be built up on British fields. This may be considered a compromise between Canadian beef and English grass.

So great has been the demand in Britain for cattle that it is hardly suprising to find the supply in Canada unequal to the emergency. Formerly no very great number of cattle were raised for export; but now the necessities of the case will cause the Canadian farmer to see money directly accruing to him from a good herd of cattle, and a large flock of sheep. He knows now that he can sell at a good profit as many of these animals as he can raise; and if his tastes lead him to hold a liking for horses, he can also raise equal stock with a certainty that he will not suffer loss from breeding good animals. But besides the direct gain obtainable from raising stock, the farmer in Canada derives certain indirect advantages of great value to him in the prosecution of his labour on the land he tills. One great drawback to Canadian farming in the past is the lack of animal manure. Each farm had of course some live stock; but studs, herds and flocks, are kept down from the fear that the animals, for which there was a very limited market, would eat their heads off. The raiser of stock could not feel certain that he could sell it for enough to pay for its "keep"; but he was always sure of some sort of market for his hay and grain, and a few roots. This is now changed so far that in most instances it pays better to feed hay and roots, and very often grain, than to sell them. A large amount of animal manure means a restoration to the land of some of the elements of which it has been robbed by too persistent grain cropping, a better rotation of crops, and a chance to rest fields by pasturing. And if the animal manure be not enough, the owner of a farm can now feel able to buy from the proceeds of his grazing land sufficient mineral manures to make up the waste of the soil of which he is the fortunate possessor. In this way farms that hitherto were scarce able to pay for the labor put upon them have become sources of wealth to their owners. We do not actually know that the good crops of the present year are the result to some extent of the new order of things; but it is not unlikely, at any rate if our agriculturists are careful in the future in dividing judiciously the mutual helps, cropping and grazing—they stand a good chance of making more money, and preserving their land, than was possible under the old system of poor stock and soil exhaustion that prevailed.

In Montreal brokers are offering 71 cts. for Consolidated Bank bills, but bankers do not seem inclined to take it, as it is generally thought the bills will be worth their face value before long.

PORT HOPE APPREHENSIONS.

While Peterborough is naturally rejoiced over the new arrangements between the Midland and Grand Trunk Railways, whereby more direct communication is secured between this town and Toronto, Port Hope is far from elated. The "through car" both ways has killed that part of the back trade in Port Hope, which consisted in conveying passengers and baggage between the stations of the two roads. Port Hope hackmen will now have to depend on the local trade of their own town, as do the Johns of most other places. But they have so long looked to what they have lost as their main support, that they seem some what cast down with the knowledge that they must now get along without it. The hotels too of Port Hope made a very good thing out of railway passengers who were formerly forced to lie over in that town, because of the lack of close connection between the trains of the two railways. Peterborough passengers to and from Toronto are no longer obliged to be guests at Port Hope hotels, which will now have to a great extent to depend on patronage more directly pertaining to their own town—for instance, of persons who stay to do business in that place. The hotel keepers and hackmen of Port Hope certainly lose much of what they have enjoyed in the way of casual advantages, and will now have to depend, as do those in like occupations in other places, on the business brought them by the solid prosperity and progress of the people immediately surrounding them. They will probably survive the disappointments and loss they have sustained, and if they all do not, there will be a chance to observe a practical application of the doctrine of the survival of the fittest, at any rate we can see no good reason why these, any more than other Port Hope enterprises should live on the necessities of strangers from other towns, having no direct business connection whatever with Port Hope.

Port Hopers in other branches of business will feel no loss from the change—at least no direct loss, therefore it must be with the disappointed ones we have mentioned that the very funny alarmist ideas we have heard advanced have originated. These apprehensions are based on motives attached to the management of both railway lines, and on which the change for the better in travelling accommodation are supposed to be based. The Grand Trunk Railway Company it is alleged, is trying to conciliate Peterborough, because of the efforts of this town in favor of a new through line of railway, through the rear counties, and Mr. Cox, the Manager of the Midland road, being a Peterborough man, is said to be doing all he can for his own town. Some highly imaginative people of Port Hope have even declared that the railway shops and company's offices are to be removed from Port Hope to Peterborough. Their own silly fears have led them to magnify the loss sustained by their hotel-keepers and hackmen with the ultimate ruin and decay of Port Hope. They do not stop to consider that it is the business of Mr. Cox, as Manager of the Midland Railway, to look after the interests of the road. This he has done in the excellent arrangements he has made with the Grand Trunk Railway Company, and in which he has not sacrificed in the slightest degree, but rather enhanced, the independence of his own company. This he might not be doing by a whimsical removal of the offices and shops from a point where they have been long established, and at a great cost for buildings and accessories.

These Port Hope alarmists have simply allowed their fears to run away with their judgement. If their town goes to ruin it will only be because of silliness and want of steady enterprise on the part of its own inhabitants. Of that we will not venture an opinion, except that we think more highly of the business energy of our sister town than apparently do some of its own people.

THE YELLOW FEVER AT MEMPHIS.

The official reports leave no room for doubt that yellow fever has been again epidemic in Memphis, and that the sad scenes of last year are about to be re-enacted in that ill-fated city. The speedy evacuation of the city which has taken place, will, most likely, prevent such an enormous death roll as was furnished last year; but there will be quite enough of those who will remain or cannot leave, to make an appalling list of victims. Besides being the victim of a terrible scourge again, Memphis is financially paralyzed. Some time last winter it declared itself unable to pay its indebtedness, and its charter was in consequence forfeited by the State Legislature, and the city sank to the level of a "taxing district." All the property is in the hands of a receiver, and the citizens have not the power, if they had the will, to make the sanitary improvements necessary to secure them against the ravages of the fever. In one respect the condition of this lamentable city is worse than it was last year. The road of escape is not opened as wide as it was. In all directions quarantine has been established against her. Even at Louisville, where public and private doors were, last year, thrown hospitably open to refugees, there is a spirit of precaution, and travellers from the south are required to show a clean bill of health. This seems hard, but it is a necessity. Neither Louisville nor Cincinnatti is so far north as to be considered safe from the possibility of the dread disease becoming epidemic, and the utmost precautions against such a possibility are not only justifiable, but imperatively demanded.

TORONTO & OTTAWA RAILWAY

The bonus asked from the city of Ottawa for the Toronto & Ottawa Railway, is solicited on condition that only part of it be payable on completion of the road to Peterborough, and the residue after a grant from Toronto to build the line from that city here. The principle is a reasonable and a wise one, and might be applied elsewhere with excellent effect. For instance, it might be arranged that part of the bonuses granted in this locality be paid for the building of the road from this town to Norwood, the remainder being held to be due only when further work was done. It would cost the company comparatively little to build these few miles of road; and we believe they could readily rent an engine, or engines, cars, and other stock wherewith to carry out the work. A beginning once made in a practical way and in visible shape, would do very much to prove the substantiality of the scheme, and them aid materially in inducing all other localities interested in voting assistance to the line. We have no doubt of the sale of much of the company's stock, and the advance of liberal payments upon it, as the result of such a commencement of construction. We hope to see this idea acted upon as soon as possible.

There is quite apprehension in England as to the potato as well as the other crops failing.

SUSPENSION OF THE CONSOLIDATED BANK.

The Consolidated Bank suspended payment on Thursday last at the close of banking hours. For some time past they have been transferring their deposit accounts in the agencies throughout Ontario, to other banks. The Directors were compelled to take this step on account, it is said, of some Montreal complications. The acting general manager of the bank has issued a statement under date, August 1st. It touches upon the great reductions in the circulation and deposits of the bank for the past seven weeks, and the closing up of nine agencies, and attributes the immediate cause of suspension to the withdrawal of a special deposit of $250,000 held by the bank on account of the trustees of the Credit Valley Railway. The information contained in the circular is most meagre. The Montreal Witness in referring to the affairs of the Bank, says:

"The depositors and bill-holders are entitled at this juncture to the fullest information as to the prospects of their claims being met, but not the slightest hint even in regard to this matter is furnished. The shareholders' meeting is not likely to be called at too early a date, and in the meantime depositors and bill-holders will be much in the dark, and the poor people who are forced to realize on their bills for instance, will sacrifice their property as some have done. The policy of the acting manager in throwing those firms into insolvency which have been sinking the funds of the institution, is, of course, consequent upon the winding up of the affairs of the bank. A curious fact brought out in this connection is that the late manager exerted his influence in favor of firms continuing operations, even after the firms themselves felt they should cease. It appeared to be only necessary under the peculiar system of banking carried on in this institution, for a firm to become debtor to the amount of a hundred thousand dollars or so to secure from the management the greatest consideration in its future operations."

The Newspaper and the Criminal.

In an article, entitled 'The Increase of Crime,' which lately came under our notice in a western newspaper, is the following paragraph: 'There are those who 'think that the detailed accounts which 'many newspapers give of criminal matters have a demoralising effect upon 'certain classes in the community. Without pretending to say just how much 'truth there may be in this theory we incline to the view that it has some force. 'Certain classes of people like a newspaper just in proportion as it is filled with 'reports of various kinds of crimes and 'offences. Now to say the daily or 'weekly reading of records of crimes has 'not a debasing and brutalising effect 'upon the mind, particularly weak 'minds, is simply to say that no kind of 'literature can produce that effect. Constant familiarity with crime even in the 'columns of a newspaper will make 'criminals.' It is doubtful if the position taken by the above writer is tenable. When it becomes necessary to advise a man as to which of two paths he should pursue, perhaps ninety-nine out of every hundred advisers would begin by pointing out the dangers and horrors of that path which they thought to be the more maleficent of the two; and it is scarcely probable that the sojourner would, by thus becoming familiar with its iniquity, follow that path. Temperance lecturers often find it efficacious in deterring people from the use of intoxicating drinks, to describe—and even caricature—the actions and condition of the most depraved sot in the community. And still in doing this, he is executing, it appears to us, precisely the same office which the newspaper executes in publishing the reports in question—holding up to universal opprobrium the deeds of a criminal. A knowledge of that which is revolting should not be an incentive, to a properly constituted mind, to a desire for participation in it, but rather the reverse. It is only the already corrupt of heart that will take a pleasure in the reading of a detailed account of some horrible crime, and while good men will also peruse it, it will be with feelings of intense loathing of the subject, and they will arise from it with their abhorrence of crime deepened and their desire to counteract it strengthened. It is true that a mind which is already utterly debased, will profit nothing by such reading, and its becoming familiar with the crimes of others may have no restraining effect upon it; but what it has read has not made that mind criminally disposed, for it was so already. As a matter of mere business policy we think it injudicious for a newspaper to impose upon its readers too frequently detailed accounts of the revolting murders and other atrocities that occur from time to times; but to say that their publication has the effect of making criminals is entirely astray.

From all accounts, China will soon be able to hold her own as a military and naval power, and may remonstrate forcibly against the indignities to which her subjects have been subjected in America. There have lately been dispatched from England four formidable gunboats, making eight in all, for the Chinese Government, each of which carries a 36-ton Armstrong gun, and is of splendid seagoing capacity. The London Observer says they are intended for operations against Japan, but may ultimately play a different part. Sooner or later China, a vast reservoir of human life, kept in by old rotten dykes, will burst its barriers, and the new world will be flooded by Chinese as the old was swept by the Goths, Vandals and Huns. The day is not likely to arrive in our years, but when it does come, as it must, it will be sad for civilization if the barbarians possess a navy superior in scientific respects to that of the civilized world which they have marked out for plunder.

The Jew difficulty is presenting itself in various shapes to the proprietors of fashionable summer resorts in the United States. Some have even gone so far as to forcibly expel the descendants of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob from the grounds adjoining the hotels, and they are not under any circumstances allowed to sit at the table or lounge on the piazza. This is carrying bigotry to an extreme limit with a vengeance. We do not see why any man should be frowned down on account of his color, race, or creed. Fair play and no favor to any one is the true motto, and we believe that amongst the high-toned Gentile frequenters of fashionable resorts are to be found more dangerous and certainly more unprincipled men, than amongst the humble followers of the Synagogue.

The farmers in the South-western States are rushing their grain to market at a rate never before known. The railroads can hardly supply cars enough to carry forward the crop. The railroads of the Northwest are not at all pressed, and the prospect is that the receipts of grain will be steady and uniform, divided over a long period.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Mr. Shanly, who inspected the Grand Junction, passed the road and expressed himself as well satisfied with the manner in which the work had been done. A regular train will be placed on the road between Belleville and Hastings within a few days.

It is refreshing this hot weather to read of the fitting out of another polar expedition. One is to be made up in England, to co-operate with those from other countries, for the discovery of the North Pole. Think of it, sweltering fellow mortal!

Mr. Chas. Belford, Toronto, who has somewhat recovered from his illness, it is understood, to be appointed Assistant Librarian to the house of Parliament, vice Mr. Lajoie, to be superannuated. The salary is $2,000 per annum. The appointment will not go into immediate effect.

President Quimby, of the Albany Board of Trade, on Monday exhibited the first sample of new Canada barley raised at Woodstock, Ont. It is bright in appearance, its berries good sized and full, and will weigh 49 pounds to the bushel. He also exhibited samples of wheat from the same section. The berry was large and full, and will weigh 61 pounds to the bushel.

Col. Shaw, President of the Haslan Club, has consented to visit, in company with Haslan and Mr. David Ward, any important point to which they may be invited. Col. Shaw will deliver addresses and proceeds are to be applied to the Haslan Homestead Fund. We feel confident that a good house would greet the champion in Peterborough.

In excavating the reservoir for the new water-works at Guelph, a spring was struck which flows at the rate of 2,500 gallons a minute. It was intended at first to pump water from the river for fire protection only, but as the water from the spring is as pure as crystal, and the quantity discharged largely in excess of what was called for by the specifications, it will be used for all purposes. The pipes are nearly all laid and in a very short time the inhabitants of the new city will be abundantly supplied with good water.

The most remarkable thieving operation known took place at Chicago the other day. A party of about 200 Icelanders were on their way to Manitoba but while in the western Sodom they were surrounded by land sharks from Minnesota, who persuaded them to settle in that State, thus stealing the whole party from those that had them in charge. They were valuable colonists, the cash in hand averaging about $4,000 to each individual. As they were the pioneers of a number of their countrymen, the loss of this colony of Icelanders is particularly unfortunate and annoying.

Lord Dunraven thinks Canada has a glorious future. In a recent article he says: "Even from the point of view of a traveller who cares not for field sports, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, and in fact all Canada, is a country full of interest. It is interesting for many reasons which I have not space to enter into now, but especially so as showing the development of what in the future will be a great nation. For, whether in connection with this country, or as independent, or as joined to the United States or any portion of them, that vast region which is now called British North America will assuredly some day support the strongest, most powerful, and most masterly population on the continent of America."

Here is where too many of our people (Americans,) make their great mistake says the editor of the Albany Journal they seek recreation to regain health, not to preserve it. If half the time were given to keep strong what is consumed in the hopeless effort to get strong there would be fewer invalids in the land—fewer men prematurely aged, and fewer women bent and broken in the midst of their years. "Prevention is better than cure;" and no class of men are more fortunate than those whose love of angling frequently draws them from the wearisome cares of business and the suffocating atmosphere of absorbing trade, into the green fields and shaded forests where brook and river and lake afford ample pastime and healthful recreation.

Capital and Labor, an English periodical, speaks approvingly of the sale by the Grand Trunk, of its Riviere du Loup branch. It adds:

The time has fully come to put to an end to the insane rivalry that has so long existed between the Grand Trunk and Great Western of Canada—chiefly, it is to be feared, on the responsibility of the latter company. Sir Henry Tyler stated three days were recently spent at Detroit in vain attempts to come to some agreement, first for a general "pooling" of traffic by the two lines, and then for some arrangement at competitive points. Many persons hold shares in both companies, and all the constituents of the Great Western of Canada should see to it for the sake of their own interests that the present suicidal policy is brought to an immediate end.

The Chicago Inter-Ocean of Saturday, with reference to money and trade there, remarks: "The banks say their surplus for loans was seldom, if ever, larger, and the opportunities for placing them on satisfactory paper or securities never more contracted than at present. There is, in fact, nothing in the character of the business being carried on in commercial or mercantile circles to call out any considerable demand for money, and no marked improvement can be looked for until the crops begin to move to market more freely. A heavy decline in wheat and provisions caused sellers of those articles to make load calls on the 'longs' for margins, and, during the first half of the day, bank officials were actively employed filling out margin tickets, and for a while they were unable to keep up with their work.

A Trip to to the Back Lakes.

The annual holidays, which most of the teachers, and not a few of our mechanics treat themselves to, are now beginning to mean nothing more nor less than a trip to the back lakes. The lakes in the northern part of our county are, we believe, equalled nowhere in the province as a summer resort. The splendid camping sites on the islands and shores of Stony Lake, Clear Lake, Lovesick, and Deer Bay, the beautiful scenery, the close communication kept up between these points and the base of operations, by the little steamer "Cruiser," and the willingness of its captain to accommodate everybody, all tend to make this place the favorite summer resort. Perhaps not the least interesting part of the trip is the journey northward from Peterborough. Having chartered a bus to leave us at Lakefield, and to meet us there upon our return, we left Peterborough shortly after six in the morning. Every minute seemed too until we had our canoes loaded, and were paddling a stiff paddle through Lake Katchewanooshah. An hour and a quarter's work brought us to Young's Point, where a brisk shower of rain marred the pleasure of our journeys a little. But the boys determined that nothing should stop our progress, paddled on, and about half past two we were in sight of Grassy Island, our intended camping place. Here we landed, and speedily set to work putting up tents, tables, &c., and making regulations for a comfortable camp. During the course of operations, we were waited upon by a deputation from a miniature camp on the other corner of the island, who told us that they had taken possession of the island the day before, and suggested that we should leave. This our gallant captain refused to do, and immediately gave orders to assume the defensive. A compromise was soon affected, and a boundary line agreed upon, each party having determined to live within its own limits.

Our time was principally occupied in making explorations, fishing, berry-picking, and canoe racing. We were visited several times by campers from various parts of the lake, also by excursionists, and we never met any person who did not seem to fully enjoy camping out on Stony Lake. We enjoyed the new moon but paid for the pleasure, as two of our party became sentimental and moped around camp until through pity we packed them off to town, to startle some maiden hearts by their poetic ideas, which we considered too grand and sublime for the rocks of Stony Lake. When they came back they appeared much happier, their burdens having evidently been enlightened and they almost 'consumed the boys with envy.' Our evenings were spent around our tables, over a game of whist, or on the bosom of the moon-lit lake, with our canoes lashed together. We sang solos, made speeches, gave recitations, or chanted Moody and Sankey.

In all our sports we endeavored to excel. Two of our number became champion paddlers of those waters, two others excelled in whist, and our cook, who by the way contributed in no small degree to the pleasure of our party, became famous for his solos, and a gentleman who accompanied our party from Lakefield, was very little behind him. A few days previous to our leaving, we were visited by two gentlemen from Peterborough, who, being anxious to get the "bulge" on the boys somehow, proposed a game of euchre. Here again our boys won the rubber, and our visitors beat a lively retreat.

On Saturday morning, after a stay of two weeks, we "struck tent," and were soon homeward bound. We arrived at Peterborough about six in the evening, our boots and complexions a little spoiled, but our physical improvement more than repaid us for any loss sustained otherwise. The success of our trip is due, to a very great extent, to the exertions of our captain, whose sole care was to make the party happy. He personally supervised all our arrangements, and proved himself the "right man in the right place."—COM

Great Fire at Hamilton.

LOSS ABOUT $750,000.—FOUR LIVES LOST.

A fearful fire broke out in Hamilton on Friday night last at one time threatening to destroy the whole city. It originated at 5.40 p.m., in Furner, Livingstone & Co.'s, in a room in the rear of the board room of the Bank of Hamilton. The cashier gave the alarm and all hands speedily proceeded to secure the funds and books. The flames spread upwards through the opening in the building between Furner's and McInnes', and the Provident Loan office speedily took fire and so intense was the heat that the stone facings flew off, and the firemen were scorched. At six o'clock the Merchants' Bank, across John street, took fire, and the Sandford warehouse above took fire. The heat was so intense as to scorch people a block away. Aid was asked from Toronto and St. Catharines. The wind was from the south-west, and strong. Gurney's foundry was for a time considered in great danger.

The fire was got under control about 8 o'clock not making much headway eastward through the smaller buildings. It stopped eastward at Sanford's, and southwest at Morgan's, on John street. The cinders ignited Gurney's roof two blocks north, and also the Colored Methodist Church near Gurney's. The foundry brigade saved the foundry, but the church is totally destroyed. Cinders also ignited on roofs six or seven blocks away, but were extinguished.

A boy named Littleholes, while assisting the Bank of Hamilton, was fatally injured by a falling stone. Another boy is reported badly injured from the same cause.

McInnes' building, valued at $15,000, and stock at $300,000, were both insured for $230,000. The value of the other buildings destroyed is fully $500,000 more, and the stock $100,000 or $200,000 more.

On Saturday, while three men employed by the gas company were working the gasometer in which there was a leak, the wall suddenly, and without warning fell and buried them beneath the ruins. Their names are James Ivory, William Seymour, and John Nibbs. All three were married and Seymour leaves a large family. The bodies were not recovered till Tuesday morning. On Sunday morning a man named James Hannock was killed by a falling derrick while preparing to remove the large stones from the basement of the fallen building. A number of others had very narrow escapes.

VIOLENT AND DESTRUCTIVE STORM.

A most terrific wind storm, followed by torrents of rain accompanied by vivid lightning and heavy thunder lasting about one hour, visited this place about four o'clock on Saturday afternoon. Shade trees along the streets were torn up by the roots and carried some distance. The roof of a house belonging to Mr. W. B. Read was partly blown off. Parts of the walls of a new brick building in course of erection were blown over, and some windows just put in were literally riddled with the wind and debris which the wind carried away. A large drive of saw logs, belonging to Mr. Mossom Boyd, lying in Sturgeon lake, broke loose and the logs were scattered for miles over the lake. The captain of Mr. Boyd's steamer, the Beaubocage, says it was one of the roughest he has seen on the lake for some time. Several farmers in town after the storm say the scene in the woods was something terrible. A good deal of harm has been done to the spring wheat and barley.

Whilst the mail stage was coming here from Fenelon Falls, the occupants had a narrow escape of their lives from a large tree falling directly behind the coach. A passenger says the crashing of the trees along the road was terrifying. Several trees are lying across and completely blocking the road. Considerable damage was done to both lines of telegraph between here and Fenelon Falls.

Rice Lake Items.

(From our own Correspondent.)

—The farmers are all busy harvesting, and as far as we have heard, they have an abundant yield.

—We believe it is the intention of the Rice Lake Boating Club to invite Haslan to preside and give an exhibition at their Regatta this fall.

—McDowell's Pinafore Company are spending their vacation at Gores Landing. They are having great luck fishing, Mr. Jos Banks being quite a prodigy in the art.

—Mr. E. A. Mannschion and family, and Mr. John Hoffrey and family, of Cobourg, are at present staying at their summer residences on Isabella Island. They are attended by the steam yacht Alert.

—Camping parties are numerous this season. We counted six last week, among whom were Mr. Wm. Byre and family, Cobourg, Messrs. W. Hamilton and R. Shaw, Peterboro', who were camped on Spoke Island. Judging from appearances the 'Boys' had a very lively time. Several parties from Port Hope camped on Idyl Wild.

—A rumor is going the rounds that Mr. Isaac Beatty of Manchester, intends having a fast steamer on the route from Manchester in opposition to the Norseman. And that the G. P. & M. R. R. intend running a train in connection so as to enable parties from Rochester to visit Rice Lake and return home the same day, having three or four hours here. The rumor has caused considerable excitement among steamboat owners who scent business.

A FLYING FOUR-FOOTER.—Somewhere down in the wilds of Jersey—if Jersey has any wilds these present Centennial days—one McDaniels dwells, in all the patriarchal comfort and dignity which attach to the English Lord of the Manor. He has a park, a stately mansion, groves of timber, and above all, the most famous racing stables in America. These royal establishments contain some of the finest and fleetest horses in the world. Among them is Harry Basset, a monarch of the turf, who some time ago met with an accident to one of his slender and priceless limbs. Without wasting a moment in doubtful experiments, Mr. McDaniels applied some of Giles' Liniment Iodide Ammonia, and in half a day the horse was as sound as the proverbial silver dollar. No wonder McDaniels tells Dr. Giles to send skeptics to interview himself and his horse in Jersey. Sold by all druggists. Send for pamphlet. DR. GILES, 120 West Broadway, N. Y. Trial size 25 cents.

STRAYED.

Strayed from the premises of the undersigned, on Saturday, the 2nd instant, a small Red and White Milch Cow, 4 years old, rather straight horns. Any information respecting her will be thankfully received by Mrs. DAVIDSON, corner Warsaw and Deare Roads, near Auburn Mills.

THE GHOST OF MORLAND'S TOWER.

For three generations the direct heir to the estate of Morcar's Tower has not succeeded to the property. The last owner, Squire Fairfax, was a hale, jovial fellow, and had three stalwart sons, yet none of them lived to possess the place.

The eldest was killed when Clyde's army relieved Lucknow; the second fell a victim to the jungle-fever, that haunts the moist rice-fields of Central India; and the youngest—it gives me a choking sensation in my throat even now when I recall his fate.

The hero of the Playing Fields, stroke of the eight-oar in the most closely-contested race that Oxford ever won, he was a favorite everywhere, and the pride of his home. I can see him yet, with his laughing brown eyes, standing up against the creak left-handed bowler, who came accused of an easy victory for Stepton over the eleven of Stepton-in-the-Fens. There was none who thought when he carried his bat that greater triumphs must be in store for that ready hand, that watchful eye, and cheery spirit.

A year later when a pleasure boat went down in a squall, the only hope left us was that he had not suffered long, for there was a dark bruise on the pale forehead when the body was washed ashore. His father never recovered the blow, but died soon after his boy; and thus it came to pass that I, a distant cousin, found myself the owner of Morcar's Tower.

The curse, if curse there still be, will again be fulfilled, for no children of mine will ever brighten the gloomy chambers of my new home. It matters not how I know this so certainly, for it is not my own story that I am about to tell. Suffice it to say that the joy was crushed out of my life ere I was thirty, so that I abandoned my chosen career and hid myself in a lonely cottage, thinking that in the quiet life of a student I might find solace for my grief. When first I heard that the old tower was mine, I was unwilling to remove from the abode to which I had grown accustomed, but on further reflection I decided that the effort must be made, and that I must not shrink from my new duties on account of the melancholy associations connected with the place. To the Tower, therefore, I went, taking with me the treasured volumes that were my only friends.

For obvious reasons I cannot give the true names of the localities I am about to describe, but they will be easily recognised by anyone belonging to the neighborhood who may chance to peruse this tale.

Morcar's Tower was situated in one of the flattest districts in England. In old days before cannon were in use, it must have been a valuable stronghold, for it was then surrounded by a ready few, full of dangerous and unsuspected depths, and only practised guides could find the narrow paths that threaded through the grass and rushes. Gradually, however, the fen-land was reclaimed, though the drainage was extremely difficult; and a canal, more sluggish than I have seen elsewhere, was cut across from the Ayder to the Doone. The soil was rich and paid well; and at last a little town grew up, known as Stepton-in-the Fens, to distinguish it from Stepton proper, or, as it was sometimes called, Stepton-on-the-Wold. This wold was nothing but a rise of land on the west of the Tower, and would hardly have been remarked in a less level country.

The tower itself was more properly a keep, square and grim, built of dark red stone that took a purplish hue when wet. Round it was a deep moat which had been hastily and carelessly filled up. Yellow hawkweed and the straggling ragged-robin grew in profusion on the unequal surface of the earth that had been thrown loosely into it; I wondered greatly that my cousin should have allowed this disorderly fringe of weed to remain round the house. I remembered, however, that when my cousin Frank had once proposed some alteration, his father had replied with unusual shortness that he did not choose to meddle with the moat. On the fourth side the ditch was its original depth, and a wooden bridge, with a high fantastic railing, crossed it where the drawbridge had formerly been. The walls of the Tower were enormously thick, and the interior was, consequently, somewhat sombre. There was plenty of heavy old-fashioned furniture, but there were few modern elegancies in the house. In the room that had been Harry's were two new easy-chairs, some engravings after Landseer, and some pewters and cups—relics of the foot-races and sculling-matches of his Eton and Oxford days.

On the ground floor were the drawing and dining rooms, with two smaller apartments; the bedrooms were up stairs, and the servants—I had but three—lived in some newer offices quite at the back.

I myself choose to inhabit a curious turret that projected from one corner of the Tower, partly because I had used it when visiting my cousins in our boyhood. The round shoulder of the wold cut an off early from the evening sun, and from the turret windows I could watch the light being stolen from the Fens by the advancing shadows of the far-clad rising ground.

I loved to see the last glitter die off the canal, and from between the reed-beds, to watch a lazy barge, perhaps being moored for the night, a grey heron soaring his way across the opal sky, or a string of carts or team of horses going slowly homeward—for no living creature moved quickly in the Fens.

When all was still, save that the frogs had begun to croak among the rushes, I turned to my books, and in mystic volumes, such as the history of the 'Rosy Cross,' sought for counsel from men who, like me, had resolved to be alone.

One night, when I had been about a fortnight at the Tower, I sat up rather later than usual at my studies. A new vista was opening before me, and I seemed to be on the point of reaching over that indefinable barrier that separates us from the world in which spirit is the known reality—a world whose laws must some day yield themselves up to our mastery. I raised my head, and drew in a long breath of the night air that blew in at the open casement. While sitting thus pursuing an argument in my own mind, the sound of a stealthy footstep on the stair caught my ear, and abruptly broke the chain of my thoughts.

Irritated at this disturbance, I resolved to forbid the servants coming up stairs so late, and then tried to resume my reading. But the words on the page conveyed no meaning to my mind, and I found myself dwelling inland on that unwonted sound.

Suddenly it flashed upon me—I had not heard the step go away.

My door faced the stairs and only a very small landing intervened. I looked at my watch; it was half-past one.

Obviously, none of the household had any business up stairs at that hour—had I heard the step of a burglar who was even now outside my door? I was unarmed, and beyond reach of help, for the bell in my room communicated with an empty part of the Tower, and I had not yet given orders for its attention. Hastily and nervously I looked my door and listened long for a reathing footstep, but not a sound came, and I fell asleep at last without undressing. Next day I felt somewhat ashamed of the nervousness that had seized me; for, though I do not boast of any special amount of animal courage, I had never before experienced such uneasiness. I concluded that my nervous system must be unstrung, and resolved to take more exercise than I had done of late.

I asked the butler, casually, if he had been up stairs late last night. He was an elderly man and had spent many years in my uncle's service, and I thought there was something strange in his look and tone as he replied, 'No, Sir; none of us were up stairs.'

A confused remembrance of a ghost story came into my mind, and how by a strange coincidence, but unfortunately not chief, by the by, in the tale, [illegible]

faith in the supernatural origin of so-called ghostly disturbances, I took sundry precautions against impostors. I had once been a fair shot, so I opened a long-unhandled box and got out a pistol that had lain there for two years. This I cleaned and put away in the room. I then ordered that candles should be placed three in addition to my usual lamp, and desired that the bell should be at once altered.

When evening came I sat down to my work, and read with quite my usual attention; but I could not recall the keen perception of the previous night.

About one o'clock I felt my mind wandering involuntarily from my book, although I had not been aware of the lateness of the hour until I looked at my watch; a quarter of an hour later I heard a faint sound. I listened anxiously; it was the same step as before, coming slowly up stairs; the step of one who walks woefully—the step of a woman, for I distinctly heard the rustle of a dress. I quietly placed the lamp so that the light would stream right into the passage, cocked my pistol, and as the footsteps reached the door I threw it open. There was no one there.

A sense of horror seized me, and I think at that moment I would rather have met any visible foe than have stood face to face, as it were, with an empty sound.

Next morning Bond lingered unnecessarily in removing the breakfast things, and after glancing two or three times at me as I sat idly by the window, he spoke.

'Mr. Fairfax—excuse me, Sir—but you don't look well this morning.'

'I don't feel very well, Bond,' I replied.

'Been disturbed at night, perhaps, Sir,' said the old man, pointedly.

'What do you mean? Why should I be disturbed at night?'

'Because you're the owner of Morcar's Tower, Sir.'

'Then there is a story that I don't know?' I exclaimed. 'Go and finish your work, Bond, so as not to let the women remark anything, and then come and tell me about it.'

When I returned, Bond gave me a garbled version of the tale I shall presently relate in the words of one immediately concerned; but he added, that since the commission of the crime that gave Morcar's Tower its evil name, it had been haunted by mysterious footsteps. No ghost had ever been seen, but these steps continually passed to the door of the room occupied by the owner and there died away. My cousin, stout-hearted, practical man as he was, had tried every room in the Tower without escaping from this terrible guardian; and Bond thought nervousness caused by the nightly visitation had helped to bring about Mrs. Fairfax's sudden death.

Had he been a richer man, the Squire would have abandoned the Tower; but he could ill afford to do so, and in time became accustomed to the ghost.

'Did none of my cousins ever hear it?' I inquired.

'Yes, Sir; they did. Mr. James and Mr. Frank each heard it before they left home for the last time. Mr. Frank told me himself, Sir, and said he thought it might be a stain he was never coming back.'

'And Harry?—'

'Master Harry was so much younger I don't think he rightly knew the story. Mr. Fairfax made the other young gentlemen and me promise never to tell it to any one; and Master Harry wasn't one to think of things of the sort.'

'How did the others find it out?'

'Same way as I did, Sir; by master changing his room on account of it. They got it out of Mrs. Fairfax, poor lady, at last.'

'Well, Bond, I suppose I can depend on you to help me if I try to find out anything about the ghost.'

'Yes, Sir; but I'd advise you to leave it alone, if I might be so bold.'

'My good fellow, I can't go on living here without trying to understand this affair. If there is a ghost, there must be some reason for his or her coming; and if I could discover the reason, it might put a stop to these visits.'

'Well, Sir, there's no denying that would be a good thing; but I doubt you'll find it beyond you to manage.'

'At least I'll try, Bond,' said I, as he left the room.

That night I placed lamps on the stairs and in the passage that led to them, and made Bond sit up there that he might notice where the steps came from. I myself sat opposite the open door of my room, with my eyes fixed on the staircase. At a quarter past one, Bond called out, as agreed on, 'It's coming, Sir;' and a minute afterwards I distinguished the first foot-falls. Slowly and steadily they came up stairs, so that I could count the number of steps; they crossed the landing, and the last one planted itself on the threshold of my room; then there was perfect silence.

I shuddered and called Bond, who came up white and trembling.

'Sir, the steps walked by me where I sat; I watched the lamp as you told me, but I saw nothing pass between me and it. I don't know where they began; they seemed to start at the end of the passage. Oh, Sir, don't meddle with them, or you'll come to harm!'

'I hope not, Bond,' I replied. 'I am satisfied that there is no trick, and I must think what is to be done next. Go to bed now, for I suppose we shall hear no more to-night.'

'No more, Sir, the Lord be praised! It only comes once in a night; if it were oftener, I don't think anybody could stand it.'

The old man accidentally did not like the notion of a closer acquaintance with the ghost, but now that I knew exactly what had happened, my own nerves were steady. I felt that here was an opportunity of testing some of the theories in which I was most deeply interested, and I resolved that no effort of mine should be wanting to prove them true or false. I believed in the power, possessed by a few strong wills, of influencing others at a distance; and my own studies had accustomed me to concentrate my thoughts, the first step toward exercising such a power, if, as I hoped, it was latent in me. I had never heard of any attempt to control a spirit by such means; but the idea did not appear to me impracticable. Where so little is known, experiments are of use, even though their results be only negative. If there is a spirit—thus I argued with myself—that wishes to communicate with the owner of this Tower, surely a reciprocal wish on his part might render the process easier.

Again, the simplest facts of mesmerism show that one will can control another; surely a spirit, freed from human grossness should be sensitively alive to every influence exerted over it. It only remains to be proved whether I can keep cool and steady if I succeed so far as to obtain obedience from the spirit.

Having settled my plan of action, I began by taking a long and brisk walk in the early morning. Before dinner I confined my reading to historical works, but in the evening I perused carefully a volume in which I had found much curious and useful information on mesmerism. Soon after midnight I seated myself opposite my open door, having previously placed the lamp so as to completely light up the space before me.

Two rather ludicrous difficulties then struck me. In the first place, I did not know the sex of my unseen visitor. Bond's story would have led me to suppose that a man would haunt the Tower, but there was nothing masculine in the mere footfall, or the sound of the trailing robe.

Secondly, I knew that I must keep one idea steadily before me, yet I could hardly go on repeating the same formula, and I could not think without words. This difficulty, however, was a very elementary one, and would be easily overcome by practice. I fancying upon the doorway, above the span of a figure of average height would be, and soon succeeded in making myself think an object mentally named 'Come.'

Meanwhile, the night was [illegible] distinguish the familiar footsteps, even through all this storm-music.

After a while the blood moved faster in my veins, my eyes were momentarily fixed and hot, and my breathing was constrained and rapid, as though every muscle were stiffened—a sensation quite within the deep full inspirations of merely physical exertion.

I should not have realised how great was the tension of my will had not a gust of wind made a gate in the garden bang suddenly, when the quiver with which my nerves responded to the sound betrayed to what a pitch I was excited.

It was close on the hour for the ghost's visit. I passed my hand across my forehead and eyes, and at the same instant, distinct through the wailing of the wind, I heard the distant footfall. I grasped the arms of my chair, and half rose in the intensity of my wish; but when the steps reached the top of the stairs, something seemed to give way in my brain, the room and lights swam before my eyes; but as I sprang up, with my hands to my temples, I saw, or fancied I saw, against the bright background, the shadowy outline of a figure.

It was an instantaneous impression, and I sank back as helpless and weak as a child—all power of will entirely gone. An hour passed before I could shake off my inaptitude sufficiently to go to bed; but I slept soundly, and to my great satisfaction found that, instead of being fatigued, I was more active than usual on the following day.

To Bond's inquiries I merely replied that I was carrying out a plan that I hoped would succeed in time, but that I could not give him the details.

It is unnecessary to describe the experiments of each succeeding night. I soon found that the power of concentrating my will increased with every effort. On three occasions I saw the same shadowy outline; but on each a chance sound disturbed me, or irresistible fatigue deprived me of strength just when I most needed it. At length I resolved to take one night's uninterrupted rest, and to begin my next attempt only a few minutes before one, so as to have more power in reserve when the critical moment should arrive. I was glad that I had attained almost immediately the required state of concentrated volition; but I endeavored to make my condition more natural than it had ever yet been. I gazed more quietly and observantly at the spot where I hoped the spirit might appear, and made mesmeric passes as if before a figure facing me.

As one o'clock struck my senses grew more alert; never before had I felt myself possessed of such subdued and controlled strength; even my breathing became deep and regular.

I could not account to myself for these novel sensations, but I was filled with a buoyant delight which was almost ecstasy. My hands, as I continued my passes, seemed to feel an opposing force, as though I were drawing a weight toward me. There was none of the former heat and excitement, but a genial warmth pervaded every limb.

I knew I had the power over the spirit if I could but keep myself steady.

At last it was close on the quarter, when I heard the first step in the passage. I stretched out my hands in motionless command and expectation. As the steps reached the turn of the stairs the outline became visible once more; it grew distinct, came nearer, and pausing at the doorway, seemed to tremble and gather itself into the form of a woman in a clinging robe, who bent toward me with a look that I shall never forget.

She was very young, and the misery on her face might have made the hardest heart pitiful. In her eyes there was that abiding look of horror that sometimes remains after a great mental shock—a look almost impossible to describe, but which conveys its meaning instantaneously. Her mobile lips were slightly parted, and her small hands tightly clinched at her sides. Although every feature was distinguishable, there was no semblance of humanity about her; she was a pale shadowy figure, and the outline of her head and dress remained tremulous, as though ready to melt into air.

As she gazed earnestly at me I felt that she could communicate her thoughts to a certain extent, and read mine, in this mysterious spirit-contact. I did not speak, but I thought the words, 'Poor soul, I will aid you in anything you wish!' A faint smile quivered over her face, and she bowed her head and beckoned me with one hand. Taking up a small lamp, I followed, as she passed down stairs. Her movement was exquisite in its floating grace, and I remarked that her steps were no longer audible; the sound of them was not needed now to plead for her.

She led me along the passage to a deep window overlooking the moat. Here she paused, and pointed to a panel in the oak wainscoting. I could see nothing peculiar, and glanced toward the spirit for further explanation. Again and again she pointed imperiously to the same spot. I tried to speak, but my voice refused to come, so I thought the question I wished to ask.

'Am I to search here for something?'

Her smile answered me, and she then signed to me to open the window and come out. Placing my lamp on the floor so as to be out of the draught, I got over the low sill and stood at the edge of the moat. The spirit floated a yard or two further, and pointing down to the ground, wrung her hands piteously.

'Did some one die there?' I asked in a whisper, for I felt that my power was waning and it was no longer difficult to speak. The pale hands pointed to the breast of the pale figure, which was already fading, as though her desire was accomplished.

'Tell me,' I cried, flinging myself down before her, 'if I search the panel and this spot, will you be at rest?

She bent toward me once more with a smile of intense peace on her face, and melted out of my sight.

Whether I fainted, or whether I fell into the deep sudden sleep that sometimes follows mesmeric exertion, I cannot tell, but when I came to myself day was breaking, and my lamp was burned out below the open window. After breakfast I gave Bond an account of my adventure, and could easily see that the good old man thought my brain was affected.

'You will help me to search the panel, Bond, and that will prove whether my story is true or only a dream,' said I.

To the window we accordingly went, and Bond inquired whether he was to break the wainscot.

'Certainly not,' I replied, 'if there is a hiding-place here, there is some way of opening it, which I shall try to find before I allow the wood to be broken.'

Inch by inch I examined the wood, and compared the mouldings carefully with those on the opposite side. My attendant's incredulity was so manifest that I should greatly have preferred to prosecute the search alone but by doing so I should have lost the testimony of an additional eye-witness to the discovery I was sure of making. After a long and patient scrutiny I found in the lower corner of the panel an inch or so of moulding that fitted into the rest. Another quarter of an hour passed on, by a chance movement, I gave it the turn required to loosen it. When it came out and showed a spring concealed below it, my excitement was very great, and Bond himself began to share the feeling, and hurried off for oil with which to clean the rusty metal. We soon discovered the secret of the bolt, and a portion of the panel slid back before his touching, revealing a small recess in which lay a roll of manuscript, tied with a black ribbon. Dust and damp had made the writing difficult to decipher, but when the red lights by sunset fell before me, I thought to read it to the end, along with an account of my mesmeric experiment. I have condensed the matter, and supplied a few obvious words that were either blotted or illegible in the original. The first [illegible]

[illegible] I judge that it must have been August, 1788. The manuscript ran as follows:

'I am going to write down what has happened. It may be that no one will ever read what I write; but should this paper ever fall into the hands of any pitiful persons, surely they will grieve with me.

'Mr. Fairfax is a bad man. Heaven forgive me if I ought not to think so! but I must needs say it here. My father says he is not worse than his neighbors, and that it is the habit of most gentlemen to drink and swear in his fashion. If it be so, it is an ill thing for women that have to bear therewith. My father is a poor curate in Stepton. He has as good blood in his veins as Mr. Fairfax himself; but then he is very poor as I have said. My mother and Mrs. Fairfax were friends; and when Mrs. Fairfax died my mother took charge of the little baby she left, along with me. The baby was my Harry—Harry Fairfax of this Tower of Morcar. He and I learned our first lessons together from my mother; and when we grew older my father taught us both. Old Mr. Fairfax took small notice of his son. He was usually hunting, or quarrelling with some neighbor, or having drinking-bouts at the Tower. I will say it again—he is a bad man. I feared him much, he looked so big on his black horse and he had such a gruff voice. I remember how Harry and I were gathering rushes to [illegible] one day when he rode by on the narrow path that goes down to the white hue. The willows and rushes were high; but the black horse was so much taller that we could not hide, as we sought to do. Mr. Fairfax called out with a strange oath that sounded loud and terrible, and jeered at Harry for playing with the parson's brat. Then he rode on; and Harry was in a great passion, the like of which I had not seen before. When I was fourteen my mother died, and therefore I had to take charge of our house. Harry always came for teaching from my father; but he looked older than I did, for I had so money to buy myself new clothes, and was forced to continue in childish frocks when I might have worn gowns. At last an old and good friend of my father sent money wherewith to provide me with sundry needful things; and I remember I was vexed because, when he saw me in my new attire, Harry did not kiss me as was his wont. He loved books greatly, as did my father; and he hated wine and oaths, and all the evil doing at the Tower. Mr. Fairfax was angry, and called him a clerk; but he did not interfere with him. And by-and-by he loved something more than his books, and I could not believe that it was so. But it was true; and no creatures were happier than we when we sat among the osiers and talked of what we would do by-and-by. Father was sorely troubled when Harry told him; but he was always reading, and had not time to think much of us. Besides he loved Harry as his son, and all the more because he would not join in his father's wicked ways. We were just twenty when Mr. Fairfax bade his son marry a young gentlewoman, whose father would dower her with certain lands that adjoined those of the Tower. When Harry refused, his father's anger was very terrible; but as he gave no reason for his refusal, Mr. Fairfax let him go, thinking to persuade him in time, and with softer words. He, however, made speed to our house, and demanded that my father should marry us privately. This he would not hear of at first, though Harry urged it, saying it would be his safety—that Mr. Fairfax had even said the damsel's brother should call him out did he slight her.

'So spoke so earnestly that at last father consented to make the needful arrangements, and we were satisfied. Alas! while he was absent, some rumor had come to Mr. Fairfax's ear, and when Harry returned home he was made a prisoner in his room, and only allowed to issue from it for his meals. Mr. Fairfax thought to tame him, but he knew not that there was a device whereby he might be baffled. In bygone days, when Harry was fain to escape from the noisy guests, he would slip out at the passage window; or if the brawlers were too near the stairs for him to pass, he would let himself down by a rope cunningly made fast to an iron bar that was across his window. A thin and narrow plank was concealed below the grass at the edge of the moat, being held by rope-loops to two pegs knocked into the bank. Once across the ditch, he was free, for the gentlemen were too busy within to espy him. Now, however, his father was always on the watch, fearing lest he should escape. We should have been in sore straits had we not had one friend among the servants—old Betty—who had seen my Harry born. She sped away to me with a message, bidding me come at dusk, and Harry would meet me in the willow thicket across the moat; further than that he dared not venture.

'Was I wrong to go? I thought not; nay, I think still that I was right. Since the night that Harry put his signet-ring upon my finger I have belonged to him. How, then, could I dispute his will? Moreover, he was in trouble, and I could not refuse to go to him in his need. Therefore I went.

'When it was growing late, so that it behooved me to return, he led me to the edge of the thicket and kissed me; and that was our very last kiss on earth, yet I knew it not. I would that I had known, that I might have staid to perish with my love. I hurried along the darkening path, but before I had gone far I heard an angry voice that seemed to be that of Mr Fairfax. I feared greatly for Harry, but I dared not turn back lest I should be seen and cause worse trouble, since it might be that Mr. Fairfax was only speaking to some groom or laborer. All night I could not sleep for terror, and next day news was brought to my father that Harry had disappeared.

'The country was searched for him, but I knew he was dead, for had he been alive he would have found means to relieve my anxiety.

'Mr. Fairfax shut himself up and drank hard; and after a few days he desired that the moat should be filled up.

'The work was begun and that night I knew the reason.

'Again old Betty came to me, white-faced and aged by many years. She told me the horrible thing that has never since been out of my thoughts. I see before me, day and night, the moat, the darkening path, and my Harry as he stepped off the plank and saw his father standing before him. Old Betty could not tell me what had passed, but Mr. Fairfax had seen me, for she heard my name.

'After many furious words, Harry said clearly, "I never will give her up!" Then—then—that cruel man struck him hard on the temples with the handle of his heavy hunting-whip. Harry fell back into the moat and he never rose again. Mr. Fairfax knelt at the edge and called him hoarsely, and when no answer came he rushed into the house.

'Betty was too terrified to say next day what she had seen, and I—can I give up Harry's father to punishment?—I who have been the cause of my husband's death?

* * * * * *

The writing here became unsteady and indistinct, as though the poor girl's mind had begun to wander. It is legible on the next leaf,

* * * * * *

'People look at me strangely; they thought I did not hear to-day when some one said I was mad. Am I mad? No! I am sure I am not; my brain is quite clear, clearer than ever, and each thought is as bright as though it was written in flame. I know what I am going to do. The moat is not half full yet, but in a few more days there will be no room in it. I must get Betty to hide this paper for me in Harry's panel cupboard; she taught him and me the trick of it long ago. I will not tell her why I want it hidden to-night—oh no; she might be afraid if she knew; and I must be quite clear, too. Mr. Fairfax is drinking—always drinking. I am going to punish him; he shall have two deaths on his soul—two—two. God will never forgive him as much as that.

'I shall lie safe with Harry; if anybody finds this they need not be afraid for me. I will fasten a stone over my heart that the water in the moat may hold me down right till I feel him.

'I will close my own eyes as the—my corpse, that no one can tell how I died.

'Frances Fairfax.'

I determined, after reading this [illegible]

[illegible] to have the most carefully searched at the spot indicated by the spirit. That there might be no lack of witnesses, I invited both the Doctor and Curate of Stepton to be present. After reading the manuscript, they were to the full as anxious as I for further corroboration of its story. We knew that the Fairfax mentioned in it had died suddenly of delirium tremens, and probably the work of filling in the moat was then discontinued; for, as I have already remarked, it was of its original depth on one side of the house. As the workmen approached the bottom, they dug slowly and carefully. Complete success rewarded our efforts; for precisely where the ghost's finger had pointed we found the decayed and broken bones of a woman.

The doctor gathered them up with his own hands, and in doing so, turned over some of the earth, and espied, sunk in what had been soft mud, a heavy signet-ring bearing the Fairfax crest. Encouraged by our discoveries, I then gave orders for the whole of the moat to be cleared in the hope that we might find the remains of the poor youth who was so cruelly murdered.

We inferred from the manuscript that his room must have been at one of the corners furthest removed from the hall; and our conjecture proved true. We found some bones, singularly perfect considering their age, and two or three metal coat-buttons. The latter I have placed with the ring and manuscript in a cabinet. To the bones we gave decent burial, depositing them all in the same grave. Since that day no midnight foot-steps have approached my chamber; and I trust that the uneasy spirit has found rest through the discovery of her fate, and that nothing more will be seen or heard of the Ghost of Morcar's Tower.—Blackwood's Magazine.

The Great Shoshonees Remedy.

The Great Shoshonees Remedy is an Indian vegetable compound composed of the juices of a variety of remarkable medicinal plants and herbs; the various properties of these different ingredients, when combined as so constituted as to act simultaneously upon the Blood, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys digestive, Organs, Nervous System, &c. restoring their functions to healthy action, and being purely vegetable, is as harmless a nature's own beverage. This medicine is a decided benefit in all, and a permanent cure in a large majority of diseases of the blood, such as Scrofula, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Canker Pimples, &c. In prescribing this medicine we do not claim that it always performs cures; but this we do say, that it purifies and enriches the blood, permanently curing a large majority of diseases arising from its impurities. It stands far ahead and unequalled among the hundreds of competing medicines of the day. It has stood the test of ten years, and is to day more popular than ever. As a summer restorative it stands unrivaled; it enables the system to bear up against the constant drain to which it is subjected by a high temperature. Persons who are subject to bilious Colic, Dysentery, Indigestion, &c., should take the Shoshonees Remedy. Price of the Remedy in pint bottles $1; Pills, 25 cts. a box. Sold by all medicine dealers.

PETITT'S EYE-SALVE.

An Infallible Remedy for all Diseases of the Eye (acute or chronic), Granulation of the Lids, Ulceration of the Lachrymal Canals, Film, and Weakness of the Vision from any cause.

THE AMERICAN EYE-SALVE is presented be public with the assurance of its efficiency as a curative of the most diseases of the eye, acute or chronic inflamation whether induced by scrofulous origin or otherwise, weakness or defect of vision, diminished tone of the optic nerve, or a diseased state of the tissues constituting that organ. Also for all persons whose vocation requires an incessant action of the eyes, the Salve will act as a charm in restoring a uniform healthy action, wherweakness, pain, and misery may have long threatened a fatal termination. It is the most simple, safe, and effective remedy ever discovered. The materials or which it is made are pure, perfect, and costly, compounded with elaborate care and exactness safe in its application, being used externally, and, of course, lessening the pain and danger, which necessarily attends the introduction of minerals and eye-washes. RINGWORM and OLD CHRONIC SORES, of scrofulous origin, or resulting from whatever cause, yield to the AMERICAN EYE-SALVE. It is used successfully for Piles. Its soothing effect is immediate, permanent cure requires but a few applications. The proprietors of "Dr. J. PETTIT'S AMERICAN EYE-SALVE," while making new and improved machinery for making a more perfect box for the Eye-Salve, have changed the Trade Mark on the cover so as to correspond with the Cut on the Wrapper, Circulars, Advertisements etc. We call attention to this, as it might otherwise be regarded as counterfeiting.

Joy Among the Children.

COPLAND'S SWEET CASTOR OIL, equally suitable for children and adults. Endorsed by over 600 doctors in Canada.

The difficulty of administering nauseous medicines, and the desirability of having them pleasant to the taste, induced T. Copland to undertake researches which resulted in the discovery of a Sweet Castor Oil, perfectly palatable, of the same strength and medical qualities as the ordinary Castor Oil, and while equally safe and harmless, yet acting with more certainty, and producing neither nausea nor griping. Some children say it is lovely; others call it syrup—they all say they like it. One parent says—'My children drink it like water;' another—'We had to hide the bottle or they would have finished it right off;' another—'My little girl has taken it twice without any trouble, and does not know what it is, though she hates the ordinary Castor Oil and we never could get her to take it without a fight;' yet another—'I wish you success of your Sweet Castor Oil; it is a splendid thing—sure to take the place of all the common oil.'

The extraordinary demand for this improvement on a staple household medicine has brought fraud ulent imitations into the market, but the public can guard themselves against substitutes (which unprincipled parties are attempting to sell on the reputation of this article) by seeing that the name of 'COPLAND'S SWEET CASTOR OIL,' is on both wrapper and direction label.

The undersigned having purchased Messrs. T. Copland & Co.'s interest in the above preparation, are now manufacturing it from the original recipe. NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto.

THE GREAT CAUSE
Of Human Misery.

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

☞Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cents, or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Manufacturer of Boots & Shoes,

PETERBORO' BRANCH, - DIXON'S BLOCK.

Goods Sold Direct to the People at Wholesale Price.

The Only Business in Canada Conducted on the Same Principle.

Over $200,000 Worth of Boots and Shoes so Supplied Last Year.

The great loss annually sustained by selling to Dealers, first led to our establishing of Branch Stores, where we could supply direct to the people for Cash all the goods we could manufacture, thus giving to the people the goods at the dealer's profit, and saving to ourselves the annual loss. We were the more forcibly impressed into this step from the fact that cheap Eastern-made shoddy goods were being palmed off as our goods. We now sell our own goods, warrant what we sell, use no shoddy or inferior material of any kind, and can and do supply goods of the best quality 25 per cent. less than they can be bought elsewhere.

Everything Marked in Plain Figures. Only One Price.

CUSTOM DEPARTMENT.

Our arrangements are now complete in this department, and we can make to measure promptly either Ladies', Gentlemen's, or Children's Goods, in the Latest Styles, at little over half the price usually charged.

Ellsworths' Pyramidical Atmospheric
IMPROVED CHURN DASHER.

(Patented July, 1878.)

Is adapted to all the old fashioned Round, Tub or Crock Churns. It will churn and gather the butter in from 4 to 10 minutes, and turn out 25 per cent more butter than anything of the kind in use. Each section or flange is an Air Chamber, which forces a large volume of atmosphere down into the milk or cream at each stroke, the cream or milk at the same time is forced over upward of four hundred inches of surface, and is thrown with such great velocity square against the walls of the churn that it ruptures the globules and frees the butter with a few strokes. It is perfectly simple and easily constructed.—No machinery about it to get out of order.

PETERBOROUGH, AUGUST 14, 1879.

THE SALARIES OF MUNICIPAL CLERKS.

Among the matters in which reform could with great advantage be introduced, is that of salaries of municipal clerks. In fact it may, without any fear of exaggeration be stated, that amid all officials there is none who receives less for the work performed, none, who is expected to accomplish more and do it better than the officials in question. Scarcely a year rolls round but there is some new act to master, some alteration in the old to note, some additional labor entailed upon him. Duties which at first seemed easy to perform, swell gradually to such dimensions that all, or nearly all the time intended to be allotted to other employments, is consumed in them alone. And still seldom, or never does a rise in salary take place. We submit that this is a hardship, and one which it would be advisable to remedy. True, it may be argued, that our councillors do not receive remuneration at all equal to the services rendered. But a councillor at least, is but a bird of passage. Few, if any, who take that office upon themselves expect to derive from it any personal gain. The incumbents of such a position are usually men who are allured more by a desire to do something for the municipality, to do some public service, than by a mercenary spirit. Very few indeed expect to make their term otherwise profitable to themselves than in the possession of that satisfaction which ever arises from a sense of duty well performed. But the poor, overworked municipal clerk has no such inducements. No public honor will result to him as the reward of services well performed. While a dereliction of duty calls down upon his head the unabated wrath of the whole community. The only ones who do regard him are those who pile year by year new matter for him to master, and their regard is of so little value to him that it generally peculiarly brings him nothing additional. The only time indeed he ever is made sensible of it is when he fails in duty.

But the employment of a municipal clerk not only entails on that official heavy work, and a necessity for continual study, but it demands more and more all the time of the incumbent, and necessitates a great amount of dull routine and dry office work. Books must be kept in order; everything must be in its place; a system must be inaugurated and continually followed through to the end. All this demands time, patience, and an aptitude for neatness, which is not found everywhere, and which should be better remunerated when it is discovered. The only wonder is, that as the arrangement now stands, and with the salaries at present paid, that these officials take so much interest in their work as they do.

In order to secure permanently good men here as elsewhere, fair salaries should be given. Until there is some improvement in this particular, everybody can despair of seeing the work performed for a very long time, with the greatest interest or efficiency.

A special to the Globe says:—Captain Tyler has written a letter on behalf of the Grand Trunk Board, which is published to-day, in reply to Mr. Childers proposal. The letter states that the Grand Trunk Board is disinclined to agree to a division of competitive traffic only. They advocate a fusion of the whole net receipts of the two Companies, to be divided accordingto agreed percentages. This settlement could easily be carried out. It would ensure the utmost economy and efficiency and avoid a duplicate management whereas the arrangement would cause great expense, loss of time, and constant controversy. The general feeling is strongly in favor of the Grand Trunk proposal, which is supported by a majority of the Great Western shareholders, and will probably be carried out.

The Irish Canadian is now employed in showing up Sir John. It says some of the wiser heads in the Conservative party are going to hold a Council with a view to the consideration of the "descent of the party in popular opinion since last September and of the disaster to whose verge it had been led by Sir John Macdonald's play of fast and loose in the matter of Letellier.

THE NATIONAL POLICY.

Previous to the 17th of September last, every quack politician of the country was re-echoing the cry of the chieftain, that turn out Mackenzie and place the Tories at the helm of state, and prosperity would down forth as the morning summer sun. Every industry of the country was to be protected, every farmer, every mechanic, every manufacturer, every laborer, until plenty and prosperity would crowd out the hard times that were pressing Canadians, in common with all other nations on the face of the whole earth. All these promises, we know, would turn out myths, or phantasmagorial-magic-lantern representations, shadows without substance. Not a single industry (properly so-called) of Canada has been benefitted by this wonderful quack medicine for National ills. The Redpaths have, it is true, been permitted to add largely to their millions previously accumulated in the sugar trade, but it is equally true that every consumer of that article has had to pay his mite to that treasury, while the revenue of the Dominion is not one cent the richer therefor. He who sends the rains on the just and the unjust alike, has favored the farmer with an abundant harvest. Nevertheless the farmer has learned the truth of the fact told him by Mr. Bertram and the EXAMINER, that he must look to the European demand for prices. With an abundant western corn crop, he will learn whether protection will ensure higher prices for his coarse grains so lavishly bestowed on him this season.

We understand, however, that most of the large woollen mills of the country have shut down or will shortly do so, for a time. The reason being, that there is nothing to do, no orders, no demands, and little prospects of orders. The one exception to this state of things that we hear of, is our Auburn woolen mills, and it is said that they are running only to keep their employees together. Yet, this woollen trade is one of the highly protected industries of the Dominion. It is true that all the industries were to be protected unto prosperity. Every laborer was to have abundant and continual employment at good wages. Mechanics were to realize higher pay, and yet not one of these promises have been kept or the results promised come to pass.

We knew and declared then that the whole thing was political cant, dishonest and intended to deceive. Now that one of the largest industries is forced to go on short time, and thousands of employees are compelled to take diminished wages, will the false prophets admit their deceptions, and set themselves to undo the evils they have been engaged in, and by true principles of genuine economy, aid in bringing about the better times?

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

The Weights and Measures appointments have at last been made, and our predictions have become realised, and we venture to say that they will be received generally with a wail of dissatisfaction. It is an indisputable fact that no matter which party is in power, there are a number of "flies on the wheel" who are disappointed if the powers that be, fail to countenance their claim for the "seat of war," for the reason that their grandfather cast his vote for the supporter of the Government years hence. However that may be, for each of the Inspectorships we know there was a legion of applicants, and there is good reason to believe that what has happened in one or two cases has occurred in others; men have been solemnly promised appointments, and have even been shewn official lists on which their names are inscribed for publication in the Gazette, and yet, when the time arrives, and duplicity can no longer be practiced, it is discovered that others have been appointed by the Minister. On the appointments for this district we have no comments to make. If the parties who made the appointments are satisfied, we are. But what we do object to is the displacement of competent Reform officials, with the view of filling their places with Conservatives. That was the end and aim of all the recent changes in the Weights and Measures Act. First, the old incumbents were suspended, under the excuse of making new arrangements and mapping out larger territories. After a while, a good Tory gets the head position in each of the group of Counties. There are now several sub-Inspectorships to fill. For the most part the old Inspectors, supposed to have been only temporarily suspended, are passed over, and Tory applicants appointed. The pretence for the moment is that the salaries of several deputy-inspectors will be saved; but the only difference being that all the Reformers are manœuvered out, and Conservatives manœuvered in. This is one of the objects the Ottawa Government seems to constantly keep in view. Under any officials, the act will probably always be unpopular, as it subjects every trader who uses weights and measures to no end of bother. Whether the case will be improved by the appointment of Inspectors and assistants, as has been done by the Government, is a question. There is plenty of room for improvement.

WHAT IT COSTS.

Two weeks ago we referred to the cost of Local Government, but from information received from reliable sources we are now able to give definite figures. At that time we placed our expenditure for all purposes at about $40,000, which we find below the true amount. Figures collated from the books of the Town Clerk and Treasurer, give us the following:

For Water, Fire, Gas, Commissioners, Sinking Fund, Salaries and Local Expenditure	$21,576.17
For Public Schools	11,975.44
For High Schools	7,591.20
Interest on School Debentures, or in other words, on Buildings	1,674.00
Total	$43,497.11
Separate School Tax	$1,651.61
Government Grant	320.00
Interest on Banking	250.00
	2,221.61
Total paid for Educational and Municipal Government	$41,275.75

This includes Government grants for public and high schools, fees from non-resident pupils, assessments, licenses, etc. The assessment being in round numbers $39,000. This is really a nice little sum, and requires labor to collect it, as well as consideration how to expend it.

The sum required for Protestant school purposes by assessment is $11,199.44, and for high school, $6,341.50. We give these two items separately, lest we might mislead any of our readers. The balance received for school purposes are made up as follows:

Public School Government Grant	$ 320 00
Fees of non-resident Pupils	250 00
Assessment from S. S. No. 4	250 00
Government Grant to Col. Inst.	1000 00
Other sources	250 00
Amounting to	$2,070 00

By which sum our taxes are reduced every year, under present arrangements.

We do not write on chimeras, because we are fully satisfied, that as fair return is obtained for the outlay of these sums as is obtained in any town in Canada. But even the best returns consisting of [illegible] on which we [illegible] [illegible] need—are not always popular.

From the figures placed before our readers it will be seen that as nearly as possible, one-half of all our revenues is used for purposes of education. The other half is expended by the Town Council, and Commissioners for Town Trust.

The amount for each purpose appears large, but Trustees and Councillors have their full share of them to pay, and are as much interested in keeping them at the minimum as any other equal number of ratepayers in town, and use reasonable means to secure that end.

No one could expect to get his children a public school education for less than two dollars a month, or twenty dollars a year. And as we have over 1000 pupils attending our schools, these at $20 each, would cost $20,000, without buildings and other needed outlays. We only hope that all moneys are equally wisely expended.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

There is much talk on the street about failures of Banks. The Quebec institutions have a monopoly of that sort of thing.

The rumor is revived that Her Royal Highness the Princess Louise will return to England about the end of October, and return to Canada in the spring.

Gloomy reports are received from Memphis. The yellow fever is steadily spreading, and a large percentage of the cases prove fatal.

Mr. Chapleau's non-confidence motion in the Quebec Government, was defeated on Tuesday by a vote of 30 nays to 26 yeas.

The storm which passed over a portion of New Brunswick on Thursday did an amount of damage which it is difficult to estimate. Nothing like it has ever visited that Province.

The Supreme Court of New Brunswick, in a decision given on Tuesday, has declared the Canada Temperance Act ultra vires. It is probable that an appeal will be carried to the Dominion Supreme Court.

The fact that Sir Francis Hincks, once Financial Minister of the Dominion, and often held up as the cleverest financier in the country, was President of the collapsed Consolidated Bank, is very suggestive to say the least.

G. F. Gow, one of the recently appointed instructors to the Indians in the Northwest, has been dismissed in consequence of charges brought against him by the Orillia Times, and which were supported by the Packet, the Conservative paper.

Newman Hall has succeed in obtaining a divorce from his wife. The trial was a long one, and much bitterness experienced on both sides. Public opinion is pretty equally divided as to the guilt or innocence of the reverend gentleman himself.

Professor McEachern, Dominion Government Inspector of Cattle at Montreal, estimates that $943,464 has been received by the Canadian farmers for cattle exported during the past three months, and that the steamships alone have received $316,474 for carrying them.

The Montreal Post objects to the term "Anglo-Saxon" as applied to the people of Canada, on the ground that the "Anglo-Celtics" predominate. It urges the sensible suggestion that all should regard themselves as Canadians, irrespective of their origin.

Sitting Bull has returned to Canadian territory. His camp is composed of 5,000 to 8,000 people. Several hostile tribes are numbered among his followers. He avows his determination to abstain from hostile movements and return the property stolen from the Americans.

On dit that Senator Macpherson is negotiating for Tracy Turnarelli's rejected wreath in order to crown Sir John Macdonald with a magnificent "workmen's" demonstration on his return. Instead of "peace with honor" it will be a "wreath and right honorable."

The writ for Bonaventure for the election to the House of Commons has been issued. The nomination will take place on the 26th inst., and the election on a day to be fixed by the Returning officer. This is rendered necessary on account of the county being an outlying one.

Let exhibitors at Fairs carefully consider the following:—Kingston advertises a grand Midland Central Exhibition, and offers $4,000 in prizes." By careful additions the prize list only includes $2,388.25 in premiums. Toronto "offers $20,000 and the actual amount is far below that sum.

Will air explode? That's what Mr. John Sykes, of Oshawa, wants to know. He owns—or rather owned—an air bath. A patient named Hunter, from Millbrook, was inside, when the whole thing blew up, severely injuring both Hunter and Sykes. The latter says he never knew "that air thing" to be explosive.

Some sensation was caused at the English House of Commons two weeks ago by the discovery that some wag had posted up in one of the principal corridors a clever drawing of Lord Beaconsfield as a domestic cat with nine tails. The likeness was excellent and the nine tails were supposed to represent war, slavery, bankruptcy, imperialism and other evils which have been associated with the policy of the present Government. The drawing was in its way quite a work of art. Many members inspected it before it was removed by the officials of the House.

Prof. Goldwin Smith is thus reflured to by the Stratford Beacon:—"Probably at the present moment there is not in the Dominion of Canada a greater political humbug than the philosophic Mr. Goldwin Smith. He has already received far more attention from the press of Canada than such a political weather-cock deserved. Far better to leave him severely alone. His utterance on public men and dubbie affairs are not entitled to the least weight now. He has boxed the political compass so often as to make him simply an object of contempt and ridicule.

The Toronto Telegram, a newspaper which is supposed to know something about Goldwin Smith's movements and intentions, says that the Globe is wrong in stating that Mr. Smith is to be made a Senator. It appears that he is to receive some position, whatever it may be, and the Telegram announces that thereafter he will likely hold the responsible post of Director of Ceremonies at Ottawa. This attention was filled by Prof. Fleming, but as that "gentleman" tripped the light fantastic toe across the border or somewhere else, and conveniently forgot to give all his dancing lessons after having received the money therefor, the position was advertised as vacant. We hope that the new professor may prove himself to his duty, and it would not be a bad idea her him to go through the country and complete the dancing lessons commenced by his predecessor.

The crop reports from all parts of Europe for the last week indicate that the amount of grain required from America this year will be greater than even last. We have before noticed the extremely unfavorable condition of things in England. From Russia very contradictory reports have been received. So far as can be gathered from these, however, the crop in the northern and central governments will be about an average one as regards wheat and rye, but spring crops have suffered severely from drouth and other causes. In the eastern portion of the Empire, it is reported that the crops have been totally destroyed by the continued drouth. In the South, especially in the valley of the Caucasus, the crops have been destroyed by grasshoppers and locusts. It is expected, therefore, that the Russian crop will be below the average this year.

The following terrible picture from the St. Catharines Journal, a Conservative paper and a supporter of the N. P., is a sample of the present condition of things:

"They, (thinking and intelligent people) look around and find bankruptcy written everywhere—from the wholesale merchant to the patient worker—from the enterprising manufacturer to the day laborer. The country is strewn with dismantled wrecks. Misery is cramped, industry struggling, and poverty stands on every corner. Take the country as a whole—and it is the fairest the sun ever shone upon—and thousands of stalwart men are found to enforced idleness.—Others are working on short time and short pay, finding it exceedingly hard to make both ends meet. Gloom and despair is settling into the hearts of the working class. There is nothing at the docks, and the cheering hum of industry is but a memory of the past. Commerce, is paralyzed, and all classes are alike involved in the terrible stagnation. We cannot return to days of prosperity except with labor fully employed."

Now, if such is the condition of Canada, according to a Conservative authority, after a trial of the National Policy—which was to have given immediate relief, and life, and energy to all our business interests—what apology can be offered on behalf of those who have deluded the Canadian people by such a hollow mockery and wicked fraud?

LACHINE REGATTA.

A member of the Peterborough Boating Club who was present at the Lachine Regatta, gives us the following particulars of the recent race.

The Argonauts were placed so far in shore that they had no current to contend with for a great part of the run towards the buoy, and they thus seemed to pull away easily from the rest. The Lachine crew, who occupied the third position, knowing the course thoroughly, purposely crowded our men out so as to secure for themselves still water, at the expense of the Peterborough crew, who had to face a stiff current and heavy sea. The rough weather since their arrival had made it impossible for them to get acquainted with the course as they had expected. The Argonauts were first round the buoy, Peterborough next, followed by Lachine, Toronto tailing up. On the way home our crew rowed splendidly and with excellent judgment, just holding Lachine in check a little astern, and while pulling a strong stroke which gained rapidly on the Argonauts, reserved enough for the home stretch. Both the Lachines and Argonauts seemed to have exhausted the most of their energies on the earlier part of the race and had nothing left for the finish, while our men were ready for anything. But here began our misfortunes. The Referee's steamer on the return, was in the course of the Peterborough and Lachine boats, and, although repeatedly urged by the captain of the club, who was on board, to keep out of the way, it was not until the boats were within about fifty or a hundred yards that the Referee succeeding in getting the course of the steamer altered. But, in turning, a number of large waves rolled off from her bow, and striking the Peterborough boat, nearly swamped it, and quite stopped the rowing for a time, the crew having all they could do to keep their shell up. This lost them the race, which they would otherwise have had by at least a length. As it was, they again spurted and shot past Lachine whose stroke collapsed in his boat, and if they did not actually beat the Argonauts, as the people on shore said they did, they at all events had crossed the line by six feet when the gun was fired. The first telegrams sent to Montreal were, that Peterborough had won. Several disinterested gentlemen who were on shore in a line with the buoy, came across and stated emphatically that Peterborough had won by several feet. Others said that least it should be allowed a tie. The stroke of the Argonauts himself, said he at first thought it was a tie. But the judge, whose decision was final, gave the race to the Argonauts by from three to six feet. The crew did well and showed that they were at least the equals of anything there, and it is very unfortunate that they should have lost the cup by the Referee's steamer nearly swamping them. Their stroke is a good and telling one. We trust the crew will give a good account of themselves at Barrie and Toronto. Mr. Edwards did everything in his power to have the course of the steamer altered again, but the explanation afterwards given, was that a shoal outside made it impossible to turn sooner.

The Montreal Gazette says the Peterborough crew made a splendid effort, which, if commenced a moment sooner would have undoubtedly altered the result, but they were hampered by the wash from the Judge's boat at the critical moment. The same paper compliments the crew on their conduct after the race. The Post says a large proportion of the spectators persist in firmly asserting the contest to be a 'tie.'

(From the Globe.)

MONTREAL, Aug. 11.—Owing to the stiff breeze blowing on Saturday afternoon only two races were rowed at the Lachine regatta, viz., the Indian canoe race and the double-scull skiff race. Early this morning there was still a doubt whether the four-oared race would be rowed today. The wind at five o'clock was much the same as on Saturday, blowing in the same direction, though with less force. Towards six o'clock the wind abated, but the course was still as rough as ever. There were very few visitors about. On Saturday the Stadaconas crew left for home, pleading that there time would not admit of them laying over until to-day. The suspicion that they were a professional crew, or at least that some of them were, gained ground, and to this fact is attributable their sudden departure.

At 7.25 the crews were called out by the referee. They were assigned the following positions:—1st, Lachines, 2nd, Argonauts; 3rd, Toronto; 4th, Peterboro'. A parley was then had, the Argonauts objecting to the roughness of the water. At twenty five minutes to eight the signal for the boats to come out was repeated. At this time a slight ripple was blowing south-west by west, and the water was gradually becoming calmer. Again the Argonauts protested, but the referee decided that the water was good enough.

The crews came out at eight o'clock in the following order:—Lachine, Argonauts, Toronto, and Peterboroughs, and took up the positions assigned them as above. The wind slightly freshened, and another objection to the state of the weather was made, this time by the Torontos. "I think the water is fair," replied the referee, "and if you intend to row you must get into position at once." This settled the matter and the crews got ready to start.

The Peterborough crew was a very favorable impression by their trim, sturdy appearance. They seemed to be already weighted, and pulled up to their places in good shape, with an easy, vigorous stroke. The Lachine men looked well, and handled their oars as if they knew how to use them. The Toronto men looked too showy for real hard work, and lost little attention was shown towards the Argonauts, who seemed to take matters very coolly. A great deal of trouble was felt by the visiting crews in keeping their boats in position, and they were obliged to use their oars to enable them to do so.

At 7.30 minutes 21 seconds past eight o'clock the signal was given for the start.

The men got off well together, the Peterboro' and Lachine crews nicely leading, followed by the Argonauts and Torontos even. The lead however was only for a few moments, it being a neck-and-neck race for the next five minutes, Peterboro' again leading and steering out from the course. The crews then separated, the Argonauts moving out from the Torontos in order to gain more "sea room." The Peterborough men soon lost their lead and began rowing wildly. The Argonauts speeded along at a good, even pull, with plenty of strength to spare at a push. The Lachines and Peterboroughs were again even; but not for long, for the latter recovered their lead, while the Torontos were doing their best to make up for lost distance.

At this stage of the race it was impossible to tell who would win, the chances of success alternating so rapidly. The Torontos were the first in nearing the buoy, followed closely by the Peterboros. On nearing Dixie the Lachine club were leading with a long, steady stroke, and doing good work; but the Argonauts began to settle down to business and passed the Torontos, doing their first mile in seven minutes. Here the merits of the race is said to have commenced, and the Toronto tried with a very short-lived spurt to overtake the Argonauts. But it was a useless effort. When nearing the foot of Dixie Leland the Peterboros rowed close under cover of the wind, doing some very hard pulling, and succeeded in turning out to their buoy at 8:30 a.m. The Lachine Club in the meantime was holding its own, but fortune was against them and the Argonauts got ahead of them and turned their buoy at 8.31, Lachine following closely. On the homestead the Argonauts kept well their lead, pulling an easy stroke, the Lachine crew rapidly gaining on them, and creeping away from the Peterboro crew. This pace was kept up till the Windmill was reached at 23 minutes to nine o'clock, the Argonauts still leading, with the other three crews abreast. Lachine was still working desperately hard, and did some really good work. Her fortunes were about to mend as she was rapidly creeping up to the Argonauts, when, unfortunately, Mr. Healy slipped an oar and fell from his seat. This accident was fatal to the Lachine crew's prospects, and they never recovered from this mishap. It was evident that success now lay between the Argonauts and Peterboros, notwithstanding that the Lachine crew were trying hard to recover their ground; but, with the same steady long stroke, the Argonauts and Peterboros kept neck and neck until the homestretch was reached, when it was a matter of much difficulty to decide who was the actual winner. The referee however decided that the Argonauts had won. Time, 20 minutes 5 seconds; Peterboro, 20 minutes 10 seconds; Lachine, 20 minutes 10 seconds; Lachine, 20 minutes 21 seconds. The Torontos were fully a minute behind.

The Trent Valley Canal.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER.

SIR,—The fact that an engineer sent by the Dominion Government, has for some weeks been exploring the country, with a view to reporting on the feasibility and probable expense of this project, has again drawn attention to a scheme which has lain dormant for five years.

If you will look at the map of Ontario, you will observe that a line drawn from the mouth of the Severn river to Trenton, the head of the Bay of Quinte, will be nearly on a line with the Trent waters. The probable course of the canal is as follows:—

Commencing at the Severn river, it is followed up to Lakes Couchiching and Simcoe. A small expenditure will make the river navigable for barges. Crossing Lake Simcoe, the 15 miles of land lying between it and Balsam Lake are traversed by the canal. On the course of the Talbot River, locks to be fed by water from Balsam Lake, are required. Passing down Balsam Lake with canal and locks into Sturgeon Lake, thence into Pigeon and Chemong Lakes, thence tour and a half miles into Katchewanuck Lake to Lakefield, thence nine miles by the Otonabee River to Peterborough, thence by a fine open river to Rice Lake, a distance of 33 miles to Hastings, thence by a lock into the River Trent, thence by river to Healy's Falls, thence by canal and one mile of river to Trenton, a total distance of 200 miles, of which 160 miles are by open lakes and navigable rivers, now traversed by many large steamers.

This canal requires only to be a barge canal, as once in the Bay of Quinte there is barge navigation to Montreal, and thus grain or merchandize loaded at Georgian Bay, can reach Montreal without transhipment.

When it is understood that a single barge will carry as much grain as a train of twenty cars, and when it is further considered that a small tug can bring half a dozen of these barges through the lakes and broad waters of the Rivers Trent and Otonabee, it will be realized that the Trent Valley Canal is above all other projects the one which should receive the attention of the government.

The Georgian Bay branch, part railway, part canal, is an unwieldly and expensive project, which was conceived only as a sop to Lower Canada, and on its own merits commends itself neither to engineers, statesmen nor traders.

The Georgian Bay trade and the proposed Pacific Railway can get an outlet by the extension of the Northern and Midland Railways, and the great trade of the west can be secured for our own shipping port, Montreal, much more cheaply and with greater certainty of control from diverting influences than by any railway project.

The Trent Valley Canal can be built for much less than the Georgian Bay branch. Indeed, it can be completed and a million saved to assist in the construction of the Toronto & Ottawa Railway, and the two projects secured at a less cost to the Dominion Government than this Georgian Bay branch. By the completion of these two projects, the trade of the railways centering in Toronto, and the trade of the western lakes may be swept to Montreal and Canada can make herself the commerce carrier of the Great West.

Then the great lumbering operations of Western Canada during the next twenty years will be on the Georgian Bay. By this canal, lumber can be shipped from the mouth of the Bay of Quinte by the canal barges to American markets by Oswego or by the Lake Champlain route.

This canal, for purposes of local trade, would be like a railway with a dozen branches. The barges loaded at many points on the Georgian Bay, or any point on the lakes through which it passes, could be towed to their destinations with the least possible handling and consequent expense.

Indeed, if the merits of the project are considered, it will so commend itself that the wonder will arise that it should for so long a time have been out of view.

This canal, besides all the ports on Georgian Bay and Bay of Quinte, which will be tributary to it, will pass through Orillia, Barrie, Fenelon Falls, Bobcaygeon, Lakefield, Peterborough, Hastings, Campbellford, Frankford and Trenton. It will also pass through the following counties: Hastings, Northumberland, Durham, Ontario, Peterborough, Victoria, and Muskoka.

In conclusion let me say, that on the lakes and the Otonabee and Trent Rivers, which would form part of this line, there are now a dozen large steamers towing barges that carry 150,000 feet of lumber, are capable of and certainly do carry as many as 600 passengers.

Hoping that the scheme may soon be before the country on its merits,

I am sir,

Your obedient servant,

D. W. DUMBLE.

The Philadelphia Times gives the following bit of news: "A military manœuvre, the first ever seen on Mount Washington, arrived a few days since. He had on an Ulster and mittens, and his bill was so covered with frost as to be useless." We fear August will favor us with bills, and then, alas! where can we go to escape mosquitoes!

OBITUARY.

GARNET.—On Saturday, 9th ult., died Margaret, widow of the late Thomas Garnet, of Cavan, in the seventy-ninth year of her age.

About forty years ago, the gospel was preached by the writer in the village of Bloomfield, about mid-way between Port Hope and Peterborough. For some time we had to use rooms in private dwellings but shortly were enabled to erect a place of worship. Mr. and Mrs. Garnet were among the first fruits of the seed then sown.

They with some others having gladly received the word were baptised, and were soon formed into a Baptist church. From that time to the period of her death the deceased was enabled by grace to ornament her profession by spirit and conduct becoming the gospel.

She possessed many amiable traits of character—a good share of intelligence—ready wit—a good memory—large heartedness—she used hospitality without grudging. The friends of the Redeemer always found by her a hearty welcome, both to her house and to her table. No one could be long in her company without being impressed with the reality and eminence of her piety. The cause of Christ occupied a supreme place in her affections and according to her means, she was ever prompt to support it. She spent most of the past winter with her adopted daughter, Mrs. McCarty, of Millbrook. Last spring she removed to her son Edmund's, township of Manvers. A short time before her decease, she moved to the village of Bethany to the residence of her son George. She was spared the endurance of a lingering illness. On the Thursday previous to her death she was walking about the village in her usual health, on Friday she became slightly indisposed, on Saturday her indisposition increased. Saturday night for the first time, her daughter-in-law watched by her bed side. Sunday morning Mrs. George asked if she should read to her, she answered, yes: again she was asked if she had any preference? and she replied the eighth chapter of Romans. As the chapter was being read, she commented almost on every verse pointing out its rich and exquisite beauties, and the firm support and strong consolation, which the precious truths afforded her in the immediate prospect of death. Afterward she sank into a sound sleep, and waking much worse, she threw her arms around her son's neck and there gently breathed her last. The event was improved the following Tuesday by a discourse on the consoling words of Jesus, "In my father's house are many mansions." The corpse was taken to the burial ground on the north-east corner of the Garnet estate, where had been interred twenty-five years ago, the remains of the Rev. Joseph Horn, second pastor of the church, and twenty-one years ago those of her late husband, and twelve years ago, those of her eldest son, William, and there we interred her remains, not to remain there forever, but to await the voice of the arch-angel and the trump of God, to transform the body of humiliation into the likeness of the glorious body of Him who is the resurrection and the life.

Shooting Affray In Toronto.

COOL BURGESS IN A FEW ROLS.

TORONTO, Aug 6.—Considerable excitement was created to-day by the rumor afloat that Cool Burgess, the noted Minstrel, had shot and wounded Wm Widgery fruiter, Yonge street. The report, on enquiry was found to be correct. The particulars and circumstance leading to the affair are as follows:—Burgess has long suspected Widgery of having had criminal intercourse with Mrs Burgess, which fact led to the separation of husband and wife. Cool came over to this city from New York, where he is now living, on Sunday last, in response to a telegram that his mother was dying, and desired to see him. He stopped at his brother's saloon on Yonge street, and was there last night at 10.30 when Widgery and a companion named Blakely entered; Widgery turned and invited him to have a drink. This Cool refused, when Widgery called him some hard names; this so enraged Burgess that he drew his revolver and fired two shots at the man, wounding him in the hand and arm. Widgery obtained a revolver from Blakely and fired one shot at Burgess, who was not hit. Burgess then beat a retreat and was at once removed to the country, where he is at present hiding. Widgery's wounds are not considered serious. The matter will be investigated.

New York, August 8.—Cool Burgess, who shot a man in Toronto, Tuesday, appeared on the stage of a variety theatre here last night, sang a song and gave a recitation for an encore. He became excited over a remark by a person in the audience and stated: "I am not a murderer. It was forced upon me. That man ruined my life and wrecked my hopes. I am only sorry I did not kill him." He was loudly applauded and left the building.

New York, August 8.—Cool Burgess was arrested here to-night in the theatre, on a telegraphic requisition from Toronto, for felonious assault upon Widgery.

Britain's Crops.

Another Storm Crushes the Last Hope.

Each succeeding telegram from across the ocean only confirms the fears that have prevailed for some weeks past in reference to the growing crops. As storm after storm swept over the land, hope would be rekindled by a brief glimpse of sunshine, only to be again dashed to the earth as the floods cease and the wind beat the weakened grain into a tangled mass. The conviction has been general and apparently well founded, that prices here will rule higher than for the past eighteen or twenty months in consequence of a probable European demand. Any doubts on this point have been removed by the news that England was visited on Saturday last by the severest storm of the year or even years past, and immense injury has been caused. We quote from the despatch:

"The loss by rain, hail, and inundation will be irreparable this season. The loss of live stock is also serious. The storm was attended by a fall of hail-stones, some of which were five inches in circumference. The damage to the glass immediately around London foots up thousands of pounds. In a great part of Bedfordshire the hay crop has been completely swept away, and many cattle drowned. Newmarket and neighborhood are flooded, and the rainfall in Buckinghamshire, it is estimated, ruined immense quantities of hay. Damages by the flood and lightning is also reported from Cambridge, Norfolk, Guilford, Leicester, Bath and Monmouth."

Influx of Immigrants.

(Hamilton Times.)

The freshest returns from England afford indications that the emigration to Canada and the United States will this year exceed even that of 1851 (the year after the potato famine in Ireland), 1876 and 1877. The statistical emigration returns from Liverpool show an exodus of 10,000 persons for the month of April alone. But it must be remembered that this is the record from only one port. There are such ports as Bristol where the good folks from the West embark; then there is Southampton were the Germans vessels from Bremen touch to take on board our cousins from the south of the tight little island, as well as other English ports, not to mention those in Scotland and Ireland. The emigration appears to be increasing to the most extraordinary proportions.

A Distracted Parent.

(From the Albany Times.)

THE POET SHOWS HOW THERE MAY BE SUCH A THING AS TOO MUCH LOVE IN THE HOUSE.

Five daughters—four of them engaged—
Good heavens! I shall go mad!
For such a sweltering of love
We never ever had.
The very atmosphere is charged
With it; no matter where
I go about the house I trip
Upon some whispering pair.

At evening, when I take my pipe
And seek a quiet nook
To read the Morning Times, or else
Some new and inspiring book,
I go, perhaps, the parlor door,
When a familiar sound,
Quite unmistakable, suggests
It is forbidden ground.

So then more cautiously I turn
To my mansion room;
But lo! again upon my ear,
From its remoter gloom,
Comes softly, yet with emphasis,
That warning, when I start
And leave, as Lady Macbeth wished
Her guests would all depart.

My next resort is then the porch,
Where roses smell and blooms;
No! is it safe that betrays
The love of regular zooms!
Ah, no! a spirited "exchange of bass"
Prevents the presence the
Of Cupid's ravishes, and, alas!
There's still another pair.

"But sure," I think, "my library
Will be a safe retreat."
So there at once, with quickened step,
I take my weary feet.
When lo! the warning sound again
Breaks on my listening ear.
There Hoover, my youngest, hath not yet
Attained her thirteenth year!

Hark! there she is! and bless my heart
That pumpkin, young Lane,
Is at her side.—I do believe
That she, too, has begun.
Oh, pipeline love to sit and dream
Of future married joys,
Pray Heaven with honest fervor that
Your girls may all be boys!

AN INDEPENDENT OPINION.

By James Payn.

Arabella was my beloved object, and with Arabella and her aunt I was to travel from London to Exeter. She was young and charming, but, as I even then perceived, somewhat frivolous in character. She liked dancing, and—what was worse—dancing with military men rather than civilians; and she had no opinion of her own as to books—that is to say, she was not quite so certain as she ought to have been (for I was) of the supreme excellence of a particular story of mine which had not only been given to the public in a three-volume form, but had recently obtained the honors of a cheap edition. She liked to hear what other people thought of it, which was clearly an act of disloyalty to me, as well as a proof of her want of judgment and independence of character. She said she didn't care for the opinions of friends and relatives about it, a remark which showed her to be deficient in natural affection and the reverence that is implanted even in the breast of the savage; and she wanted to know if I was personally acquainted with my reviewers which argued suspicion of the basest sort.

Nevertheless, I loved Arabella, and would have married her if an allowance of one hundred pounds a year and tastes that would have done honor to one of a thousand, would have permitted it. As it was, we had agreed to wait and live in hope, which certainly is preferable to living on it.

At Paddington Station, after seeing the ladies comfortably settled in the carriage, of course I went to the book-stall to see if the 'Bandit of the Apennines' (it was not a domestic story like this by any means) was properly displayed, and to put a few careless questions as to how it was going off. In point of fact, I meant to buy it, for I always encouraged its sale in that way whenever I took a journey. To my surprise and horror there was not a copy on the stall. 'This is the way,' thought I, 'that great reputations are buried. However, I commanded my temper (which is beautiful, but hasty) so far as to ask of the person in charge how this infamy had occurred.

'Well, sir, said he, 'the explanation is very simple: we have just sold the last copy of the book.'

If I had had one to spare—but the fact was that fare to Exeter had made a great hole in my quarter's allowance—I could have given that man a sovereign.

'Is there any other book, sir?' he continued, willingly.

'Other book? No indeed,' thought I; 'I hate your railway literature.' And had I not got my Arabella, the prettiest picture-book in the world, to look at throughout the journey?

'The sale of the 'Bandit' is pretty good, I suppose?' remarked I, indifferently.

'It's very quiet,' he answered drily.

Now, what could he mean by that? The term 'quiet' as applied to the 'Bandit of the Apennines' was a monstrous misnomer; he lived, in fact, in a lurid atmosphere made up of combats, escapes, and wholesale massacres; the man must, therefore, have restricted his observations to the sale of the book only. In that case he probably meant 'quietly prosperous'—not influenced by fits and starts of public favor, but growing more and more into popularity as its merits became known.

'You say, my man, that you have just sold the last copy,' said I affably: 'Would you kindly tell me—for I happen to take an interest in the author—how many copies did you take to begin with?'

'Jem,' cried he to the small boy at his side whose head was only half above the counter, 'How many had we at first of that 'ere 'Bandit of the Apennines'?'

'Oh, that? We never had but one,' replied the small boy.

Again I say that I trust the desire for blood is not so culpable in the eyes of the recording angel as the actual imbrowsment of the hand in human gore.

I fled to my railway carriage with the smothered execration of 'Dear me!'

I found there not only Arabella and her aunt, but another passenger—a middle-aged gentleman, (but old in my eyes), who would have made a very nice companion for the latter, if I could have persuaded them to remove into another compartment and to leave us two alone. But the selfishness of old age is proverbial, and there they stuck. However, I was opposite to Arabella, and, under the protection of a common railway rug, we could, and did, interchange an occasional affectionate pressure of the foot—an operation that is a little difficult, by-the-by; dangerous through its openness to the mistake of pressing somebody else's foot, and exposed to the ridiculous error of making advances to the foot-warmer and other things under the seat. To do her justice, Arabella had never been backward in reciprocation of this kind, but on this occasion she was especially demonstrative; indeed, as I happened to possess a corn only less tender than my sentiments toward her, her attentions, which I could not, of course, but welcome, were a little embarrassing.

At last I perceived by the direction of her glance that they had a particular object. Her eyes were fixed on the volume that our railway companion had purchased at the station, and she was telegraphing to me with intense excitement, 'It is the 'Bandit of the Apennines.''

I declare that for the first moment or two I quite forget my Arabella in the consideration of this tremendous circumstance. That a stranger should have actually bought my book, paid coin of the realm for it, of his own head, without fear or favor or personal relationship, and then got into the same compartment as the author of that admirable production, was something much more than an undesigned coincidence; it was an incident (remember it was my first book) calculated to confound the infidel and establish the providential government of the world. 'But suppose—for everything is possible, however improbable' thought I, with a sudden revulsion, 'but he shouldn't like it, that he should yawn and even go to sleep over it, and that Arabella, who wants to know the opinions of outsiders about the 'Bandit of the Apennines,' should see him?' My heart felt cold as a stone.

It was obvious that my beloved object was enjoying the situation; her eyes sparkled even more brightly than usual—with joy, no doubt, at seeing how it was appreciated by the public; but their was a twinkle of fun about them which I didn't like. 'How we shall see what we shall see,' they seemed to say.

The man was not a romantic-looking man, such as would be likely to enjoy a high class dramatic fiction; I should have said he was a lawyer, or perhaps connected with commerce—and not in the fancy goods line either. Upon the whole, I was relieved to see that, after fumbling in all his pockets for a paper-knife, he was about to put the 'Brigand' (which was exact) into his traveling-bag for a more convenient season, when, to my horror, Arabella's aunt—a good-natured but officious personage—produced from her reticule the article of which he stood in need. He thanked her, and proceeded to cut the book, with irreverent rapidity, as though it were a penny paper; nevertheless I was pleased that he cut it all at once, for if he had cut as he read, and stopped half way, or even earlier, it might have produced the impression that he was tired of it.

'It is a pity,' he said, as he handed the knife back with a bow to Arabella's aunt, 'that these railway books should not have their leaves cut; but they tell me that the reason is that a good many of 'em don't 'go off,' and then the sheets are used for packing purposes.'

I saw Arabella's beautiful form tremble with suppressed mirth at this frightful speech. It seemed to me that there was something unnatural and a little coarse in a girl of her age possessing such a sense of humor; her pretty lips distinctly formed the words for 'packing purposes' before they subsided into a roguish smile.

Then the man began to read, but not in a satisfactory manner; instead of his attention being riveted (as it ought to have been, for their was a most thrilling episode in the first chapter), it was distracted by contemptible objects—the management of his railway rug, the pushing of his portmanteau further under the seat, and by the localities on the wayside. He must have been mad himself, I thought, to have stared at the Hanwell Asylum so attentively at the very moment—for I knew where he was by the pages he had turned over—when all his intelligence should have been concentrated on the description of the brigand's prison cell. I am not a pessimist—I endeavor to think as well of our common human nature as circumstances will permit—and yet I could almost swear that I saw him turn over two pages at a time without discovering his mistake, and that in the middle of an equal contest between the brigand and five officers of justice, that should have stirred the blood of a sea anemone. Then, pressing upon the paper-knife as an introduction, he would address a word or two to Aunt Arabella, as to whether she liked the window shut to the very top or preferred sitting with her face to the engine (as if that signified), while the heroine, in whose adventures he ought to have been wrapped up, was escaping out of a window much too small for her, and by a rope that swayed with every gust from the mountain side.

It was I alone, of course, who was aware of the extent of his enormity, for Arabella only knew he had my book in his hand, and Arabella's aunt did not even know that; but it was easy even for them to see that his attention was not devoted to it. Indeed every now and then he stole a glance of admiration at Arabella herself, which I should have objected to at any time, but which under the circumstances was doubly impertinent and offensive; as an old man—old enough to be her father, 40 at the very least—he ought to have been ashamed of himself, and as a man of business he ought to have been attending to his business and getting his money's worth out of his investment. Then—horror of horrors!—as we drew near Swindon (perhaps it was the motion of the train affecting his aged frame, or the need of lunch asserting itself in his enfeebled carcass) he actually began to drop off in little snatches of—I hesitate, in charity, to say sleep—but of somnolency. The idea to which I clung was that he closed his eyes the better to picture the scenes which the author of the 'Brigand of the Appennines' had so vividly painted; but this explanation it was difficult for me to communicate to Arabella (who sat next to him) by the mere pressure, however significant, of my foot; in her eyes I felt that this cold-blooded and stupid ruffian was falling asleep over my story. She had made, in fact, more than one little grimace to express her apprehensions on this point, and though I smiled back in the most cheerful way, 'He is only thinking, my dear; he is in reality charmed with the story,' she seemed to only half understand me, and shook her head in a very incredulous way. If he really should go to sleep beyond all doubt, so as to snore, for example—and he looked just the sort of man to snore—I felt that my reputation as a novelist with Arabella was gone.

However, we reached Swindon without his committing himself to that full extent; but, under the influence of lunch I felt certain it would happen unless something was done in the meantime, and I resolved to do it.

We all got out to have soap, and I found my opportunity of speaking to the old gentleman.

'My dear sir,' I said, 'I am sure you had no notion whose book you were reading coming along, or you would never have nodded your head over it.'

'What do you mean my lad? I was reading my own book—the 'Brigand of' something or other. I bought it at Paddington. It is rather a—'

'Hush! But you didn't write it; that's the point. That young woman (in the carriage with us wrote it.'

'What that pretty girl who sat opposite to you?'

'Yes, next to you.' (This I said with significant reproach.). 'She couldn't help seeing you nod, and it ruined her.'

'She wrote that book—she?'

'Yes; she is exceedingly clever.'

'Very likely; but it seems so strange that a woman should have written such a book at all,' he murmured. 'It's so sensational, so full of scenes. Dear me!'

'She's a girl of genius, my dear sir.'

'No doubt, no doubt,' he said. 'How very unfortunate! Did I nod? If I did so, it was in adhesion to her sentiments. I remember now that some of them struck me as very beautiful.'

'They are beautiful,' said I; 'it is a noble book. But she would not have you know she wrote it for any money. It was published anonymously because she was too modest to put her name to it. You must not hint at what I have told you; only you had better alter your manner.'

'Thank you I will of course. I have sincere admiration for the book, and I shall show it.'

'Only don't excite her suspicions; be careful about that.'

He nodded till I thought he would have nodded his old head off; and we returned to the carriage very amicably and resumed our journey.

'I always feel sleepy after luncheon,' said Arabella's aunt, by way of excuse for the forty winks in which she felt herself about to indulge.

'So do I in a general way,' said the old gentleman; but I have a book here that interests me immensely.'

I saw Arabella's eyes light up with pleasure, then hid myself behind a newspaper which I had just purchased for that very purpose. I was a very young man, and my modesty or consciousness represented me for my little deplicity. I had not the hardihood to look; I only listened, which, fortunately, my darling took not for censure, but modesty.

'I thought you didn't seem to like it,' said Arabella's aunt, who was a plain spoken person.

'On the contrary I am delighted with it; it is not often one leaves Bath at a venture—for I confess I never heard of the work before—and finds one has chosen such a prize. I can not myself think of a royal residence, henceforth I shall look for a book by the author of the 'Brigand of the——'

Would it be credited that he had to look at the title page before he said, 'Appennines'? But such is the 'outside public.'

'The 'Brigand of the Appennines?'' exclaimed the old lady in great excitement. 'Why, that's——' Here, thank goodness, she was stopped by a cross volley of reproachful glances from her niece and me.

Arabella was very cautious that her aunt should not reveal the authorship, on account of her scene for an 'independent opinion,' and of course I was still more solicitous not to have my innocent little artifice exposed. Our united efforts had the happiest effect; they gealed the old lady's lips, and convinced the stranger that Arabella was the real Simon Pure.

'There is a strength and vigor about this book,' continued the old gentleman, 'that keeps one's attention at the fullest stretch; one has only to lay it down and close one's eyes to feel one's self one of the dramatis personæ. Have you ever read it, sir?' And the hypocritical wretch addressed himself to me.

'Yes,' I said; it is a good story, and as you suggest,' (for I determined to pay him out for his audacity,) 'singularly masculine in style.'

'Nay, I didn't say that,' he answered hurriedly; 'it has the vigor of a male writer, but there is a delicacy, a purity, a—dear me! what shall I call it?—a perception of the niceties of female nature in it, in which I seem to recognise a lady's hand.'

Here Arabella, choking with laughter, put up her muff before her eyes, and took advantage of the circumstance to give the man a warning glance that he was going to far. My fear was that before we got to Exter there would be an eclaircisement of some kind; but, to my immense satisfaction and relief, he left the train at Bath.

'I have no friends here, and am going to stop at a hotel,' said our fellow passenger at parting; but while I have this book unfinished I shall not find the time hang heavy on my hands.

'Upon my life,' said Arabella's aunt, as we steamed away, 'one would think James, that you had told the man you had written the book.'

'Upon my word and honor,' said I fervently, 'I told him nothing of the kind.'

'I am quite sure he didn't,' cried Arabella indignantly; 'James is incapable of such underhand conduct. And I must say the independent praise of that gentleman is very satisfactory and convincing. I really began to fear that he didn't like the book. If so it evidently grew upon him.'

'It grew beautifully,' said I, 'the soil being rich and favorable.'

'Yes, evidently a most intelligent man, said Arabella's aunt, 'and exceedingly polite. I am so glad I lent him that paper cutter.'

And so was I, though there had been moments (when he 'boiling himself one of the dramatis personæ) when I had regretted it very much.—[Belgravia.

Unwashed Vegetable Food.

Whatever advantages real or imaginary, may attend the consumption of raw vegetables, it is abundantly evident that peril must beset the use of this description of food, unless the articles eaten are most thoroughly cleansed. For example, watercresses grow in shallow streams and ditches, and are apt to be fooled by dogs, which are known to be commonly infested with intestinal vermin. If the cresses so produced are not scrupulously washed, and nothing else but the most painstaking brushing under water can cleanse them, they are more than likely to convey into the stomach, entangled in their leaves or attached to the stems, the ova of tapeworms and other parasites. This is a distasteful, disgusting reflection, but it is one that needs to be made, because there cannot be any reasonable doubt that cresses, salad and fruit growing low on the ground are exposed to every form of contamination, and some, at least, of the impurities with which they may be defiled will probably act as vehicles for the transmission of parasitic diseases not merely disgusting but dangerous.

Treating Meadows After Mowing.

As meadows are short yet with a pretty even and good set, and as the time for applying manure cannot well be spared, and a good quality of manure (free and rotted) is not always on hand, the next best thing and one of decided advantage is to sow plaster. Apply as soon as the crop is off. It is cheap, indeed the cheapest of all fertilizers, yielding much for the outlay where the land is adapted to it; and it is soon applied. Give double the quantity or more than is given to clover—from 200 to 300 pounds to the acre. Grass requires this. The sulphate is especially beneficial on clay land. Applying the same quantity to grass as to clover (and the grains are included among the grasses) has failed to show a satisfactory result, except where the quality of the plaster was superior, when a less quantity has the effect of a greater amount of an inferior article. All depends upon the proportion of the salt (sulphate of lime) in the stone. A good dose, even applied and covering all, with anything like favorable weather the remainder of the season, will forward and thicken the already good set, and secure another cutting if the crop is removed sufficiently early, as it should be.

The Wheat Weevil.

After wheat has passed safely through all the perils of the harvest and escaped the ravages of insects that wage war on the growing plant, a danger says the Farmer's World is not unfrequently in store for it when it has been deposited in bins. This danger makes itself apparent by a minute white dust spread over the grain and a peculiar odor that permeates the bins. On passing a hand between the fingers it vanishes rapidly, exposing a more shell partially filled with dust in place of a round plump grain. The little black beetles that hold in vain during the winter months come out of their hiding places to [illegible] with millions of small relatives. The female makes a minute incision in the grain and deposits therein an egg. At each female there is incorporated a number of eggs and the insects do not hesitate to penetrate the hard of grain in all directions, but few harvests escape. The eggs deposited soon hatch on maggots which have fists and consume the starch of the grain. By the time these pests are grown the grain is nearly or quite exhausted; the worms go into a pupa state and in a few weeks become weevils, which force their way out of the grain and seek some hiding place for the winter. Farmers who anticipate trouble from these weevils resort to a variety of expedients. Among these is fumigating the bin with burning sulphur. Others sprinkle air-slacked lime on the wheat, and others again sprinkle it with salt. The surest way of avoiding the weevil is to change the place of storage. Fumigating the bins with burning sulphur, already referred to, is reported by many farmers who have tried it as effectual in preserving their grain from this enemy.

How to Punish the Zulus.

The Toronto Globe proposes, with the utmost apparent sincerity, to make up for the cost of conquering the Zulus by compelling them to wear clothes—and clothes only of British manufacture. The Globe thinks that should the Zulus don civilized attire, their example would be followed by the savage tribes of Central Africa, and that an extensive trade would then be built up that would more than compensate Great Britain for recent losses in South Africa. The scheme is certainly unique, but there are two or three difficulties in the way of execution. In the first place, would Cetywayo's warriors be willing to wear clothes? And, in the next place, where would they get money to pay for the clothes, should they decide to wear them? But perhaps the Globe thinks that the various missionary societies would promptly come to the relief of the savages, if the latter would signify a desire for stockings and trousers.—N. Y. Sun.

Selling Clean Grain.

The following will be to the interest of farmers: "At a meeting of millers held at the Wellington Hotel, Guelph, on the 24th of June, 1879, for the purpose of considering the present system of buying grain, it was shown that the system gives no encouragement to the farmer to clean or offer a good sample, as the poor sample always brings more in proportion to its value than the best. It was therefore unanimously resolved that, in justice to all concerned, they would on and after the first day of August next, buy according to the following scale, which is the same as the buyers in the County of Waterloo have adopted, and which gives satisfaction to both buyer and seller. Wheat standing full weight of 60 lbs. being the standard. If only 59 lbs. to the bushel, 1c off; 58 lbs., 2c off; 57 lbs., 3c off; 56 lbs., 5c off; 55 lbs., 8c off; 54 lbs., 11c off; 53 lbs., 15c off; 52 lbs., 20c off; 51 lbs., 27c off; 50 lbs., 35c off. Signed by James Goldie, Chairman, Guelph, and J. E. Winsler, Secretary, Salem.

Mitchell's Bellandona Improved India Rubber Porous Paster.

There never has been a time when the healing of so many different diseases has been treated by outward application as the present. It is an undisputed fact that over half of the entire population of the globe resort to the use of ordinary plasters.

The principal ingredients used in making these Plasters are Gum Olibanum—or better known as the Frankincense of the Bible—Rubber, and Burgundy Pitch which, when scientifically compounded, is full of electricity and when combined with the pure medicinal gums, is found to be one greatest healing mediums ever brought before the human race.

They are acknowledged by all who have used them to act quicker than any other Plasters they ever before tried, and that one of these Plasters will do more real service than a hundred of the ordinary kind. All other Plasters are slow of action, and require to be worn continually to effect a cure; but with these it is entirely different; the instant one is applied the patient will feel its effect.

They possess all the soothing, warming, supporting and strengthening qualities of all other Plasters. Many who have been relieved of RHEUMATISM, TIC DOLOREUX, and various other pains in the KIDNEYS, BREAST or SIDE, and believe it is solely done by the electrical qualities which the Porous Plasters contain, and which is imparted to the system, thus restoring them to a healthy condition.

They are very soft and pliable, still very adhesive; and a sure cure for WEAK BACKS PAINS IN THE SIDE AND BREAST, and are invaluable to those who have a COLD of long standing, and often prevents CONSUMPTION. Some even tell us they believe they were entirely cured by the use of them of a long fasted Consumption.

Joy Among the Children.

CORLAND'S SWEET CASTOR OIL, equally suitable for children and adults. Endorsed by over 600 doctors in Canada.

The difficulty of administering nauseous medicines, and the desirability of having them pleasant to the taste, induced T. Copland to undertake researches which resulted in the discovery of a Sweet Castor Oil, perfectly palatable, of the same strength and medical qualities as the ordinary Castor Oil, and while equally safe and harmless, yet acting with more certainty, and producing neither nausea nor griping. Some children say it is honey; others call it syrup—they all say they like it. One parent says—'My children drink it like water;' another—'We had to hide the bottle or they would have finished it right off;' another—'My little girl has taken it twice without any trouble, and does not know what it is, though she hates the ordinary Castor Oil, and we never could get her to take it without a fight; yet another—'I wish you success of your Sweet Castor Oil; it is a splendid thing—sure to take the place of all the common oil.'

The extraordinary demand for this improvement on a people household medicine has brought fraudulent imitations into the market, but the public can guard themselves against imposition by (which they should do in buying any article) by noting that the name of 'Copland's Sweet Castor Oil,' is on each wrapper and cleaned bottle.

The celebrated healing plaisters, Messrs. T. Copland & Co.'s interest in the above preparation, are now manufacturing in their own proprietor.

(Patented July, 1878.)

Is adapted to all the old fashioned Round, Tub or Crock Churns. It will churn and gather the butter in from 4 to 10 minutes, and turn out 10 per cent more butter than anything of the kind [illegible] um. Each motion or flange is an Air C[illegible]er, which forces a large volume of atmosphere down into the milk or cream at each stroke, the cream or milk at the same time is forced over upward of four hundred inches of surface, and is thrown with such great velocity against the walls of the churn that it ruptures the globules and frees the butter with a few strokes. It is perfectly simple and easily constructed,—no machinery about it to get out of order.

SOME NEGLECTED LAWS.

A celebrated character once declared that one could drive a coach and four through any of the laws of the Empire. However hyperbolical such a declaration may be, there is a truth contained in it. Laws are made for the express purpose of preventing as far as possible, the perpetration of what is held to be wrong; and while the evils against which laws are levelled continue, so long will these laws, applicable to them be driven through, violated, and the cleverest and most plausible kind of defence made for the breach. But while all our laws are thus liable to be broken, there are some in the statute book which are by the people seemingly, "more honored in the breach than the observance." Such are some that oppose themselves to the sense of the chivalry and fair-play inherent in the character of a people. A high tariff, for instance, always gives rise to smuggling, and the more oppressive the legal burdens, the more popular sympathy the smuggler gets. The same is true of British game laws and poaching. Indeed it may be laid down as a general rule, that when a law becomes so stringent as to deal harshly with any class of subjects, a sense of justice, in and toward that class, arises in opposition to the law and in sympathy with those who disregard it. It is very difficult to tell how far this feeling is justifiable in some cases, and the easiest solution to the mental question is, a return to the dogma that the law should be respected, being for the greatest good of the greatest number. But this does not always satisfy those who consider themselves the suffering minority; and the question remains a permanent one. While this will account in some measure for the easy disregard in which some laws are held, it will not explain fully, utter non-attention to others in themselves wholesome, and wise in purpose. Such an explanation is only possible by considering the difficulty of providing machinery for enforcement, and utter indifference on the part of the average citizen to his share in sustaining the majesty of the law, till he be personally affected and forced by necessity to defend himself by the means placed at his hand by wise legislators. It will be found in consideration of the question, that the neglected laws are such as relate to the personal comfort and convenience of the individual, in certain contingencies, as distinguished from those pertaining directly to the safety of life and property. For instance, sanitary laws are neglected in every city, town and village, till the evils they are intended to prevent, become intolerable to some one or some number of the inhabitants. Bawdy houses and unlicensed groggeries are often suffered to exist with the full knowledge of many, who feel themselves good, law-abiding citizens, but who never make the slightest effort to suppress the evils of which they are cognizant, till they are brought in some way to their own doors, and the ramifications of the moral pestilence reach their homes and attacks their family. Then they awaken; often too late. The disregard of the laws against the sale of liquor on Saturday night and Sunday, and of supplying liquor to Indians, is perhaps, more complex in its causes, but it carries with it similar characteristics. In all, there is painfully manifest, the difficulty for adopting means for obtaining legal proof for the conviction and punishment of offenders. The same, or similar difficulties, exist in the case of the game laws, and the laws regulating bush fires; but there are other neglected statutes, offenders against which can be easily discovered—who are, in fact, known to those about them, and who still are not punished. Why? Simply because "what is everybody's business is nobody's business." Of such are the laws against allowing sawdust to fall into rivers, to prevent cattle to run at large, for the cutting of thistles, to provide against thrashing machine accidents, and others against which no man can offend without that offence being plainly apparent to a whole community, so that proof can be readily brought home to him. It is only sheer indifference, carelessness to what does not concern a particular self-personal existence, and other disregard to the demands of community interests, that allow men to see such laws broken under their very eyes without the least effort at prevention. What is the remedy? We should like to find out.

RIOT IN QUEBEC.

Quebec city has had all the glories of a civil riot. The whole fun is between the Irish and Canadienne Ship-laboring Societies. Last week they had rather a disturbed and disturbing time in the city. The Irish Society had refused to accept less than $4 a day, and would not let others work for less. A Canadienne Society was formed, consisting of several thousand members, and they in their greatest enthusiasm, determined to have a procession through the city. The Irish Society determined that their youthful opponents should not enjoy themselves, and prepared themselves with cannon, guns, pistols, clubs, stones, etc., to that end. The parties had several not over friendly meetings, result, several persons killed and many more wounded on both sides. The Mayor neglected to take proper measures for the safety of life and property, and before other magistrates could make necessary arrangements to obtain military protection, stores have been plundered, private residences defaced, and many defenseless and quiet persons injured, several of the rowdy element killed, and fearful outrages perpetrated. This riot, it is estimated, will cost the city $50,000. It has assumed the form of a war of races, and must therefore end in fearful bitterness, ready in future, to break out into bloodshed on any trifling occasion. But then that is the way some people take to amuse themselves and divert others. Quebec has long had the bad pre eminence of being the rowdiest city on the continent, and it is quite time, for the credit of the Province and the Dominion, that a stop should be put, once and for all, to the periodical ebullitions of the orimps and scalawags who combine wherever it suits them to over-ride constituted authority. No class of men can be allowed to dictate to another class as to the rate at which they shall sell their labor, and we hope, irrespective of the nationality of the contestants, that the strong arm of the law will be at once stretched out to restrain the arrogant and protect the injured.

HER HONORED AT LAST.

The Tory Premier of Canada, Sir John Macdonald, has at length presented himself before Her Majesty, and has been sworn in a member of the Queen's Privy Council for England. The result might have been expected after the rehabilitation of the 17th September, which—officially speaking—once more established him as a "grand old statesman." Once upon a time a Privy Councillor was a very dignified and powerful individual. To-day, the distinction is merely honorary, carrying with it neither salary nor duties. The Conservative party will be able to sleep now in quiet since their chieftain has been sworn in a member of the Privy Council of the United Kingdom. The Mail is jubilant, and talks a good deal of rubbish about high dignitaries, galaxy of rank, and other details of the ceremony. This is the way the "Honor" has been earned—by the surrender of San Juan Island, by the surrender of the navigation of the St. Lawrence, by abandoning our rights to the navigation of the rivers of Alaska, by abandoning our claims against the United States for Fenian raids, by the selling of the Pacific Railway Charter to Sir Hugh Allan for upwards of $365,000, and again at Washington, Sir John chose between the interest of his country and his own promotion. The Northern Railway transactions are also worthy of mention. The above will do something in the way of opening the eyes of our people to the actual value of these distinctions. Such "honors" should be shunned by all honest men as much as they are now sought after by a certain class of politicians.

RAILWAY CONNECTION NORTH

The proposal for the establishment of railway connection with Bobcaygeon, in order to secure some, at least, of the trade of that fast improving locality, is one worthy of attentive consideration by the people of Peterborough. Indeed the trade of the back country is a thing highly desirable, if not absolutely necessary to render permanent the prosperity of this town. By the use of the way already laid out to Mud Lake, the scheme is quite feasible, either independently, or in connection with the already existing line of railway; it is worth the working up by men of enterprise, such as are not a few in this community and in the Northern village, which it is proposed to make the primary terminus.

It is a pity that want of time and lack of previous consideration of the question prevented anything like a definite proposition being made at the late meeting at Oak Orchard; but perhaps as much was done there as could have been done in any case at a purely preliminary meeting. A start at least has been effected; and it will be a shame and a disgrace to the advocates of the scheme if they now suffer it to fall through by carelessness and lack of attention on their part. It is to be hoped that those to whom the business of ascertaining the views of certain parties who are interested by their very position in the proposition, will do that business thoroughly and wisely, and report as soon as possible the position taken by those they have to consult. Now that the matter has been taken up, even as a mere proposition, it should not be suffered to rest till it be carried to a desired consummation.

It is to be regretted that some of those who profess to be quite favorable to the scheme should have seen fit, unintentionally let us hope, to damp it at the start with faint praise. The EXAMINER during the whole time of its advocacy of railway connection with the back townships has never lost sight of the necessity of looking at the matter from any and every point of view, and of considering objections as well as advantages. This paper, it is well known has been, and still is, a firm supporter of the proposed through line to Ottawa; but that does not absorb our attention to the exclusion of any other railway scheme in which clear advantages to Peterborough are to be seen. We therefore feel sorry that one of the warmest advocates of the Bobcaygeon line should have seen fit to draw what may be turned an invidious comparison between it and the larger one of the Toronto & Ottawa line. Mr. Burnham must be allowed to hold what views he pleases with regard to the position Peterborough would hold in connection with an existing line of railway between here and Ottawa; but we do think, and we believe reasonably, that he was scarcely wise in urging them, when referring to another line, the success of which will certainly not be inspired by the constructive of the through line from west to east. His letter given to the Gazette on this third-the promoters of the line to Bobcaygeon; the correspondent of the Gazette, and in substance to sum up a counter-argument which can-[illegible] has no need whatever to exist. We mention the fact merely for the purpose of dissipating, as a friend to both schemes, any feeling that one must interfere in the slightest degree with the success of the other.

These difficulties will melt away in the light of further discussion; and our wish is, that the people will guard themselves against any feeling of useless rivalry or dangerous antagonism—dangerous alike to all the various schemes under consideration. They can be considered and pushed without interfering with each other, and they must be so considered and pushed if any of them is to be promptly carried out.

THE ZULU WAR.

The latest news from South Africa indicate the near approach of the complete overthrow of Cetawayo the Zulu chief. His power is broken; his influence gone, or greatly weakened. His brother has been placed on his (Cetawayo's throne) if throne it can be called, and subordinate chiefs are promising submission. Even Cetawayo—it is reported—is asking for terms of surrender, and would give himself up if his life shall be protected. Immense treasures and loss of life have been wasted in this Zulu affair. It can scarcely be termed a war, so uneven are the contending parties in means, men, resources and intelligence. The payment of the expenses of this almost, if not entirely unalled for struggle—will soon bring to the front the causes that led to undertaking it. It would appear that the present Imperial Prime Minister has a mania for interference in European and Eastern matters, and this desire may be the result of a strong impulse that as an offshoot of the Jewish nation he is destined to do something to make the name of that people notable in the annals of even English history. Or it may have been an apparent necessity in English home rule, to distract the mind of the nation from home questions to those of English arms in foreign countries.

The cause of the Zulu war is not easily understood at this distance from the scene of it. It may have originated with Cetawayo, in a desire to free himself from harrassing fears of ever expected incroachments on his territory by those white men who had control of the southern portions of the continent; or perhaps an opportunity was sought by the colonial authorities to crush the power of a dangerous blood-thirsty neighbor, such as Cetawayo must have been. The Boers of Cape Colony have been in conflict with the Zulus ever since the establishment of the Colony, it is said. But about thirty years ago they had succeeded in breaking the power of that tribe, and a treaty between the Boers and Zulus was completed, pledging Umpanda, a chief whom they had assisted in placing in power, friendship, alliance, protection and support; and Umpanda promised to govern his people wisely; to prevent injury to weak, infirm or defenceless men, women and children, and to put an end to death for witchcraft, or other senseless superstitions. At this time Cetawayo led the strength of the nation against Umpanda, defeated him and butchered over three thousand of his adherents. In 1861 troubles increased on account of the daring of this chief, but about 1872 an understanding was arrived at, and Cetawayo was recognized as chief, he, recognizing the English suzerainty, and in 1873 Cetawayo was re-throned by consent of the British authorities at Cape Colony, Natal, and of England.

Three years ago Cetawayo invaded the territory of the Boers, contrary to his engagements, and defeated them, and this led him to the false conclusion that he could subdue the English people also. Shortly after, this chief ordered the slaughter of a certain number of girls who would not wed into the regiments selected by him. Sir Henry Bulwer remonstrated, but was told in effect to mind his own business; that he (Sir H. Bulwer) might be Governor in Natal, but he (Cetawayo) was ruler in Zululand. He immediately set to work to fortify his country by building military kraals. The building of these forts and the threatening conduct of the Zulu chief led to the war, now being concluded, which more precaution or earlier action on the part of the English Government might have rendered impossible. The power of Cetawayo is now completely broken—he is a fugitive from his army, in fear of his own life, or of being given up to his enemies. Oham his brother is placed in power in his stead, and every effort made to capture Cetawayo. It is to be regretted that either a weak and vacillating policy, or one of undue interference should be the cause of such loss of treasures and of human life. And now that this fierce tribe has been subdued, we hope that sufficient measures to prevent the possibility of another Zulu war in the future will be taken.

By the failure of the Queenstown, Manufacturing Company, Niagara Falls, the town loses one of its oldest water-power industries, and one of the largest employers of labor in the district. The company has been in existence for 30 years, and has always paid its dividends regularly. It was capitalized at $100,000, and has been doing a business of about $150,000 per annum. The failure is attributed to the dull times.

Rochester Band Excursion to Peterborough.

(From the Port Hope Times.)

We are sorry to see from the following paragraph in last week's Peterboro' EXAMINER that the cause of the failure of the Rochester Band excursion to that town is very unjustly placed on Captain Sherwood, of the steamer Norseman, wherein that gentleman was not in the slightest degree to blame. However, we give the paragraph in full from the EXAMINER, and will follow it with an explanation which we are sure will be satisfactory to our esteemed contemporary :—

(Here follows the EXAMINER*'s* account of the excursion.)

We have no doubt the writer of the above only gave the story as he was told it, and in justice to Capt. Sherwood we think he should also give this explanation. It appears that arrangements had been made by the Rochester Band for an excursion to Peterboro' on the Norseman, and very favorable terms had been given them, but unfortunately they selected Thursday night as their starting time, which would land them in Port Hope in time to take the morning train for Peterboro'. Nothing was said in reference to their return,—the Band probably presuming the steamer would make her usual trip on Saturday, which would enable them to take the early morning train from Peterboro' arriving here an hour or so before the leaving time of the Norseman. But had they mentioned this to Capt. Sherwood he would have told them it would be impossible for them to do this, on account of his having an excursion advertised from some point on the other side that would make him some six hours late in arriving here, and that he would not be able to land them in Charlotte before nine o'clock on Saturday night.

On the arrival of the band on Thursday evening at Charlotte, the hour at which they would be able to get back was explained to them, and as they had an engagement on Saturday evening, after a consultation among themselves, they concluded to postpone their trip, and returned to the city. One would suppose from the EXAMINER's paragraph there had been a stormy scene between the Captain and the Band, but there was nothing further than the expression of regrets on both sides, and the Band left in as friendly a manner as they came, while the Captain exceeded in generosity anything that could have been reasonably expected from him,—offering to carry the whole Band free of charge over the lake and back again. But the excursion was a failure in numbers at all events, and we fancy the Band was only too glad to have a plausible excuse for backing out. Instead of '640,' as stated by the EXAMINER's being present to accompany the Band, only about fifteen or twenty put in an appearance, and nearly every one of them came over on the steamer. It can therefore be seen that the Band had more reasons for them not coming over than their engagement on Saturday night, for had there been anything like 600 they would, without difficulty, have been able, to make such arrangements as would have enabled them to have had another Band to take their place for their Saturday engagement, or failing in that, arrangements would have been made by Capt. Sherwood to have another steamer to take the Norseman's Saturday excursion. We think we have made it plain that Capt. Sherwood was not to blame in this matter, and we are quite sure that if the editor of the EXAMINER knew that gentleman as well as we do, the paragraph would never have been written before inquiry into the circumstances had been made, for all the officials of the steamer, from the Captain down, are all times courteous and obliging, and no contract by which the steamer could be fairly bound would be deviated from in the slightest particular. The fact is, we believe, the failure in numbers was the particular reason for the 54th Band not carrying out their arrangements. As for the latter part of the paragraph, in which it is stated that "instead of depending on the Norseman, another boat will be chartered" as a future day when new arrangements are made by this band for their excursion, we feel quite sure that our contemporary will find his statement incorrect, and that the party will patronize no other steamer.

We willingly give place to the above from this weeks Port Hope Times, and regret that we should have unjustly attached the blame to Capt. Sherwood, a gentleman who enjoys the reputation of being extremely courteous and obliging to all those with whom he may come in contact, and who is highly esteemed by all who are acquainted with him. The people of Peterboro' were anxious that the Rochester excursionists should be made welcome, and arrangements to that effect had been made, and no little dissatisfaction was expressed on the arrival of the train with the intelligence as given in our report—the only intelligence received by the people of Peterborough, up to the receipt of the above explanation, which we feel sure will be accepted as satisfactory by the public, and relieve the management of the Norseman from any blame that our remarks may have attached to them. We therefore heartily make the amende, and wish the Norseman and Capt. Sherwood continued prosperity.—[Ed. EXAMINER.]

SUGGESTIVE REMARKS.

A farewell supper was given Mr. Blue, of the Journal, prior to his removal from St. Thomas, to take a position on the Globe. In his reply to a toast occure the following remarks, which explain the position of a journalist, and also the too-common appreciation of his efforts. There is also a moral contained in the speech which should be applied :—

The journalist's avocation puts idleness out of the question, for, like the horse on the treadmill, his work must go on all the same whether he wills it or not. It is an unresting round of toil and endeavor. The newspaper-reading public never say 'enough.' The paper must come out with the regularity of the day, and the public criticism is just as unfailing in its regularity. There are so many matters which must be dealt with, and there is so little time given for consideration, that to me the greatest wonder is that the people are so well pleased with what they get and that so few offences are given. The journalists position is one of great responsibility and calls for quick and sober judgement. The man or the society whose feelings are hurt is slow to forgive, for now, as of old, it is impossible but that offences will come. I have noticed that while men take a whole column spoken in their favor as a thing of course, one sentence spoken against them makes them your enemy for life, no matter how deserving that sentence may be. Alexander Pope's greatest encouragement and comfort to proceed was, to find men who had no shame, and no fear of saything else, touched by his satires. To attack vices in the abstract, he said, may be safe fighting, but it is fighting with shadows. So the journalist finds that to be of service in his profession, to curb moral or political wrong-doing and to put a mask on rascality of every kind, he must touch persons, and he must strike them where they live. He must be a public censor as well as a public educator, and wisely fulfilling these functions is rounding off the sphere of his duties. And here I would like to say a word about our local journals. I am afraid that there are very few of them in Ontario who get the support and encouragement that they merit. Mile the local paper that upholds your local interests, that advances your local business, that fights the political battles of your county. It is week after week, bringing your town into notice, and every sign of prosperity is chronicled as soon as it appears. What, then, would [illegible] do without it? For of its prosperous state both offices and readers have a right to be proud, and that can be produced only by the [illegible] of a good paper. Still A Mystery.

The Body of A. T. Stewart Undiscovered —The Snatchers in Montreal.

New York, Aug. 13.—The Herald devotes four columns to recent developments in the Stewart grave robbery. It says in January a Nassau street lawyer received a letter from Montreal, signed "Roman," enclosing a retainer $100, asking him to take charge of negotiations with Hilton for the return of the body, which was offered for a quarter of a million. He also received by express, as an evidence of good faith of the writer, the silver knobs and parts of the handle of Stewart's coffin, and the coffin plate. The lawyer communicated the facts to the police, but assured Hilton and Mrs. Stewart that the only way the body could be recovered was by the payment of the quarter of a million demanded. Hilton refuses to negotiate, and threatens the arrest of the negotiating party.

THE SNATCHERS IN MONTREAL.

Montreal, Aug. 14—The theory advanced that the persons who robbed the grave of the New York millionaire are in Montreal, is now a new one. In the month of January last there were three men registered at the Albion Hotel. There was nothing about them that attracted particular attention at the time, but from the fact that came into the possession of a gentleman these three men were strongly suspected of being implicated in the grave robbery. These facts were communicated to a local journalist, and he also worked upon the clue, at the same time communicating his suspicions to one of the detectives. Time were on, but nothing was found that could be taken as positive proof and consequently no arrests were made. This time would coincide with the month that negotiations could have been opened with the lawyer in New York. Another fact that seems to help to prove that the robbers were in this city in the latter part of January. It is not positively known that men complete at the post office during the month of spring for letters directed to this person. "Roman," but it is more than probable such letters were asked for, and the fact that the clerks in the office may distinctly remember a man calling for letters directed as stated on Saturday last.

Ontario Teachers' Association.

Able Lecture on Physical Education by Mr. James Coyle Brown.

The Ontario Teachers' Association reassembled in the theatre of the Normal School on Thursday afternoon. The President, Dr. McClellan, took the chair at two o'clock, when the Recording Secretary read the last session's minutes, which were confirmed.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION.

Inspector J. Coyle Brown, of Peterborough, read a paper on the above subject. In the outset the writer referred in facetious terms to certain classes of men who overran the country, viz :—Sewing machine men, lightning rod agents, apple-tree agents, pedagogues, politicians, professional men, lawyers, doctors, clergymen, saloon-keepers, drummers, etc. These different classes of men are all useful in their way—some of them exceedingly so—but when by undue multiplication they threaten the well-being of society it is high time for society to look around, ascertain the cause of the undue multiplication of these classes, and, if possible, remove it. Why, the writer asked, are these classes increasing so fast? Why are so many leaving the fields of manual labour and entering those of mental labour or of no useful labour at all? Because physical education is neglected. Sports such as cricket, football, lacrosse, and numerous other kinds of athletic games, are much encouraged and develop the physical powers. But they scarcely reach the many; and a knowledge of no one of them, or of all of them combined, can be said to constitute physical education. A knowledge of them is no more physical education than a knowledge of whist, chess, etc., is mental education. Besides, if a true account could be made out of the effects of these, in which account the beneficial results could be placed on one side and the injurious on the other, it appears uncertain to the writer on which side the balance would be. The kind of physical education that is wanted is four or five hours daily labor from say the age of twelve to the age of twenty-one—labour at the workbench, at the anvil, in the garden, on the farm—labour that will lighten the burdens of parents and add to the wealth of the country. Why is it that so little attention is paid to physical education? Because intellectual education is so carried on as to render physical education impracticable. Our system as conducted is calculated to make book-worms rather than active men and women; to predispose to sedentary pursuits rather than to out-door ones. And how can this state of things be avoided? The writer, although confessing himself to be sadly deficient for the task, could make a few suggestions. A national system of education should prepare for all avocations, and unfit for none. Physical education is desirable for all and indispensable for most. The most important part of physical education cannot be given in schools. Schools should therefore be so conducted as to afford time and opportunity for physical education elsewhere. Classes should be limited to thirty pupils, who should be divided into two sections —one attending school in the forenoon, the other in the afternoon. The advantages would be :—(1) Less school accommodation would be required; (2) there would be more teaching and less keeping order, more work and less worry; (3) there would be more bodily activity and greater progress in learning. Elementary departments of many schools, as conducted at present, are calculated to make blockheads rather than scholars. Children attend them for several years, not making the progress that ought to be made in one. They become listless and indifferent; sluggish in both mind and body. As to the number of teachers under the system proposed, the writer was of opinion that it would not be increased, because the pupils would pass through the different grades much more rapidly than they now do. Country schools should be kept open during the summer half of the year, from eight until eleven for the large pupils, and from two until five for the smaller. The advantages would be :—(a) a portion of each day would be devoted to study, and another portion to work on the farm or in the house; (b) each child would have a warm dinner at home with the family, instead of a cold lunch to bolt down, as at present; (c) the smaller ones would have secured to them their fair share of the teacher's time and attention; (d) the difficulty of governing would be very much lessened, only half the pupils would be under the teacher at a time; (e) the intervals between recitations being shorter, there would be greater mental activity; (f) the teacher having his dinner at his leisure, and having considerable rest thereafter, would be better able to do justice to his pupils; (g) much of the misconduct that prevails during the noon hour would be avoided; (h) the period for continuous attendance at public schools would be lengthened, and the intelligence of country people would be materially increased; (i) continuous labour in the field from daylight till dark on long summer days would not drive so many country boys into town in the often vain hopes of finding an easier and more desirable way of making a living. As to high schools they should be open from 8 to 11.30. The course of study would be somewhat changed. Great attention should be paid to English; comparatively little attention to other languages except so far as to throw light on the mother tongue. Roman History should occupy a [illegible] place. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Brown for his paper, to which he replied in a few words, and it was announced to be followed [illegible] at 8 o'clock in the evening.

I. C. O. F.—Great interest had been aroused by the circulation some months ago amongst the various Lodges of a circular sent by the London Lodges, suggesting a plan whereby for the re-enabling of the present system of the payment of widows and orphans' dues. This was opposed by the representatives to be the subject of much discussion at the meeting of the Grand Lodge. The motion was read and ruled out of order by the Grand Master, and thus for a time the scheme has been put an end to.

G. W. R.'s and T. R.'s Pic-Nics.—The unanimous and general decision of Every Week Subscribers of the Orange Young Britons and True Blues of this town took place on Monday last. About one hundred and fifty left in the wharf by the "Golden Eye," and after passing through the locks, a move was attended for dancing, which appeared to be the centre of attraction on the down and up trip. Arriving at Harwood at 10.30 o'clock, an enjoyable time was spent till 4.30 o'clock, when the party left for home, arriving at Peterboro' at about 10.30 o'clock. At Mrl Wild they were joined by a number from Port Hope, who crossed from Newcastle in the "Foley."

Worth your Money Finding.—One not in the habit of writing business letters can hardly realize the annoyance they give by writing the wrong address. A letter may be misdirected at, or so that in answering, the name has to be copied as near as possible and the rest left to the postmaster. We will go further and say that upon those who write for the press to write plainly the names not only of persons but of places also. In most cases a correction, wherever badly written can be deciphered by considering in relation to the other words in the sentence, but when the name of a place which the compositor and proof-reader can only make what they suppose to be, without being certain whether they are right or wrong. If they should be spelled incorrectly, where fault is it except the writers!

S. Spangenburg, Referee.

As soon as the game opened it was quite evident that although the Belleville Club have been organized for some years, and are ranked among the "crack" clubs of the Province, having beaten the Kingston, Napanee and Brownsville Clubs, each in three straight games, this was their first visit to Peterboro', and they were totally unacquainted with the style of play of their opponents. The Peterboro' goal, when, in the midst of a general scuffle, the ball was sent through the lines by Coleman. Peterboro' then rushed with the success of the two first games became perhaps a little too confident and thus lost the third. How they were determined to do their best. Belleville on the other hand had gained fresh spirits by their success, and the spectators were being worked up to fever heat when the fourth game was called. The playing in this, however lasted but about five minutes. A ball was thrown by one of the Belleville team in the vicinity of the Peterborough goal and was claimed by the Belleville men as "game." This claim was supported by their umpire and disputed by the umpire of the Peterborough team. The referee was accordingly called in, and not being able to decide from the evidence, suggested "another try" to decide it. This proposition was very properly rejected by the Peterborough umpire, when the referee said if he could not give a decision he would give it in favor of Belleville. This decision was so unsatisfactory that several of the Peterborough men refused to play any longer, but after consultation decided to play the match out, at the same time strongly protesting against the decision of the referee. The fifth game lasted but three minutes when a splendid home shot from Way sent the ball through the Peterborough goal, thus giving the three last games to Belleville. The playing throughout the whole match was in the best spirit, and was void of that rough-ness which so often characterizes the playing of some clubs. It is but just to state that the Peterborough team were pleased at considerable disadvantage, the ground being extremely rough and hard to play upon, while on the other hand the Belleville team obtained the loan of two of their best men, who were over at the city. With the exception of the fourth or "referee's game," as an enthusiastic Peterborough-ite termed it, the best of feeling existed, and the visitors were given for both clubs After returning to the Club rooms, the visitors were conveyed to the station in time to take the afternoon train. Quite a number of the boys' remained over till next morning to enjoy the luxuries of their brethren of the "styx," which were bestowed lavishly. It is expected the return match will be played in this town in the course of two or three weeks, when our home team feel confident they can win back their laurels.

An Important Geological Find.

Geology has shown us that intense excavations are constant revolutions in the earth's crust, and that the mountains of the Alps and other ranges are the result of the upheaval of the earth's crust. Peterboro' has been the scene of a similar convulsion, and the result is a deep gorge in the Ashburnham hill, from the bottom valley which is known as the Otonabee river. The upheaval has left a large number of fossils on the surface, and the Rev. Mr. Scadding, who has been spending a few days in the city, has been examining the specimens, and has discovered a number of fossils which are of great interest to the geologist. Among the specimens found are a number of fossil fish, which are of a species not found in the Province, and which are of great interest to the geologist. Our citizens should visit the scene of the excavation, and secure a few specimens of the fossils, which are to be found in great numbers. The Rev. Mr. Scadding will leave the city on Monday next, and will be pleased to receive any specimens which may be found. Those who have specimens to dispose of will find a ready purchaser in the reverend gentleman.

A Fiendish Marvel.—Detroit is now rejoicing in the performance of a female who is certainly a physical marvel. Her forte is pedar trianism. Having completed a calf inspired task of walking a quarter of a mile in every quarter of an hour for a week or so, she took a rest of some twelve hours and then began and is fulfilling a contract for walking three hundred quarters of a mile—a quarter to be made in every period of twelve minutes. Madame Andersen is the name of this woman. We are not going to point out the fleshiness of her pronouncing. People flock in crowds to see her and pay twenty-five cents every time they enter the hall. Her husband sits quietly by smoking a cigar or he rounds the corners, and the exhibition gives him at all events a very easy living. So long as the woman is foolish enough to do that sort of thing, and the man is mean enough to allow her, it is not likely that anything we could say would have much effect on them.

The Custom Question.—The Chemists' Convention at Toronto having passed a resolution condemning the practice of chemists giving away patent medicines, a correspondent of the exchange remarks : "It seems to be considered by doctors a part of their duty to 'recommend' either verbally, or in written or printed words the their prescription when some druggist who will make up the medicines. It is notorious that the druggists so recommended receive the doctor's prescription at a reduced price upon the score of the prescription. There is, consequently a direct temptation to the medical man to prescribe expensive instead of simple medicines. As long as this miserable custom lasts, the public, and that portion of it too, which is least able to pay, will be mulcted in a manner which is the more contemptible, because it is perpetrated upon the sick, and often the dying. We have yet to learn that the Convention made any motion to get over the difficulty. We will go further and say that upon those who write for the press to write plainly the names not only of persons but of places also. In most cases a correction, wherever badly written can be deciphered by considering in relation to the other words in the sentence, but when the name of a place which the compositor and proof-reader can only make what they suppose to be, without being certain whether they are right or wrong. THE DOMINION REGATTA.

Peterborough Victorious in the Four-Oared Race!

Since the London regatta, speculation has been rife as to the chances of success should the Peterborough crew be able to compete in the International race at Burlington. It was feared that W. F. Shaw Scott, who had been removed to the Ontario Bank, Ottawa, would not be able to attend, and that the crew would not consent to row with a substitute. The appearance of Mr. Scott at the Regatta, however, set all doubts at rest, and the crew were determined to do their best. The statement in Monday's Globe that the Argonaut crew, having to contend with the Peterborough crew, had withdrawn from the race, gave strength to the assertions that the decision of the referee in the London race had been against two will not say willfully set, and accordingly the Argonaut crew, on the morning of the race, were on the tug of contestant till the steamship of the race, were on Monday evening that Paddyborough had won by a head. The report of the race in the Toronto daily papers is said by an eye-witness from the tug were to be entirely one-sided. The same authority says that the water was in fine condition and that there was no wind. That a member of the Toronto crew on landing ashore remarked that he was not surprised at the appearance of the Peterborough crew, although claiming a little trouble through the work of the boat. He also says there, who would then be utilized and with the wooden country hack of an and cheap transportation, manufactories would soon spring up, and prosperity be the lot of all.

The Peterborough crew on reaching the wharf were met by Mr. W. H. Moncrieff, on behalf of the Peterborough Rowing Club, and escorted to the Rowing Club rooms, where a well laid out table awaited them. Mr. Moncrieff, in a few well chosen remarks, congratulated the crew on their victory, complimenting by moving the following resolution, seconded by Mayor Leady :-

That the congratulations of the Peterborough Rowing Club are due and are hereby cordially tendered to the four members of the Club who successfully competed for the cup in the International amateur race on the Burnie Regatta ; that the Club rejoices with the Dominion with feelings of pride and pleasure the gentlemanly conduct as well as the indomitable pluck displayed by the Crew at the Lachine as well as the Barrie Regatta.

His Worship the Mayor then came forward and read the following address :-

THE MAYOR'S ADDRESS.

To Mr. A. J. Belcher and the other members of the Peterborough Crew :-

GENTLEMEN,—On behalf of the citizens of Peterborough I welcome you back to your homes and at the same time beg to tender you our congratulations on the victory you have won in the race at Barrie.

Knowing, as we do, the short practice you have had and the strong crews you have had to compete with, we all the more appreciate the noble work you have done, and when I say that Peterborough feels proud of her crew, I know that I speak the sentiments of our citizens without any exception.

I hope this is only the beginning of many laurels yet to be won by you, and that when you leave home for another pull you will return with as good a record as you have this day brought home with you, and rest assured that in your future efforts you will have the hearty sympathy of all your fellow citizens, who I trust will hereby express their appreciation towards you in a manner that can alone make arrangements for.

Wishing you one and all health and strength for many another pull with the oar.

I am, yours, &c.,
JOHN J. LUNDY, Mayor.

Peterborough, 19th August, 1879.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

MR. BELCHER, stroke of the crew, then responded thanks for the many congratulations tendered them, and hoped in the future they would be able to retain the honors they had won and secure many more.

MESSRS. G. C. ROGERS and R. R. ROGERS, also returned thanks.

MR. SHAW, who as soon as the race was over, had to return to his duties at Oshawa, was the recipient of three hearty cheers.

MR. E. B. EDWARDS, Captain of the Club, and Mr. A. D. HUNTINGTON, Sec'y-Treas., returned thanks on behalf of the Club for the reception of the evening, after which the meeting broke up with cheers for the Queen, the Crew, the Band and the Pioneer.

LAKEFIELD.

(From our own Correspondent.)

—John Hall, Esq., shipped 1000 barrels of flour to Montreal last week.

—Only one death occurred in Lakefield during the past half year, and that was from old age.

—The bridge is now being repaired, and is slated from 10 a.m. until 1 p.m. each day, except for foot passengers.

—The school board at an informal meeting decided to close the school until Sept. 2nd. So the children are happy over the unlooked for addition to their holidays and believe in the old adage, "An ill wind that blows nobody good."

—A Quebec company which purchased the lithographic quarry on the "Wood" farm in Harvey, have sent Mr. Richardson of this place with a number of men to examine it and see if the quantity and quality will pay to work it on a large scale.

—One of our councillors who is the owner of a little dog about 3 or 4 pounds weight, is quite disgusted to learn that it has been engaged in killing chickens and has been most cruelly killed by some of the Toronto daily papers is said by an eye-witness from the tug were to be entirely one-sided. The same authority says that the water was in fine condition and that there was no wind. That a member of the Toronto crew on landing ashore remarked that he was not surprised at the appearance of the Peterborough crew, although claiming a little trouble through the work of the boat. He also says there, who would then be utilized and with the wooden country hack of an and cheap transportation, manufactories would soon spring up, and prosperity be the lot of all.

NORWOOD.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Pat, sounds, then art no thy lane,
Is growing weeds for to thrive ?
For last fall cabbages o' mine are Gone off crying,
An' isn't no wonder I feel grief and pain
In my heart and joy.

So sang the peasant bard ; and so said the assembly at Hastings R. R. station last Thursday. My pen almost weeps as I attempt to describe the incidents in question. Fled, Mr. Editor, the arrival of a telegram announcing a visit from the Grand Junction Railway magnates to Hastings, produced a flutter of joyous excitement, and forthwith all the municipal councils that might have some interest in the Railroad, were summoned to assist the civic fathers of Hastings in celebrating the occasion in a befitting manner. The Reeve of Asphodel, our good friend Rourke, flew through the township north, south, east, and west, gathering the members of his Wittenagemote together ; the Reeve of Percy I suppose, did like service in his township. And now at an early hour these three august bodies assemble on the railway platform. Of course the Hastings council was master of ceremonies for the day. They all wait. The tedious hours drag their weary length along. The hotel keepers make their fortunes. Cream a penn'orth of ice-cream a penn'orth. Two o'clock arrives. Twenty-five coats only, not but some would willingly have staked their thirds, but they knew that their drinking abilities would be put to the utmost test when the Belleville visitors arrived; so in order that justice might be done to the good things which would be brought out for the strangers as well as to convey an idea of their convivial appreciation, (I will keep sober.) The longest night has an end, and so has the longest day ; the whistle from the locomotive at last relieves suffering humanity. The final arrangements are made—large-bodied men with white vests to the front—Reeves and clerks ready with addresses to the fore—to the chagrin of all, the Mazeppa engine driver stops the train on the gravel road some quarter of a mile east of the depot, lets off the scalding, who make a bee-line for the taverns, and then runs the empty car up to the station. Trowild take a Hogarth to depict those fiends. There is no time to be lost, however, one drink at least will be over before they can get in and if they don't hurry there may be two, so off they scamper pell mell, helter-skelter.—Here let me drop the curtain.

Some scar grape individual in the Star seems to think I am not friendly to Hastings, he is entirely mistaken. I rejoice in their prosperity. I am only too glad to see their merchants and their princes coming to Norwood to buy of our cheap and valuable goods. I say come one come all, and we'll receive you with open arms. Peters thinks, however, that coming to Norwood to buy goods is a Fool act and looks very much like Sharp practice. If Mr. Peters would have others stop buying from our Norwood merchants let him not set the example.

Our excursionists, Messrs Roxburgh, Waters, Fraser and their families have returned from Idyl Wild. They report having an immense time during the week they have been away, and that there is a large number of tents on the Wild. There is room for all parts and yet not too crowded.

Sir John Macdonald Sworn in as Privy Councillor.

The Mail of Friday last contains the following cablegram from London:—

LONDON, Aug. 14.—This afternoon Right Hon. Sir John Macdonald, the Premier of Canada, was summoned to Osborne House and sworn in as a member of the Queen's Privy Council. Sir John was appointed member of the Privy Council in July, 1872. The right hon. gentleman was introduced to her Majesty and leading members of the Government who were in attendance, by Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, Secretary of State for the Colonies, and after the ceremony he had a long interview with the Queen, and subsequently dined at Osborne House with her Majesty.

Affairs in Zululand.

A despatch received by the Daily News from Madeira gives an account of the meeting of Sir Garnet Wolseley with the Zulu chiefs. The despatch says that result cannot be altogether satisfactory to Sir Garnet, as immediately after its close Col. Clarke's brigade was ordered to move forward to Entonganga, and to be reinforced immediately by the whole of the Eightieth Regiment and two Gatling guns. Another despatch transmitted from Madeira states that Cetewayo, through Mr. Osborn, the consul, and reaching Lisa by ship, is dated Port Dunford, July 23rd. It is stated that Cetewayo on that day made another effort to ascertain from Sir Garnet Wolseley upon what terms his surrender would be accepted, and what degree of liberty and independence in the future would be granted him. It is said, continues the despatch, that Cetewayo's warriors have completely deserted him, and that further fighting is impossible unless the terms offered are so harsh as to compel Cetewayo to reject them and drive him into the bush, from which he may for some time continue a desultory guerilla warfare.

CATARRH.

Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Cures Catarrh.

T. J. B. HARDING, Esq., BROCKVILLE, ONT.

DEAR SIR,—It is now two years since your "Constitutional Catarrh Remedy" was introduced to me, and I have used the long to it for all this time, with most permanent benefit during this, my duty, to you, as to find the upper cities which I have been so much good to be true.

I was afflicted in my head for years before I commenced it to be Catarrh, in reading in your Circular I see my case doubled in many particulars. The incessant "hawking" from the head had become very disagreeable, and a constant sensation often prevented me from front long. I would find this disagreeable and be astonished to sit up in the bed, My health and spirits were seriously affected. When your Agent came to Walkerton in August 1877, I scanned three bottles. Before I had used a quarter of the contents of one bottle I found decided relief, and when I had used two bottles and a third, I felt talking it, feeling quite cured of that ailment, and have not used any since until of late I have taken some for a cold in my head.

A sense of duty to sufferers from that loathsome disease, Catarrh, prompts me to send you the Certificate, unsolicited, with leave to make what use of it you may see proper.

Our Passenger.

It was a lovely autumn afternoon toward the close of September, when we weighed anchor and sailed out of the River Mersey, bound for Melbourne. We had a good ship—Janet's Pride—loaded with miscellaneous articles. On board were fourteen passengers, and, take them all in all, a pleasanter lot I never steered across the stormy sea.

There were three old gentlemen, who were going out to share their fortunes, come what might, and which, poor old souls, they seemed to think fashioned in the brightest colors, long before the English Channel was out of sight.

Then there was a solitary old gentleman, who judging from the tone of his conversation, was seeking the new world for the ostensible purpose of finding fault with it.

There were two young married couples, all full of hope and activity, bent upon making a new home far away from their native land.

There was also a very jolly elderly brother and sister, neither of whom had ever entered into the bonds of matrimony, but instead had stuck to each other through life.

There were three old Australian settlers, who had been over to have a peep at the old country, and who were now returning to the land which to them, through long communion, had become the dearest of all others, "home, sweet home!"

Lastly, though not least, there was a solitary passenger, who soon became the pet of all on board. He was a man of about twenty-eight years of age, possessing a very clear complexion, a very handsome long, flowing beard, and a very silky mustache.

His name was Reginald Moore. His given reason for taking this sea voyage was the delicate state of his health. There was not the least doubt that the poor fellow's chest was affected, for his voice, though charmingly sweet, was one of the weakest I ever remember hearing; and it had a certain hollowness associated with that terrible disease commonly termed consumption. He always wore a thick muffler round his neck to protect his throat and chest.

In all my experience—and it has been a pretty wide one—I never knew any one to win so many friends, and such undivided esteem, in so short a time, as Reginald Moore. There was not, I believe, a sailor on board who did not entertain the warmest possible liking for him.

As for the passengers, they never seemed so happy as when listening to his amusing anecdotes, of which he seemed to possess an inexhaustible store. And this delicate young English paragon of passengers had made this conquest over all our hearts before we had been three weeks at sea.

He was, too, such a clever fellow with his hands. He could cut and shape you anything out of a piece of wood, from an oyster to an elephant, and, at making models of ships, he never met his equal. He was, besides, such a kind and considerate fellow towards his fellow-passengers.

When the three elderly gentlemen who imagined their fortunes made, were afflicted with sea-sickness, he was the first to come forward and help them about while they slowly recovered. He would insist upon their taking his arm, weak as he was himself, and he would lead them about on deck with a firmness that spoke volumes in favor of his "sea legs."

I do not remember any voyage ever passing so quickly as the one when the pleasant passenger was on board. I could, with infinite pleasure, make a long pause at this junction in the thread of my story, to dwell upon the pleasant memories I still retain of Reginald Moore.

We were within a week's sail of Melbourne, Reginald Moore had all but completed a model of the Janet's Pride, which he proposed presenting to me the night before we landed.

Now, he worked at this model principally on deck, and, strangely enough, he had chosen for a work-table the top of one of the empty water casks that stood on deck, abaft and under shelter of the bulwarks.

While he worked through the day you were sure to see him surrounded by some of the passengers or sailors. The amount of industry displayed was truly wonderful for he was invariably at work in the early morning, long before any of the other passengers dreamed of turning out of their cosy berths.

As I have already said, we were but six days sail from Melbourne. For the first time in our experience of him the pleasant passenger appeared at the dinner table with a solemn, downcast expression of the face and a silent tongue. Before dinner was over I noted him what terrible his mind and caused this unhappy change in his wonted cheerful manner.

At first he tried to explain my question by saying it "was nothing to speak of," but I pressed him persistently until I won from him an explanation.

"Perhaps, after all," he said, "it is only fair that I should explain matters. The fact of the matter is my watch has been stolen."

"Stolen," we exclaimed in a breath.

"Undoubtedly," he answered, "but I pray you, Captain"—here he turned to me—"I pray you do not say one word about it. The only thing that renders the loss of consequence to me is the fact that it once belonged to my poor mother. On that account alone I would not have lost it for any amount of money. However, it cannot be helped, and therefore it is useless to cry over spilt milk, as the old adage has it. My only request is: the matter is, my dear Captain, that you will leave the matter entirely in my hands, and I think it is very probable that I may recover it. This request I am sure you will oblige me by granting."

"Certainly, my dear sir," I replied; "but—"

"Exactly," he interrupted, with one of his pleasant smiles, "you would like to take the matter in hand and investigate it to the utmost of your power; I know that, my dear Captain, full well; but I can trust you to keep your promise, and leave the case entirely in my hands."

How could I deny him his request?

You will readily imagine what consternation this event gave rise to among the other passengers. The three old gentlemen instantly proceeded to explain that they possessed jewellery to the value of at least £300, which they usually kept locked up in a brown leather writing case; but fortunately at the present time the lock was out of order.

Reginald Moore suggested a safer deposit for their valuables.

The young married couples announced the fact of their owning at least £250 worth of jewellery, and they, too, consulted Mr. Moore as to the safest plan for securing it.

The kind-hearted brother and sister had, it appeared, more valuables in the way of jewellery than any on board since £1,500 had never purchased what they possessed.

The whole of that evening was occupied in speculating as to the probable perpetrator of the theft, and in condoling with Reginald Moore on his great loss.

Every one turned in that night in an uneasy state of mind, and it was with astonishment that they found themselves in the morning, still in full possession of their worldly goods. This improved condition of affairs seemed to re-assure our passengers, who at once began to look cheerful and at ease.

Reginald Moore's pleasant face wore its wonted smile, and, as heretofore, he enlivened and charmed us with his vivacity and anecdote. All day through he worked on the model of the Janet's Pride, still using the top of the empty water cask for a work-table.

That night we retired to rest with minds far more at ease than the previous one. Alas! what a sense of anger and distress came with the morning. Every passenger on board possessing jewellery had been robbed during the night.

The three old gentlemen, the young married couple, and the kind hearted brother and sister, found themselves minus every article of jewellery that they had possessed. Even the grumbling old gentleman had lost his gold snuff box.

There was no keeping matters quiet this time. The thief must be found and brought to justice. What was the wisest method of procedure? What would Mr. Moore suggest?

"I would suggest, though most reluctantly," said Mr. Moore, "that every sailor and every sailor's luggage be carefully searched."

To this proposition we unanimously agreed.

"This," he continued, "must be most humiliating to the feeling of your crew, Captain, and, therefore, in common fairness to them, as our fellow-men, let me also suggest that every passenger and every passenger's luggage be also thoroughly searched."

A little hesitation on the part of one or two of the passengers was demonstrated before acceding to this last proposal, but our pleasant passenger soon contrived to bring those who at first demurred to his side of thinking.

"Of course," he said, "there is not a passenger on board who is not above suspicion, yet, in justice to the feelings of the crew, it is, in my humble opinion, the least we can do."

This delicacy of feeling and this thoughtfulness on the part of Reginald Moore rendered him, if possible, more admirable and praiseworthy in our eyes than ever.

Many of the crew objected strongly to this mode of proceedure, but all were compelled to submit. The old boatswain was furious with indignation and vowed that if it cost him his life he would trace the thief who caused him to be searched like a common pickpocket. Even the pleasant passenger failed to soothe his sense of injury.

Well, a thorough search was made by myself, in company with the kind-hearted old gentleman and his sister. Every one's traps were ransacked from top to bottom without success.

Further search was useless. What was to be done?

That night, all having been made snug, and the passengers having turned in, none of them as you may imagine, in very fine spirits, I went on deck, it being what we call at sea, 'the Captain's watch.'

I turned in about four o'clock a.m., the second officer then coming on duty. My cabin was amidships and on deck, and from a window therein I could command a view of the afterdeck of the ship.

Somehow or other I could not rest one minute; so dressing myself, I determined upon sitting up and smoking. I drew aside the blind of the window I have mentioned and looked out.

It was just the gray light of early morning and there was a stiffish breeze blowing. To my surprise, I beheld Reginald Moore on the deck.

I was about to open my cabin door and invite him to join me in my costlessness, when the peculiar nature of his proceedings riveted my attention. He looked around on all sides, as if afraid of attracting observation.

Then, suddenly, as if assured the coast was clear, he made rapidly towards the empty water cask, on which he was accustomed to manufacture his model of the Janet's Pride. Once more glancing cautiously about him, he then applied his hand to the top of the cask, and with a rapid movement lifted half of the top bodily off.

My astonishment and my excitement were intense. Another hasty glance round, and he plunged his hand down into the cask, then quickly withdrew it, holding in his grasp a small bag, which he rapidly concealed in the breast of his coat.

Again he took a hasty survey, and was about to make another dive into this strange receptacle for hidden goods when he suddenly withdrew, having with astonishing rapidity, replaced the head of the cask. In another moment the cause of this alarm was made apparent as a couple of sailors passed him on their way to relieve the man at the wheel.

When all was again quiet for an instant he seemed determined to at once return to the cask and no doubt withdraw something more that the interruption had prevented him withdrawing in the first instance. But suddenly changing his mind, he went down the steps that led from the deck to the saloon and sleeping cabin.

Scarcely had he disappeared when another figure, stealthily crossing the deck, met my anxious observation. It was the boatswain.

I saw him glance towards the stolen down which Reginald Moore had taken his departure. He then made direct for the water cask. It was now obvious to me that the old boatswain had been watching the pleasant passenger.

Just as he reached the water cask a heavy groan was struck the ship to windward, accompanied by the hailing to hold on by the upper main topsail by the lee, and immediately as the same [illegible] Reginald Moore appeared on the top [illegible] or forgot this object.

The instant the ship was steadied herself the boatswain commenced his examination of the water cask. For a moment only Moore stood looking at him with as cold an expression on his face as I ever beheld.

With one bound he was upon the boatswain before he could turn to protect himself. I waited no longer, but flung open the door of my cabin in an instant, and in another I was to the rescue, and in a few moments we had our pleasant passenger in irons.

So, you see, he was the thief, after all, hiding his knavery under the pleasantest exterior I ever knew a man to possess. The manner in which he had manufactured the top of that water cask, was the most finished and ingenious piece of carpentry I have ever beheld.

In the interior of thwside of the cask he had driven several nails, about two feet from the top, on which he had suspended, in wash-leather bags the jewellery he had stolen.

You may easily imagine the surprise evinced by our passengers on discovering that the thief was the man for whom each and every one entertained such regard and even affection.

At the expiration of three days from the date of the pleasant passengers detection we landed in Melbourne, where duty compelled me to hand him over to the police; but as no one cared to remain in that town for the purpose of prosecuting him, he was summarily dealt with. The presiding Magistrate sentenced him to six months' imprisonment with hard labor.

Creameries With Milk Set At Home.

The creamery plan of making butter, which is coming into use in western Ontario has been extensively adopted in the States. A new idea in this connection has been started and has worked satisfactorily this season. It is simply the collection of the cream instead of the milk, the latter being set at home in the most improved method. An agricultural correspondent travelling in Iowa writes: "Creameries are being established of a new style, and run on the plan of collecting the cream, and are very favorably received. We saw one working where the cream from about 400 cows was collected, at Emmetsburgh, another is working on a small scale at Algona; another at Spencer, where there is also a regular creamery. This will also collect the cream. There is talk of starting next spring, perhaps half a dozen of these butter factories in this district. The facilities are simply immense—free range for stock all summer on land upon which Eastern speculators pay the taxes; corn without end at 12 to 15 cents per bushel, on which to feed the cows in the winter; and hay in stack, at $1 per ton. The National Live Stock Journal of Chicago says this plan seems to be the plan of the future. The difficulties of getting milk from any distance in proper condition for raising the cream are almost insurmountable; whilst on this plan the milk is set at home, and the cream taken before any deterioration can take place, and this can be transported many miles without taking injury. It will be very easy to refrigerate the cream, and to handle it in all respects on the most approved plan. This plan when properly worked out in all its details seems likely to revolutionize butter making, by diverting all the milk or cream from private dairies, and concentrating it in large establishments, which can always make a uniform article. And when we attain a proper butter package which shall effectually exclude the air, and enable us to transport butter to long distances, retaining all its fine flavor, we believe there will be no lack of a market. We can make as fine butter as any country in the world; all we lack is a package that shall enable us to carry this to our customers in as fine condition as when it leaves our creameries." What do our farmers say about giving this method a trial.

Salaries of Municipal Clerks.

(From the Whitby Chronicle.)

Considering the amount of work they have to do, the importance of their office the degree of intelligence required to the efficient performance of the duties, and the large amount of responsibility entailed upon them, municipal clerks are about the worst paid class in the whole community. Constant changes and amendments of the municipal law adds immensely to their work, which goes on increasing from year to year. Indeed no session of Legislature is allowed to pass without alterations of some kind being made imposing in one way or another additional duties upon the municipal clerks, with the addition of heavy penalties for non-compliance or neglect in making returns, &c. Our legislators never seem to consider the position of the clerk. Appointed at a small salary when the duties were comparatively light, he accepts the position, believing that he can attend to it without withdrawing him from his other avocations. With the yearly increase of his duties, however, he finds all his time taken up—the proper discharge of the business of the office requiring his almost undivided attention. The salary remains the same. Or, if increased a trifle, it is with that grudging and reluctance characteristic of municipal corporations. It is seldom raised willingly, and never to a figure that would be anything like adequate remuneration for the services rendered.

An Outrage Completed.

(From the Toronto Globe.)

The names of the new inspectors of weight and measures have at length been published and as was feared, the old officials have in every instance been dismissed to make way for supporters of the party now in power at Ottawa. We have already called attention to the cowardliness of the manner in which the change has been effected in this department of the Civil Service. Those who made it have not the courage to come out boldly and dismiss the former inspectors in order to make room for their friends. They preferred a subterfuge. Last session, by a slight amendment in the Weights and Measures Act, they changed the names of the officials, and declared the old offices abolished and new ones created. This enabled them to say that the old officials went out with the abolition of their offices, and that the men who succeeded them are appointed to new offices. In other words, instead of the "deputy-inspector" appointed by the late Government years ago to administer a law introduced by the very men now in power, we have for the performance of precisely the same work 'inspectors and assistants' with a rearrangement of the inspectoral districts. The shuffle is a piece of the most transparent trickery, and serves to render the abuse of patronage the more flagrantly disgraceful.

The Fishery Question Again.

(From the Whitby Chronicle.)

It appears that the Americans claim the privilege of mining mackerel, and "defy all the power of Great Britain" to disturb them in the exercise of that privilege. The fact that the Newfoundland affair is yet unsettled emboldens them in this course. In the meantime, where the regulations are deterred against our own fishermen a practical wrong is being done them. If this state of affairs continues it will require in them either a feeling of contempt or of anger against all both. It will be the best thing possible for Canada when the matter is finally settled. We are, therefore, glad to notice that the complaints of the American fishermen who have been dismissed in the Gulf have determined the United States Government to make a thorough investigation into the matter. For this purpose the "Richmond" will convey United States officers to the ground to enquire into the circumstances and to report to the Government. It is said that the United will also [illegible] such evidence as will lead to the re-opening of the whole question, or failing to give better grounds for the United States' determination to throw up the privileges for the remaining years covered by the treaty, so that the corresponding privileges of selling fish free of duty may be withdrawn. It is said that Mr. Welsh, the late American Minister at London, will be succeeded by some one especially versed on this question. Although we would be glad to hear the last of this affair, as the matter now stands it is to Canada's interest that it be at once taken up and finally settled. As it is at present our valuable fisheries are in danger of being destroyed.

Mr. Gladstone.

HIS RESTORING POPULARITY.

Mr. Gladstone appears to be taken back into the liking of Englishmen. The other evening he went with his wife to the Haymarket Theatre, and on his entrance the audience fairly rose, and round after round of applause testified to his restored popularity, one or two hisses only serving to increase the enthusiasm. Boxes, pit, and amphitheatre appeared to vie with each other in the heartiness of their greeting. Mr. Gladstone, who appeared somewhat surprised at his reception, was afterwards deeply interested in Miss Nelson's rendering of the character of Juliet, which he was observed repeatedly to encore.

Sir John at Home.

(From the Hamilton Times.)

About this time, Sir John is in London making arrangements to be sworn in as Privy Councillor to Her Majesty. When we recollect that it is now more than seven years since he was nominated for that honor, we are moved to enquire why he did not go home earlier to secure it. But we remember that in the autumn of 1873, Sir John fell under the lead of the blackest piece of political villiany ever committed in the Empire, of which he was proved guilty, though he had on the 7th of May, 1873, the temerity to stand up in the House of Commons and say:

"I stand here to justify the course the Government has taken in this matter, and by God's help I believe I can do so satisfactorily. I know that the charge is a foul calumny. The Government deny it in toto. On behalf of every member of it, I can tell the honorable gentleman (Mr. Huntington) that he has been most woefully deceived, and that neither by thought, word, deed or action have the Government done anything of which they can be ashamed.

But his declaration to the representatives of the people was as false as the pledge he gave the Governor-General, for Lord Dufferin wrote home to say:

"I have received the most solemn assurances from my Ministers, both individually and collectively, on their word as men of honor and on their fealty to the Crown, as my sworn Councillors, that they are absolutely innocent of the crime laid to their charge.

And yet, as we have said, Sir John was proved to be guilty. The fact stood in his way when he would have gladly gone to England to be sworn of the Privy Council. But now, having been exhabilitated and his misdeeds forgotten, as he supposes, he is presenting himself to receive an honor which for seven years he has had no right to wear.

The Prince of Wales is reported to have said at the French Prince's funeral, "I loved him as if he had been my own brother." Some people now go so far as to say that had the Prince Imperial lived he in all probability would if possible have become the Prince of Wales' brother-in-law.

As Surely as Effect Follows Cause.

As surely as effect follows cause, so surely will disease eventually fasten itself upon a system deficient in vital energy, if tonic medication is not resorted to in time. The necessary tendency of a weak discharge of the functions of the body is to disorder its organs. Invigoration, prompt and thorough, is the only safeguard. No reservoir of depleted physical energy, no restorative of lost flesh, nerve power and cheerfulness, has more clearly demonstrated its efficacy than Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine. In this preparation, associated with the salutary medicines which forms its basis, is pure sherry wine and certain aromatic constituents, which impart an agreeable taste to the article, and gives additional emphasis to its effects. In cases of general debility and dyspepsia it is invaluable and the desired effect is, in the vast majority of cases, remarkably prompt as well as decisive. That good natural appetite, which gives a relish for the coarsest fare, is insured by the use of the Quinine Wine, which also confers brain soothing and body refreshing sleep. Fever and ague and bilious remittent fever, are diseases to the eradication of which it is specially adapted; but it should be used only in the intervals between the seizures. The far-reaching effects of a good tonic, in all complaints involving loss of physical energy, are well understood by physicians, and the comprehensive influence for good of this preparation upon the system goes far to bear out the professional belief in the value of invigorants as opponents of disease. Be sure to ask for the "Quinine Wine prepared by Northrop & Lyman, Toronto. Sold by all druggists.

PETITT'S EYE-SALVE.

An Infallible Remedy for all Diseases of the Eye (acute or chronic), Granulation of the Lids, Ulceration of the Lachrymal Glands, Film, and Weakness of the Vision from any cause.

THE AMERICAN EYE-SALVE is presented the public with the assurance of its efficacy as a curative of the most diseases of the eye, acute or chronic inflamation whether induced by scrofulous origin or otherwise, weakness or defect of vision, diminished tone of the optic nerve, or a diseased state of the tissues constituting that organ. Also for all persons whose vocation requires an incessant action of the eyes, the Salve will act as a charm in restoring a uniform healthy action, whenweakness, pain, and misery may have long threatened a fatal termination. It is the most simple, safe, and effective remedy ever discovered. The materials of which it is made are pure, perfect, and costly, compounded with elaborate care and exactness only in its application, being used externally, and, of course, lessening the pain and danger, which necessarily attends the introduction of minerals and eye-washes. Rheumatic and Old Chronic Sores, of scrofulous origin, or resulting from whatever cause, yield to the American Eye-Salve. It is used successfully for Piles. Its soothing effect is immediate, permanent cure requires but a few applications. The proprietors of "Dr. J. Petitt's American Eye-Salve," while making new and improved machinery for making a more perfect box for the Eye-Salve, have changed the Trade Mark on the cover so as to correspond with the Cut on the Wrapper, Circulars, Advertisements, etc. We call attention to this, as it might otherwise be regarded as counterfeiting.

Joy Among the Children.

Coffards Sweet Castor Oil, equally suitable for children and adults. Endorsed by over 600 doctors in Canada.

The difficulty of administering nauseous medicines, and the desirability of having them pleasant to the taste, induced T. Copland to undertake researches which resulted in the discovery of a Sweet Castor Oil, perfectly palatable, of the same strength and medical qualities as the ordinary Castor Oil, and while equally safe and harmless, yet acting with more certainty, and producing neither nausea nor griping. Some children say it is honey; others call it syrup—they all say they like it. One parent says—'My children drink it like water;' another—'We had to hide the bottle or they would have finished it right off;' another—'My little girl has taken it twice without any trouble, and does not know what it is, though she hates the ordinary Castor Oil and we never could get her to take it without a fight; yet another—'I wish you success of your Sweet Castor Oil; it is a splendid thing—sure to take the place of all the common oil.'

The extraordinary demand for this improvement on a simple household medicine has brought fraudulent imitations into the market, but the public can guard themselves against subterfuges (which unprincipled parties are attempting to sell on the reputation of this article) by seeing that the name of 'Coffards Sweet Castor Oil,' is on both wrapper and diamond label.

The undersigned having purchased Messrs. T. Copland & Co.'s interest in the above preparation, are now manufacturing it from the original recipe. Messrs. Lyman, Knapp & Co., Wholesale Druggists, Toronto, are our wholesale agents. Orders addressed to us will receive prompt attention.

Over $200,000 Worth of Boots and Shoes so Supplied Last Year.

The great loss annually sustained by selling to Dealers, first led to our establishing of Branch Stores, where we could supply direct to the people for Cash all the goods we could manufacture, thus giving to the people the goods less the dealer's profit, and saving to ourselves the annual loss. We were the more forcibly impressed into this step from the fact that cheap Eastern-made shoddy goods were being palmed off as our goods. We now sell our own goods, warrant what we sell, use no shoddy or inferior material of any kind, and can and do supply goods of the best quality 25 per cent. less than they can be bought elsewhere.

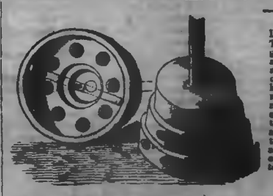
IMPROVED CHURN DASHER.



(Patented July, 1878.)

Is adapted to all the old fashioned Round, Tub or Crock Churns. It will churn and gather the butter in from 4 to 10 minutes, and turn out 10 per cent more butter than anything of the kind in use. Each motion or Range is an Air Chamber, which forces a large volume of atmosphere down into the milk or cream at each stroke, the cream or milk at the same time is forced over upward of four hundred inches of surface, and is thrown with such great velocity against the walls of the churn that it ruptures the globules and frees the butter with a few strokes. It is perfectly simple and easily constructed,—no machinery about it to get out of order.

SCHOOL BOOKS NOW BOUND IN IRON.

(BOY'S PATENT.)

This remarkable invention entirely does away with the two frequent complaints that books come to pieces in the student's hands, before they have done reasonable service. The Iron Backs are warranted to remedy this evil.

Description of the Improvement.

The point of advantage in this binding is simply that in the opening and closing of the book there is no friction, which is the destructive element of all ordinary binding.

By the patent method the leaves of the books are fastened by wire pins, inserted near the back margin, the ends of the pins being turned down and lying parallel with the margin, clasping the leaves together.

A back of thin metal is pressed on the back, with flanges overlapping the ends of the pins, which prevents the leaves from tearing from the pins, as is the case with wire, sewing or tape work.

By a peculiar curve in the pins, perfect flexibility is secured in the opening of the volumes, the whole forming a practical and substantial binding, absolutely Indestructible by wear and tear.

Ready in four binding, same prices as ordinary.

If I Should Die To-Night.

If I should die to-night,
My friends would look upon my quiet face,
Before they laid it in its final resting place,
And deem that death had lent it additional fair;
And lingering over it for hours, gaze against my hair,
Would smooth it down with tenderer fondness,
And fold my hands with lingering caress;
Poor hands, so empty now as cold to-night.

If I should die to-night,
My friends would call to mind, with loving thought,
Some kindly deed the lay hand had wrought
Some gentle words the frozen lips had said;
Errands on which the willing feet had sped:
The memory of my selfishness and pride,
My hasty words, would all be put aside;
And so I should be loved and mourned to-night.

If I should die to-night,
Even hearts estranged would turn once more to me,
Recalling other days remorsefully;
The eyes that chilled me with averted glance
Would look upon me as of yore, penitence,
And so of me in the old familiar way,
For who could war with death, mysterious clay;
So I might rest forgiven of all to night.

Oh! friends, I pray to-night,
Keep not your kisses for my dead, cold brow—
The way is bleak, let me feel them now;
Think gently of me; I am tempest worn;
My faltering footsteps pierced with many a thorn;
Forgive, oh, hearts estranged, forgive, I plead!
When dreamless rest is mine I shall not need
The tenderness for which I long to-night.

Laugh and be Happy.

Come, laugh and be happy, merry while you may,
Borrow no gloom from to-morrow for to-day;
Throw to the winds foreboding, cast away your fears,
Close your lips to sighing and your eyes to tears
Hush your heart to sorrow, listen not to woes;
Strew life's path with blessings wheresoe'er you go.
Gather hope's sweet roses, bind them on your brow,
Leaving disappointment, make a joyful vow;
O'er a sad past mourn not, learn this lesson wise,
For one-half the misery none's to blame but you.

Come, laugh and be happy, merry while you may,
Gathering some beauty from each loved day;
Counting golden moments in each weary hour,
Storing useful knowledge as the greatest dower.
Slaying songs of glee tho' skies are dull and grey,
Never impatient; if clouds pass not away;
In each silvry lining soon will be revealed
Treasure, priceless treasure, darkness had concealed;
Bounteous lasting gift, untouched by earthly rust,
Faith in heaven's appointments, clinging, child-like trust.

Wheat Culture.

Although ours is not an agricultural journal yet so many of our readers are agriculturalists that we feel justified in devoting a brief space to a subject of general interest, viz: The cultivation of wheat. Times war, in the early settlement of our country, when the husbandmen had but to "tickle the soil and it smiled with plenty." This richness of the virgin soil led to reckless extravagance, and only when the yield was diminished to an average of ten or twelve bushels to the acre did the farmer realize that he was squandering his capital, and that some means must be adopted to replace the lost vitality. A few years since a mixed husbandry began to prevail and the dairy, fruit culture, stock, etc. gave other sources of income. During the last two years the temptation to the excessive growth of wheat again presents itself in the fact that the yield has materially increased over the years immediately preceding.

The State of Michigan has increased her products from sixteen millions, in round numbers, in 1872 to thirty-two millions in 1879.

We would warn our readers against being induced to sow wheat this autumn on soil unfitted to receive it. Much of the success of the olden time was due to the thorough preparation of the soil by nature's process. The decaying forest had left a rich deposit on the surface, but this has become exhausted and its lack must now be supplied from other sources. The method by which nature replenishes the soil ought to have been an unerring guide to man, but for thirty forty or fifty years he has gone on, ploughing, sure and deep, that which should have been applied to the surface and to the roots of the plant,

It may be that comparatively few cling to the old, wasteful way of ploughing under their fertilizers, but we know of men who declare that only after a quarter of a century's experience did they learn to keep them on the surface and let the melting snow distribute them.

In all probability the European market will absorb for the next year or two, at least, all our surplus wheat at remunerative prices, but even a good price will not pay any man to devote his land to its growth unless a thorough preparation is made.

One error, and often a fatal one, is committed. A farmer has a field that is admittedly "run down," and he thinks that by sowing early, this will produce a growth to make up for the lack. This is a great mistake, and wheat thus sown is almost sure to fall a victim to the Hessian Fly and other insect enemies. The first severe frost completely destroys the power of the fly, and as the eggs are deposited in the autumn for next season's millions, it is best to wait until the 10th of September before sowing. It is the early sown wheat that is attacked.

An Interesting Story.

The Young Girl Whose Face Appears on the American Silver Dollar.

An interesting story in connection with the new American silver dollar has just come to light in Philadelphia. The secret has come out through the Record newspaper, as who the young lady was that sat to Mr. Morgan, the designer, as a model for the head which appears on the coin. The lady who has thus been raised to fame, and whose name will to chronicled in history, is Miss Anne W. Williams, residing with her widowed mother at 1023 Spring Garden street, in that city. In 1876, when Mr. Morgan was making designs for the coin, he was introduced to the lady by Mr. Thomas Eakins, a friend of the family. He desired to have a true representative of American beauty emblazoned upon the coin, and the profile of Miss Williams appeared to him the best approach to it he had seen. The lady, who is a retiring disposition, was induced to sit, and after four or five interviews, sufficient sketches had been secured to proceed with the work. The artist wrought up the face afterwards to its present appearance, as it is shown upon the coin. It would be impossible to recognize in it any resemblance to Miss Williams. The Grecian nose and delicate lips hall their foundation in her features, but the full rounded chin resembles more that of the wife of Mr. Morgan. Miss Williams is a slender and symmetrical girl, [illegible] of medium height, [illegible] hair, [illegible] and about 18 years of age. The face is said to be considered perfect by those who have been in attendance at the mint [illegible]

Our Transcontinental Road.

(From the New York Times.)

Sir John Macdonald and his colleagues must have known as well six months ago as now that either Imperial help must be obtained or that their Pacific Railroad plan must be deferred indefinately. Their entire policy should have been framed accordingly. Instead of preserving a harmonious whole, they constructed a tariff that will be more injurious to England than the United States; and having thus flung defiance into the face of England's embarrassed trade, they proceeded with a railroad scheme that is utterly impracticable without Englands' help. It is not surprising that the Ottawa gentlemen encountered the cold shoulder in Downing street, and shrink from a public announcement of the object of their visit. To boast of being independent of Imperial influences when a tariff is in question, and to humbly pray for Imperial money when a railroad is to be built, is one of those impudent paradoxes which John Bull is not in a humor to appreciate. Even supposing him at the moment to be exceptionally unselfish, the reports that reached him from day to day cannot fail to impress on him the futility of the fiscal policy of Canada as a means of extricating it from difficulties. No one proposes to make the protectionist tariff responsible for the collapse of five or six banks and the distress that prevails in the Dominion from end to end. But though the failures, and the distrust they have intensified, are not products of protectionist legislation, they show that the predicted results of the tariff have not been realized, that the immediate gains which it was expected to yield are not to hand, and, especially, that the want of confidence from which the trade of the Dominion suffers have been increased, not lessened by the change.

The Imperial Parliament

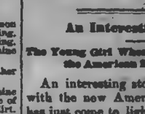
PROROGATION.—THE SPEECH FROM THE THRONE.

LONDON, Aug. 15.—Parliament was prorogued to-day. The speech from the Throne was delivered by a Royal Commission. The Queen, after announcing that the relations of the Government with the other powers continue cordial, refers to the faithful execution of the principal clauses of the Treaty of Berlin, and the near realization of the remainder. On the subject of reforms in Turkey, the Queen speaks of the calamities of war as explaining the delay, but declares her purpose to insist upon the Porte's compliances with his engagements. The Queen also directs attention to the courage for the better that has already taken place in Egypt. In alluding to the successful termination of the contest in Afghanistan, Her Magesty speaks warmly of the gallantry of the British commanders and the courage and endurance of the troops. The Queen, while expressing pleasure at the recent important successes in South Africa, confesses her sorrow at the sacrifices of precious lives by which they have been purchased. An early peace, on endaring basis, is predicted. The Queen expresses thanks to the Commons, as is customary, for the voting of supplies, and refers in commendatory terms to the passage of the Army Discipline Bill, Acts for the appointment of public prosecutors, amending the law relating to summary jurisdiction of magistrates and the alterations of the law relating to banking and joint stock companies. The speech concludes as follows:—"I have had much pleasure in complying with your request to appoint a commission to inquire into the case of the depression in agriculture, and I observe with satisfaction that you have agreed to measures relative to education in Ireland, which offered a firm and fitting supplement to the Intermediate Educational Act. In bidding you farewell, I pray that the blessing of Providence may rest on your labors."

Port Hope.

UNLIKELY.—The Mail says that a new Grit newspaper is to be started in Port Hope.

A WEDDING THAT WAS TO BE BUT WAS NOT.—A correspondent of the Guide at Perrytown writes:—Quite a breeze was created in this neighborhood on Wednesday last when it was reported about that a young gallant who had recently came in this section had cruelly jilted and disappointed a beautiful young lady by his wanton negligence in not making his appearance at the appointed hour and place to have the marriage knot made fast, as agreed upon. All things were in readiness for the happy event The bride's trousseau prepared, the invited guests assembled, and all apparently running as smoothly as a marriage bell, when lo, it became apparent to the pater-familias that the young gallant had vamoosed the ranch and gone to parts unknown. This unfeeling young wretch the morning previous to the appointed time pleaded want of funds to carry out his honorable intentions, and succeeded by his plausible tale of love in fleecing the old lady out of several dollars, likewise the father out of a suit of clothes; when he had accomplished his base designs, he then started for town, so he said, to secure a license, but as yet he has failed to put in an appearance, and consequently the happy event had to be indefinitely postponed, the guests dumbfound, the parson fooled out of his fee. The old adage says there is nothing sure but death and disappointment, and verily how true in this case. The friends of the injured young lady promise if this truant young man again puts in an appearance in this section to give him a cheap suit of tar and feathers, and well does he deserve it.



As old resident at Niagara Falls says that on an average about six persons are carried over the falls every year, and that once out of the six are wholly or partially intoxicated. And then [illegible]

The Rag-Baby.

A Michigan representative recently discussed the rag-money-baby in the following humorous but effective fashion:—"I cannot understand this fiat business. I can understand how a piece of paper is perfectly good if it is buyable some time and to some one, but how a piece of paper stamped as money is money, I cannot understand. I can understand perfectly well, when I buy a ticket from here to Chicago, that it is good for something, because it is redeemable in a ride; but I cannot understand how the ticket itself is the ride, and nobody but a modern Greenback fiat money man would sit down on that ticket and think he was going to Chicago. I can understand how a ticket into a circus is good, if I can get into the show; but I cannot understand how the ticket is the show, and nobody but a modern fiat money man would take the ticket and think he was the horses going round and the whole performance. I can understand how an order on a farmer here in Wisconsin for a cow is pretty good, if I can get the cow, but I cannot understand how the order itself is the cow' and nobody but a modern Greenback, fiat-money man would sit down on a stool and attempt to milk the order. I will tell you, my fellow citizens, there is no use in talking about getting out of the national debt in any way except to pay it; that is the only straightforward way to do. To-day the best thing that could happen to the financial interest and the business interests would be for Congress to pass a law at its very next session to punish with death any member of Congress that would make a speech on finance for the next twenty years. What we want is to let it alone, and we are on the high road to prosperity."

CANADIAN parents of the "rag-baby" will find it difficult to answer the following pointed and epigrammatic reference to that fallacy by the celebrated American orator, Col. Robert Ingersoll. In a recent letter on the currency question he says:—"We are told, however, that the Government can create money. This I deny. The Government produces nothing; it raises no wheat, no corn; it digs no gold, no silver. It is not a producer, it is a consumer. The Government is a perpetual pauper that has to be supported by the people. It is constantly passing the contribution plate. The man who passes it I admit has a musket with him, but at the same time the Government is supported by these contributions. You cannot live upon the promises of your own Government any more than you could live upon the notes of your hired man—any more than you could live upon a bond issued by occupants of the county poor-house. You cannot live upon that which you have to support."

Sentiment and Sense.

The most manifest sign of wisdom is continual cheerfulness.

It is the best proof of the virtues of a family circle to see a happy fireside.

To the Christian nothing can be so dark but that there is a bright side.

Married life often begins with rosewood and mahogany and ends with pine.

The use of time is a debt we contract from birth, and it should only be paid with the interest our life has accumulated.

The more God honoreth men, the more they should humble themselves; the more fruit the lower the branches on which it grows. Pride is ever the companion of emptiness.

The coming of a new guest may awaken new interests, but he can never entirely crowd out the memory of the old one. Walk where we will, the sunshine of the past will come athwart our paths.

No statute which the rich man places ostentatiously in his window is to be compared to the little expectant faces pressed against the window pane, waiting for father when his day's labor is done.

Civility is a Fortune.

Civility is a fortune itself, for courteous men always succeed well in life, and even when persons of ability sometimes fail. The famous Duke of Marlborough is a case in point. It is said of him by a contemporary that his agreeable manner often converted an enemy into a friend; and by another that it was more pleasing to be denied a favor by his grace than to receive one from another man. The gracious manner of Charles James Fox preserved him from personal dislikes, even at a time when he was politically the most unpopular man in the kingdom. The history of the world is full of such examples of success obtained by civility. The experience of every man furnishes, if we but recall the past, frequent instances were conciliatory manners have made the fortunes of physicians, lawyers, divines, politicians, merchants and, indeed, individuals of all pursuits. To men, civility is what beauty is to a woman; it is a general passport to favor, a letter of introduction, written in the language that one understands. Of two men, equal in other respects, the courteous one has twice the chance of fortune.

THE RICHES OF RECREATION.

"All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy" says the old proverb. This, as undoubtedly intended from the first, applies as well to the old or middle-aged Jack as to the urchin. Nor must we, while on the subject of recreations, forget to embrace the fair ones, who enjoy and are entitled to play at least as much as their masculine contemporaries. It matters not what the work may be, if it be continued day in and day out, the system of the worker is sure to suffer. The toiler who from choice or necessity refuses relaxation at times must in the end cease, to build up his impaired health. Perhaps the worst feature of our present social condition in this country is the incessant round of toil to which men and women subject themselves—the eternal carrying of their business cares, in the street, to their homes, and even within the portals of the Church, that is, when they allow themselves to go to church. Happy is it for these toilers that all work gets into a sort of routine; so that after a time it becomes almost mechanical in performance. But work pursued in this way brings no mental satisfaction beyond that produced by the thought, that it is done in some sort of way. Now, man when created was placed in such a position as gave him only such exercise as would conduce to healthful pleasure. Toil is a punishment for human sin; and some sin so far as to thoughtlessly aggravate their punishment. The incessant toiler is his own executioner. He cannot get loose from his own bondage till Providential sickness forces him to let go his killing grip on his own life. Men and women by entanglement in their own toils get into a state approaching, if it be not actually, monomania, in which they actually believe that everything would go to utter smash and irretrievable ruin did they withdraw their hand from holding and their energy from advancing the business in which they are engaged. They would like to take a holiday, they need a rest, they tell you; but can't they can't afford it. They can't get away just now, and all the time they are tying themselves more firmly, with stronger cords, and rendering themselves weaker and less likely to escape. Many good and well-meaning people thus actually drive themselves into premature graves; and by their very error in pursuit of a life's work contrive to leave it in utter confusion when they are forced to leave it. This must add a terrible pang to the death of hundreds of toilers after the things of life for the good of others.

By Divine example and command one-seventh of man's life is set apart for rest. How many obey? Those who do not, suffer the consequences of their disobedience physically, mentally and spiritually. Things would be no worse did men work less relentlessly. This is easily proved by cases wherein accident or sickness incapacitates a toiler. He is astonished, let us hope humbled, to find that things go on just as well without his assistance. Even when his pet plans are all frustrated and his purposes completely thwarted, the world moves just the same, the sun rises and sets, the birds sing and the flowers bloom as beautifully as ever. He even contrives to live, and perhaps to learn more wisdom than he ever could have acquired otherwise than by failure. If men and women would work less eagerly, try to enjoy more, and give more enjoyment to others, they would live longer, lighten the labor of others, be happier here, and more likely to enjoy happiness hereafter. In the easy enjoyments of half-hours, or even minutes, are to be found the greatest joys and relicfs, rather than in the set days for amusements that bring little else than weariness and dissatisfaction. Excursions, outings and other systematic sports are generally a rude break upon the routine of ordinary toil, and produce a wrench that is felt for days, whereas the quiet respite from toil with one's family or among friends brings no such strain and is much more effective in driving from the mind the demon of drudgery that is sought to enroll and take captive all but the unfeelingly busy.

PETERBOROUGH AND THE GRAND JUNCTION RAILWAY.

When the Grand Junction Railway was first projected, the town and county of Peterborough looked favorably upon it, and they continued to encourage the enterprise till it lost all claim to consideration. How it failed and forfeited confidence is a matter of local history that needs no recapitulation. To every overture of the people in this northern part it proposed to benefit and from whom which it proposed to receive pecuniary aid, those who alternately had the projected line in hand, turned a deaf ear. They were unable or unwilling, to listen to those who would have been their best friends; but who was trusted as unworthy of any privilege except that of paying a bonus to what changed from a promising scheme, to one utterly useless for the purpose desired by Peterborough town and county. The indifference of Grand Junction speculators to Peterborough interests, naturally produced an indifference in the people of Peterborough to the Grand Junction Railway. The latter can see little or no advantage to them in a line which assumes to be a mere branch of the Midland Railway from Omemee to Belleville. There would have been some sense in Peterborough county in bonusing a road by way of Norwood, through to the north, acting as an independent line. But that proposition was all but scouted by the needy, or greedy speculators who have control of the Grand Junction scheme. Even now there might be some advantage to this town and the western part of the county in the building of the Grand Junction road, independently, through to the north. But this is not proposed. The interest of Peterborough, according to the Campbellford Herald, which probably speaks by inspiration of the Grand Junction speculators, is to be secured in another way—forced rather than attracted. Alluding to the indifference of Peterborough to the Grand Junction at Omemee, the Herald says:—

"Let the Directors take the only course open for them to adopt under the circumstances, that is, undeceive the people there, by ordering a slight deviation of the line of railway from the village of Hastings to Lakefield, which is at the foot of Salmon Trout Lake, but at the head of the River Otonabee, and thence to the south end of Mud Lake, northwest of Peterborough, and to the Junction with the Midland at Omemee, only a few miles from the latter lake. The railway will thus intercept all the business and freight that usually go to Peterborough from the north, either by the River Otonabee or Mud Lake, as well as the east and west; and Peterborough may also cease to be the centre for grain business as it is now.

"Any person of ordinary intelligence on looking at a map of Ontario, will see that such will be the result, Lakefield, already a flourishing village, may become a large town that will rival Peterborough in business and enterprise, and a new town also may spring up at the south end of Mud Lake, where the railway may touch.

"Let the people of Lakefield and neighborhood take advantage of this opportunity by sending delegates to Belleville for an interview with the directors on the subject."

This attempt to frighten Peterborough is neither clever nor otherwise creditable to its originators, whoever they may be. The people of this town, feeling, as they do, that they could gain nothing by bonusing the line, through their town, to Omemee, very easily conclude that they would lose nothing were the line carried around their town to the same, or any junction with the Midland Railway. Millbrook and Port Hope may scare at the project, but not so Peterborough. This town will be perfectly able to take care of its own interests by the encouragement of more productive enterprises, even against opposition more formidable than the petty threat of Grand Junction traders on credulity.

But "any person of ordinary intelligence on looking at a map of Ontario" will see that this pretty scheme to force Peterborough to "shell out," involves the construction of a line along two sides of a triangle, the apex of which is nine or ten miles to the north of the direct line from Hastings to Omemee. It is not likely that the people of Lakefield will suffer themselves to be made a cat's paw for a few designing speculators by paying serious attention to this bosh. Even if they could be brought to believe in the intention of the projectors to actually adopt this round-about route, they are not likely to give anything to a line in which this town sees nothing but a branch to the Midland road, with no attempt whatever to open up territory not now supplied. If the project were for the utilising of the old line to Mud Lake, an extension to Bobcaygeon, and thence to Parry Sound, or to a junction with the line that must eventually run through from the Ottawa valley in the farther north; then Lakefield, and Peterborough too, might take some interest in the scheme. But now there's nothing in it; and neither Lakefield nor any other municipality is likely to put any money into it.

It will be amusing to notice the fate of this Belleville, Campbellford, Hastings, Lakefield, Mud Lake and Omemee branch railway to connect with the Midland road on or near Pigeon Creek. We should like to hear the answer to a Lakefield delegation.

CENTRAL EXHIBITION.

For some time there has been a degree of uncertainty as to the advisability of holding a Central Exhibition here this year, for fear that sufficient funds could not be realized to meet the necessary outlay. A few gentlemen in town unwilling to see the central show fall through, to use a common phrase, went to work last week and canvassed the town, and at a meeting held on Saturday evening, announced their success, when it was determined to proceed with all possible dispatch. It was agreed too, that the exhibition be held on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday 30th Sept. and 1st, 2nd and 3rd October, in Peterborough, closing at 10 o'clock on the last day. The prize list is being printed at this office, and will be completed with all haste. Parties desiring to take advantage of the large issue ($3000) to make known the variety and cheapness of their wares can do so for a few days yet.

All the exhibitions held at Peterborough have been very successful, and we feel confident this one will be no exception. It will be well, however, for all who take an interest in "The Central" of 1879 to be ready to do all they can towards securing success. The Secretary, Mr. Cottingham, has done much in the past to have everything satisfactorily arranged and in good working order, and we are sure he will this year be still more willing and ready to assist in making it successful. All the Directors, too, are fully to earnest, although the time is short, to work in right earnest, and a pull all together will undoubtedly make Peterborough Central as successful, if not more so, than any of its predecessors.

Intending exhibitors will do well to take particular note of rule one, which read as follows:—

"Members of all societies within the District, contributing directly or indirectly not less than $50 to the unincumbered funds of the association, and who shall have paid their annual subscriptions for the current year, before the 1st day of September, and all other persons remitting the sum of $2 to the treasurer, shall be members, and as such, shall be entitled to the advantages and privileges conferred as members under the rules and regulations of the exhibition."

The contributing societies in this county are: those of the East and West Ridings of Peterborough, the Horticultural Society, and the Smith branch Society, and the Treasurers of the same are respectively, W. E. Roxburgh, Norwood; J. Carnegie, and J. H. Roper, Peterborough; and M. S. Dean, Bridgenorth, to any of whom the payment of one dollar this week will serve the same as two dollars next week.

And rule two is almost equally as important. It reads as follows:—

"Any member can compete for any or all of the prizes offered at the Central Exhibition free. Ladies may compete in the domestic manufactures, ladies' work and fine art classes, provided the head of the family to which they belong be members of the society."

Immediate attention to these rules will, no doubt, save expense and disappointment hereafter.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Major De Winton has got himself into trouble with the press by his treatment of the newspaper man of St. John.

Cleveland, Ohio, has a society of women who, with the aid of the police, are trying to get up a sentiment in favor of indoor girls not to go out of doors unattended after dark.

The "usefulness of the Lakefield News is gone." The doors have been closed, and the business advertised for sale. Does it not appear strange? This was another advocate of the "N.P."

One of the blunders of the foreign policy of England was the Afghan war. Out of it is likely to arise serious difficulty with India. The people of India do not like the proposition that they have to pay the expenses of the war.

Quebec is very unfortunate. Riots seem to be the rule there and not the exception. From all accounts, the weakness of the local authorities has much to do with the seriousness and length of the disturbances. Fighting to the Quebec Frenchmen is both meat and drink. Like the proverbial Irishman, he is never at peace unless he is at war.

When Sir John returns to Ottawa, there is to be another presentation. A pair of horses and a stylish carriage are to be the medium by which the loyal Tories will make known their gush for the Premier, and the hat is now being passed round amongst the crowd to gather in the necessary amount of wealth to make the purchase.

The political contest has opened in England with a powerful paper by Mr. Gladstone. In it, he reviews the course of the Government, and shows with all his well-known vigor, the ruinous foreign policy carried out by the Tories. The fact that they have entirely ignored home affairs is also dealt with, but this seems to be admitted by moderate supporters of the Government. Whether Mr. Gladstone will be the Liberal leader or not is not known, but he appears to be the hope of his party at present.

It is designed to establish an institution in Toronto to be known as the Royal Medical and Surgical Institute. Its object is to afford every facility, modern improvement, and successful means for the treatment of all kinds of diseases, medical and surgical, at lowest cost. The wealthiest classes will have but a moderate fee to pay, while on the other hand no one will be refused treatment whose means are too limited to fee a physician. There will be departments suitable for every station, and no pains will be spared to fully meet the wants of the invalid.

The late telegrams inform us that the proceedings in the case of Lieut. Carey have been quashed, and that he will retain his rank and position in the army. At the announcement of the death of the young Pretender to the throne of France, there was a loud demand among the snobocracy for vengeance swift and dire upon the lieutenant who was unfortunate enough to be with young Napoleon when he met his death. Like most clamors, this was not backed by reason, and sober second thought has convinced the English people that Carey was in no degree responsible for the tragedy.

New Hampshire ladies are evidently ahead of their Canadian cousins in devising means to "get even" with their husbands, brothers, uncles and beaus, who go off on pleasant summer excursions leaving them at home. Six young women, we are told, are spending August in six tents, near Northwood, N. H. Only one man is tolerated in the camp, and he is a servant. For diversion, they fish, row, shoot at a mark, play games, read, sing and frolic. The camp is called Gumption, and each of the party is "Gump 1," or "Gump 2," and so on. They have more "gumption" than our girls!

During the campaign prior to the contest of the 17th of September last the woollen mills employees in Almonte were assiduously told that with the return to power of John A. times would be better and everything promising. On the strength of these assertions the workmen voted the N. P. ticket. Within one month their wages were cut down ten per cent.; a little afterwards the privilege of buying their own woollen goods at cost was taken away, and now the mills are shut down altogether. The workingmen of Almonte have cause to praise the N. P. and those who obtained their votes by false pretences.

Mr. Rosamond is out with a letter to the Mail in reference to the Almonte wool trade. Mr. Rosamond admits that there was since the elections a general reduction in workmen's wages. He also admits that his mills has been shut down. He does not deny that the wool trade in Almonte is in a deplorable state. His letter fully bears out our statements in connection with the woollen trade, and we require no further proof of the really deplorable state of woollen manufactures in Almonte than the facts stated by this leading manufacturer. The Peterborough Interviewer will find no enviable task should he decide to interview the woollen manufacturers of the Dominion.

The Lindsay Post regrets that Mr. Jas. Cooper, late publisher of the Warder, was not appointed one of the Assistant Inspectors of Weights and Measures. After commenting on the appointments that have been made, it says:—"For such a county paper Mr. Joseph Cooper would be as successful, if not more so, than any of the gentlemen who have been appointed."

A Refutation.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—If you will insert the accompanying letter of Mr. Philip, which was intended for the Lakefield News, also a part of the letter I had written for the same paper before I saw Mr. Philip, I will esteem it a favor, the News having for the time being ceased to exist.

To the Editor of the Lakefield News:

Dear Sir,—When I sent my letter to you over two weeks ago for publication, I had not the remotest idea that it would lead to any discussion or correspondence on a subject that is anything but a pleasant one to me. I did not think then, nor do I now think, it needs any explanation other than that given. There were in circulation in this village, (and other places), imputations against my brother's veracity, which were considered by some (including Methodist ministers) to be the cause of his being dropped by the Methodist Conference; and must have been considered by all most damaging to his character. I did not directly nor indirectly insinuate anything against the action of the Conference; moreover to prevent any such inference I concluded by stating that my explanations and assertions were not made to condemn the Conference. They were made to free my brother from the stain of falsehood and dishonor. Does Mr. Washington grudge that such a wrong should be made right? I can scarcely read his letter and the one following without coming to that conclusion. When he considers it incumbent on himself to defend the honor of the Conference which has not been attacked in any manner, then he should be generous enough to allow a man's honor to be sustained without publishing a private letter which contains statements that are, to say the least, ungenerous, unkind and uncalled for. If Mr. Washington wished to make an explanation he might have done so and allowed Prof. Shaw to publish his own letters if he saw fit to do so. I do not comprehend how he "regrets that such subjects should be discussed in public print," while he publishes a private letter that is sure to create those "painful and perhaps bitter feelings" which he so fears to awaken. At the risk of being considered not candid, I, for one, am not satisfied with Prof. Shaw's letter. If I were to admit that it was written in a 'gentlemanly and Christian manner,' I should not admit that it was scholarly or written in a Christian spirit. Passing on to Prof. Shaw's letter we notice an inconsistency at the very first: both Prof. Shaw and Mr. Washington agree that the 'matter is not a proper subject for newspaper discussion.' Yet against their own convictions they publish the letter. Prof. Shaw did not seem to think it necessary in his own defence. I do not understand why Mr. Washington should as Prof. Shaw had the privilege of replying to Mr. Philip, which he seems to evade.

* * * * * * * * *

We shall now as Prof. Shaw desires, observe his five points.

First proves nothing, as it matters not how, where, of whose accord, or at whose request he spoke. When Mr. P. was making true statements, Prof. S. admits he spoke and said they were 'erroneous.'

The second point proves, if a man makes a mistake in 'good faith,' therefore, he is 'substantially correct,' which is absurd. Third point:—I am prepared to prove that the allusion to his standing in his studies was not introduced 'incidentally,' but premeditated. Fourth point:—The temper of the conference has nothing whatever to do with proving the truth of Prof. S's. 'testimony.' Fifth point is more lengthy than the others, but not more logical. So far as I know he is blamed for the mis-statements, not for the 'rejection.' My letter was written to correct the misstatements not to censure.

If Prof. S. manfully acknowledged he committed an error, his sorrow and good wishes would have seemed much more sincere.

In conclusion I would say there is no word in the last, nor are there any in this meant to condemn the action of the Conference. As far as anything I have written is concerned, I may be quite in harmony with Mr. W. on that point.

Yours truly,
WM. CALDWELL.

Sir,—Permit me a few words of correction in reply to statements contained in a letter in your columns of the issue of the 15th inst., under signature of W. I. Shaw, and introduced by the Rev. G. Washington. I agree with Bro. Washington that some subjects ought not to be discussed in "public print," but differ from him as to this being one of that class. I cannot see the necessity for his appearing in print touching the matter, holding the views he does as to the propriety of the discussion, and especially as the action of the Conference has not been called in question either by myself or Dr. Caldwell, but only the statements made by Prof. Shaw and others, which statements led the Conference to take the action in the case which it did, it being, by said statements, shut up to said action, and also as Prof. S. (who knew of the correspondence) did not see fit to reply thereto.

In reply to Prof. Shaw—Prof. S. intimates that the matter is not proper for newspaper discussion. Let Prof. S. remember that a public injury has been done another—perhaps unwittingly—by him, that that other is not a member of the Conference, and cannot appear in person; more, that that other has been dropped from the ranks of our probationers, and that strictly none other can in Conference speak on his behalf and justify his character. The wrong being made public the particulars ought to be made public, and for one I am glad that the press is not muzzled, but open for the justification of the wronged.

The censorship of Prof. Shaw and intended parley is but of little value as to the merits of the public discussion of the matter. Prof. S. says there is no lie about the matter. I say there is. I am surprised at the want of analysis of the statement by a Professor. No one intimated that Prof. S. told a lie. I hope his conscience is not troubling him. But I repeat, and the Conference based its action on that fact, "the statement of Prof. S. gave the lie to J. C. H.," and more, through the agency of members of the Conference, who did not think of questioning such statements, has branded J. C. H. a liar, especially through the bounds of Bond Head circuit.

These words "lie" and "liar" are simple Saxon words, and all appropriate in their connection in my communication, and let me remind Prof. S. that no private communication could right J. C. H., though it might have shown Prof. S. his error of statement. I am surprised at the statements by which Prof. S. would justify his utterance. He is certainly indebted to his imagination for his facts. He did not say J. C. H. took 2nd class certificates. Had he said so there had been no conflict between my statement and his; for I stated distinctly that J. C. H. took 2nd class, and read the average figures giving value of certificates from my note of the statement furnished me at the May District meeting held in Bradford. He gave no grade of certificate and no figures constituting any grade. He made the position statement, and repeated it, that J. C. H. took a very low grade all through his college, literary and theological course; but that, not having the records, he could not state the positive value of that standing, but it was low, very low; also that the "Bootle prize expressed no particular value," making the impression on the minds of the Conference that J. C. H. had intentionally and deliberately endeavored to impose on the Conference by the record he gave us, and the matter immediately took the character of a grave immorality, and the decision of the Conference was determined by that feature of the case, even some of those who had intended supplying the case of J. C. H. voting for the resolution to drop him from the list of probationers. He, Prof. S., having dashed away the literary standing of J. C. H., then proceeded to make some restrictions on the general religious character of J. C. H., contrasting it in its general features with that of other probationers, which restrictions were understood by Mr. Washington as condemnatory of Mr. Bootle. Is there room to doubt the intention of Prof. S's literary record as given by me.

Prof. S. says: The discussion took 40 minutes (how does he know if he paid no attention thereto) and the allusion to his standing introduced "incidentally in the debate." Mere errors of Prof. S., L.L.D. I will correct Prof. S. I am sorry there paying so little attention to the matter that his attention had to be called to it, that he assumes to speak so positively. The discussion on the resolution did not take 40 minutes.

A desultory conversation there being no motion before the Conference arose on the presentation of the district record before the Conference, recommending the continuance of J. C. H. on trial, instead of receiving him for reception into full connection and for ordination. Giving rise to some questions asked by Dr. Hunter and others, as to the division of the district meeting on the question of his reception and ordination, said division being 4 to 3 against his then ordination; and also as to the advisability of the Conference accepting officially, certain documents, I had, bearing on the case, to the president, and which the chair ruled as not advisable to be officially received, but which could go back into my hands and by me or others, made use of in the discussion on the case. There had been no proper discussion of the case, only an expression as to these side issues, and which prepared the way for the discussion. Then a brother, to open the way for the introduction of said papers which I held, moved that J. C. H. be "dropped in silence." I then proceeded to open the case—and it was in my hands—and almost immediately and directly (not incidentally as erroneously stated by Prof. S. but immediately and directly) presented the record of the literary standing of J. C. H., to which record he states (also in a private letter to me) his attention was called. How to be so positive as to the "incidental reference" if his attention had to be called to the matter? The discussion proper did not occupy more than say four minutes. Immediately upon the positive statements of Prof. S., as to the exceedingly "low" literary standing of J. C. H. as the Montreal Theological College, I dropped the whole case feeling I had been made a dupe of by J. C. H., and at the close of the session some intimated if had been imposed on and deceived, and if I had known the man better I would not have put any confidence in his statements. I am sorry that Prof. Shaw is so careless in his statements and another has been unjustly injured by that carelessness.

I reiterate the statement of my former communication. The record given me by J. C. H., and by me given to the Conference, and by Prof. Shaw called in question as wholly erroneous, as by official documents signed by Geo. Douglass, L. L. D., and W. I. Shaw, B. A., Register, fully sustained even to the letter. I could say much more as to the case, but my only desire being to present the facts of the case, and to some extent at least blot out the brand of liar from the name of J. C. Henderson with which brand it has been deeply branded, I will forbear at least for the present.

I am yours, &c.,
SAMUEL C. PHILIP.

The Saw Dust Nuisance.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir,—Why is it that the Fishery Overseer proceeds against the employees of saw-mills for allowing rubbish to fall into the river, instead of adopting the more simple method of prosecuting the owners? It is certainly a difficult matter to look up evidence against the particular workman guilty of the very act of depositing the saw-dust or other refuse in the stream; and this matter of evidence in one very great reason of frequent failure in conviction, and consequent neglect of the enforcement of such prohibitory laws. It is not very hard, however, to discover unmistakably from which mills the rubbish comes, and by making the proprietors liable they would take care to exercise proper supervision over their employees. In short they would be led to ferret out the actual offenders, which they could do more easily and effectively than can the Government officers. Mill proprietors may say truly that they have ordered their foreman and hands to be careful in the disposal of rubbish; but it is their part, and not that of the Fishery Overseer, to see that these private orders are carried out. The Overseer has more to do than to act as spy over the hands of the mill proprietors, who are themselves liable for injury done by rubbish from their mills. Let the Overseer go for the heads of the houses, and never mind any undignified interference with the internal workings of the mills.

Yours &c.,
ANGLER.

Our correspondent is scarcely acquainted with the facts in these cases, as the Fishery Overseer caught the men in the act of depositing the rubbish in the river.—Ed.

R. W. Phipps on Protection.

Canada voted last year for Protection. Did she get it? No; or we should have seen its well-known effects six months ago. What did she get? Nothing but the same old etiquetism and greedy exclusiveness which have ever blocked her way to progress. Many people are beginning to despair. They say, put in whom we will, they rally around some partisan Minister, to the certain rejection of any practical man, and incompetence succeed incompetence in dreary and disheartening round. The thoughts of many are turning southward. I ask you to notice that never before has annexation been so advocated as now. It is spoken on all sides. Some weeks back the Montreal Spectator intimated that annexation, as the next thing to fall back on, was discussed at all the street corners. The Montreal Evening Post adds more plainly: "Day by day indications multiply which point to the fact that the business men of Montreal are thinking of annexation more and more every day. Men tell us in the public thoroughfares that property would then advance fifty per cent. at a bound." The principal Toronto morning paper lately editorially declared that, in spite of any "loyalty howler," if annexation were a material benefit the Dominion would have it. A New Brunswick councillor has introduced a motion in its favor supported by a long speech, which, instead of being suppressed, has been largely circulated throughout Canada. A strongly-worded annexation pamphlet has just been published and is now being sold at the Toronto bookstores. The indications at these all along the line are as marks on the beach levels; they cannot be there were the annexation fever not far back, pouring in by great strides. I regret to witness this movement. The National Policy, as I have it, is not fully opposed to it. The Mail [illegible] to its unmanly [illegible] to already [illegible] better.

From our own Correspondent.

—Civic holiday on the 9th September.

—Duck shooting begins on Monday, the first.

—Our school will open on Monday next.

—The "Lakefield News" has suspended publication; cause—"lack of the needful."

—One day last week while Mrs. Darcy of the Burleigh Falls hotel was returning home from Lakefield with her sister, their horse took fright at the Chippewa passing the locks at Young's Point and backing up, upset the buggy. Mrs. Darcy escaped, but her sister got severely bruised, and the buggy was left in a dilapidated condition.

—While George Cochrane our Fishery Inspector was returning from the P. M. cours in Peterboro' last week he observed two men at the Red Mills throw a load of slabs into the river. He left his buggy and went over and informed them that they would have the privilege of paying $10.00 or 20 days in jail for so doing.

We have to thank a large number of our friends for their prompt response to the call. But there are still a great many accounts unsettled. CATARRH.

Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Cures Catarrh.

T. J. B. Harding, Esq., Brockville, Ont.

Dear Sir,—It is now two years since your "Constitutional Catarrh Remedy" was introduced to me. I have waited this long to see if the cure would remain permanent before doing this, my duty, to you as the first happy effects seemed to me to be "too good to be true."

I was afflicted in my head for years before I succeeded it to be Catarrh. In reality in your Circular I saw my case decided in many particulars. The inward "drop" from the head had become very disagreeable, and a choking sensation often prevailing me from lying long, I would feel like smothering and be compelled to sit up in the bed. My health and spirits were seriously affected. When your Agent came to Walkerton in August 1877, I secured three bottles. Before I had used a quarter of the contents of one bottle I found decided relief, and when I had used two bottles and a third, I quit taking it, feeling quite cured of that ailment, and have not used any since until of late I have taken some for a cold in my head.

A sense of duty to sufferers from that loathsome disease, Catarrh, prompts me to send you this Certificate, unsolicited, with leave to make what use of it you may see proper. Yours truly,

W. TINDALL, Methodist minister.

Street Railway.—About three miles of new steel rails have been laid on the Midland Railway, between Quay's and Gordon Hill.

Law of Newspapers.—The court has decided that if a person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount whether the paper is taken from the post office or not.

To the Ladies of Peterborough and Vicinity.—If you want to dye easy and produce brilliant and lasting colors, use Mrs. Brunsell's new domestic dyes. A package will color more the stokes and shoals occupied by Mr. Wainwright on the one side, and Mr. Stapleton's on the other. The latter, however, being at brisk, withstood the fire, excepting the roof, which was considerably damaged. Mr. Yellamt's shop was slightly damaged but not to any extent. All the buildings were insured, we believe, so that the loss will not be considerable. The brigade were promptly on the spot, and had two streams on the fire in a short time from the alarm being given.

Almost Serious Accident.—On Tuesday as Mr. Tees. Fife, of Otonabee, was starting from town homeward, opposite the Episcopal church gate, his horse took fright at the watering cart and he became unmanageable. Mr. Fife held him pretty firmly until finding it about impossible to control the animal, he jumped out still holding on to the lines. The horse at this time backed across the street, plunged forward and began to kick furiously. Fortunately for Mr. Fife he was not then in the buggy, as it was pretty badly damaged. Had he been in his life would have been in danger. Mr. Fife was lucky in receiving no injury except a slight shock while jumping out of the buggy. During the whole time he held on to the lines although he at time was in imminent danger.

The Schools.—The schools open on Tuesday next after the holidays, we understand, with the following changes:—Miss. M. Flavelle takes Miss Blaisdell's position; Miss C. Pale succeeds Miss Flavelle in the First Ward School; Miss Brown returns to her old place in the Third Ward School; and Miss Perry and Miss Matthews to their former places. Other changes are anticipated in about a month, but nothing definite is yet known. During the vacation the Central buildings have undergone thorough repairs under the superintendance of R. W. Ernst, Esq., Chairman of the Property Committee. The ceilings and walls have all been beautifully tinted, before which, they were washed and defects repaired. The black boards have all been repaired or renewed, and the wheelgristle made as perfect as if just erected. A capacious platform 12 feet wide has been erected in front of the large building, thus doing away with any danger to children in rushing in each large numbers from their rooms. Also a planing has been built between the two school buildings to cover the muddy space in Spring and Fall. A splendid fence 6 feet high has been erected on the north and west side of the grounds, and styles for ingress and egress instead of open gates, as formerly. The closets have been repaired and water closets disinfected and painted. Indeed there is nothing lacking to comfort, cleanliness, and beauty that could be desired. The whole speaks volumes for the good taste of Mr. Ernst, who has spared neither time nor personal oversight in having the repairs done in the most perfect manner. Teachers and pupils will return to splendid apartments.

New Boat and Wetter.—Mr. Geo. Cochrane, Inspector of Fisheries in the waters from Peterborough northward, has had several parties before the P. M. and Magistrates at Lakefield for allowing the sawdust from their mills to fall into the river to the injury of the finny tribes that may desire to frequent these streams and ponds. Mr. Cochrane is an excellent officer, who fearlessly and with out favor discharges the duties of this office, and so far as the politics of the Otonabee is concerned he ought now to be supported, for in our knowledge he is the only officer who ever put on even the appearance of enforcing the law in this respect—indeed we have heard remark that in the past the evil was winked at for a consideration. This may be true, or not true; we do not now care to enquire, but this all will admit, that Mr. C. has performed a very unpleasant duty. In common with others we have witnessed the impotent merchant banks and islands in the bays of the river and Little Lake, and regretted the evil, but saw the difficulty of enforcing the discontinuance of letting the saw dust into the waters at the mills. The old mills were built before the [illegible] water [illegible] consideration from the authorities; how to obtain an existence being then the question of paramount importance. Those mills remain and the construction of machinery to prevent the saw dust getting into the waters, it is held, would almost necessitate the reconstruction of the whole of them. If this be so, it cannot be denied that the present depressed state of the lumber trade would be an inopportune time to throw this on the men in the business. Their position is, therefore, not a pleasant one. They cannot easily avoid violating the law daily. Officer Cochrane cannot change the law and worst of [illegible] the charge of heedlessness if he allowed the violation to pass unnoticed. In the present discharge of his duty it is to some extent, or rather the law is, a little grievous to the saw mill men, and the question arises, what should be done, for at the end of it all comes the enquiries, that the water is being fast rendered unfit even to the heads of the cities on its banks, as well as to the denizens of the water. For our part we must leave the matter with the people generally—the vultures of the genteel name her should be the object of all here. In carrying out our law a few citizens should not be forced to sacrifice more than their fair share of the interests involved in the interest of the whole or [illegible] number. If matters are forced to [illegible] be called upon to pay [illegible] rights. In any case, [illegible] Cochrane deserves credit for the enforcement of a law that cannot reasonably damage against him prevailed heretofore, and complaints, while in the discharge of the duties of his office; for, from our knowledge of the man, we are confident that he very unwillingly puts any of those complaints on business on those writers, to our detriment of expense.

A Terrible Fix.

Laura Dorsheimer's brother Charley, and Laura Dorsheimer's lover, Ned Douglas, were talking together in front of the Dorsheimer residence, ten miles from town. Charley was doing most of the talking.

'Ned,' he was saying, 'I'm glad you've come back, for more reasons than one. I'm in a deuce of a pickle, and I depend upon you to get me out of it.'

'Well, what now?' inquired the other.

'You know the little Follansbee girl?'

'I should think I did! Knew her when her father was a poor man instead of a merchant prince. They are vulgar people. You'd better keep away from them.'

'Well, but you see—your advice comes too late. I'm engaged to Sue.'

'The deuce you are!'

'But I couldn't help it. 'Pon my word, I wasn't myself at all. It was the champagne, the other night at Ottarson's that did it. And, then, she does look pretty when she wears blue; and the lights and the dancing and the moonlight—I tell you, Ned, you'd have done it yourself.'

Ned gave a contemptuous grunt. 'And what do you expect me to do in the matter? I can't take her off your hands very well, seeing that I'm engaged to another woman.'

'Yes; but couldn't you—couldn't you—well, the fact is, Ned, you're a terrible fellow with the women. Laura used to be jealous as thunder of you. Why couldn't you make love to Sue and kind of cut me out, you know? Your engagement to Laura isn't announced yet. If she really thought you were in earnest she'd go back on me quick enough. She don't care a pin for me; all that she wants is position.'

'And you expect me to deliberately win her affections and then throw her over, do you? May I ask what you take me for?'

'Pooh! It's no more than she would do with me. Besides, she hasn't any affections.'

'And just imagine, too,' Ned went on, 'how Laura would cut up about it—seeing me waking love to another girl! No, I thank you. Get yourself out of your own scrapes.'

'But you might make up to her enough to get the letter.'

'Letter! What letter?'

'Why, you see, she made me write her a letter of proposal. Said she wouldn't let me kiss her until I did, and I was very far gone between her and the champagne just then.'

'Well you are a noodle. I can't imagine how a girl like Laura came to have such an idiot for a brother.'

'What's done is done,' said poor Charley, disconsolately, too much absorbed in his pickle to heed this rather severe language. 'At any rate if you won't help me out of it, you will have the pleasure of meeting the Follansbee soon, as your sister-in-law.'

'By Jove it is rough on all of us. I'll never speak to her though. Can't she be bought off?'

'No, it isn't money she wants. Plenty already.'

'If it wasn't for that letter! She hasn't any other hold on you. Has she?'

'No.'

'Are that she don't get any more letters. There' one thing that we can do. I know a smart fellow. I'll set him on her. If he can obtain that letter you're all right. If not, Heaven help you! I can't. Your only hope is to make such hot love to her as to disgust her beforehand. I'll see Crandall when I go to town. Good-night. I wish you a pleasant evening with your fiance.'

A fortnight later the matter was being talked over again between the two, in the same place.

'Isn't it time your friend accomplished something?' Charley asked, complainingly.

'He has accomplished all that could be done. I saw him to-day. He throws up the case. He has not got the letter.'

'He must be a duffer.

'I am more than satisfied with what he has done. He sent a reliable woman into the Follansbee family as waiting-maid. She could neither find the letter nor hear anything about it. Then he watched his chance when the old folks were in town, sent a sham telegram to the girls to come at once, and went through the house himself, in the character of a gas-fitter, during their absence. He says in all probability the old man carries the letter about on his own person. From something the waiting-maid overheard, it would seem that Mr. Follansbee is afraid you may coax the letter away from Sue, and so he has taken charge of it. There is just one thing more to be done as a dernier resort. It is a desperate plan, but I've been thinking over it all the afternoon, and I think we ought to risk it.'

'For goodness sake, name it,' Charlie cried impatiently. 'Anything but marrying that girl.

'Well, every Wednesday night old Follansbee attends a board meeting. He is fond of walking; and, as the weather is now, the chances are he'll come along to-morrow night about ten o'clock on foot and alone. Mr. Ottarson you know comes part way with him. But there is the Walnut Grove between here and Ottarson's. What do you say to you and I disguising ourselves as tramps, tackling the old gentleman—tying him fast and going through his pockets? If that letter is on his person, we'll find it. Then you can go back on the girl as soon as you please. I suppose she deserves it.'

'Well, you may be sure that's what I will do, just let the get that letter back. Of course I'll help you. To-morrow night did you say?'

'Yes. There's plenty of time between [illegible]

'Is he likely to meet [illegible]' said Eleanor May, indignantly.

'I'm not talking to you, Miss Impudence,' said Maude, with a great assumption of high disregard for the pink flush that overspread her brown braids of hair, and her hazel eyes sparkled beneath their long lashes, while Maud, the beauty of the family, leaned out of the window, her pretty tresses scarred up in crimping papers, and a gingham wrapper buttoned carelessly at the throat, with no ornamental accessories in the way of collars, frills or ribbon bows; for Maud had been to a party the night before, and had slept late, scolding her mother because the coffee was cold, and absolutely declining any interference with the household affairs that day.

'Exactly like a cornet!' said Maud, suppressing a yawn. 'Talk and dark, with such a great diamond on his little finger, and eyes like cherry wine. And he guessed so surprised to think I recognized him through his disguise!'

'What costume did he assume?' asked Eleanor May, who, not having received an invitation to the fancy dress ball at Mrs. Pipington's, was naturally exceedingly inquisitive on the subject.

'A pirate,' said Maud, 'with a black velvet cap, you know, and a scarlet sash and cutlass. And he declared that he would disguise himself so completely next time that I couldn't possibly identify him, and he wagered a box of kid gloves on the question.'

'I suppose he means at Lizzie Hooker's birthday party?' said Olive.

'Of course,' said Maud.

'I wish I could go,' said Olive, working diligently away at the pass, that dropped like emerald rain in the shining tin pan.

'Well, you can't,' replied Maud, shortly. 'Mamma says she cannot afford two fancy dresses, and I am the oldest.'

'Yes, I know,' said Olive meekly.

'And Mr. Medlicot danced only once with you last night,' added Maud, unable to repress her exultation, 'and he waltzed with me three times, besides the German!'

Little Olive looked shyly up at her sister, secretly wishing that Providence had seen fit to make her also a beauty.

'I suppose,' said Miss May, curiously, 'that he is very rich?'

'O, very!' nodded Maud.

And Olive's thoughts jumped at once to the idea of how beautiful her sister would look in the regulation orange blossom and white tulle.

'I wonder if I ever shall be married?' pondered Olive, shelling peas faster than ever.

'Whos that coming around the corner of the house?' cried Maude with some asperity. 'One of those everlasting peddlers again? Oh, it's only a scissors grinder.'

'And very fortunate, too,' said Mrs. Satterly, a pale, over-worked little woman with light hair and faded complexion, 'for my shears are so bad I can't cut with 'em. And there's the embroidery scissors, a pair that belong to the mending basket—'

'How much do you ask a pair?' demanded Maude, sailing out on the garden path, with her pretty feet thrust into slip-shod slips, soiled wrapper torn down on one side, and her hair yet in the loose, tangled curls, which bed hung like coiled gold down her back the night before.

The man—a swart-browed, stooping foreigner—set his wheel upon the grass, bowed low with a smile that disclosed teeth gleaming whitely through his thick, bushy beard, and held up six fingers in pantomic gesture.

'That's too much,' said Maude.

'He can't understand you,' Eleanor said, laughing.

Miss Satterly shook her head, stamped her little untidy foot, held up six pairs of scissors in various stages of dilapidation, and displayed a silver quarter of a dollar.

The scissors grinder smiled again, made an obeisance nearly to the ground, and assented to the bargain with numerous nods and signs.

'Isn't he funny?' said Eleanor.

'Horrid vellveteen-coated fellow,' said Maude. 'To think that he belongs to the same humanity with my divine Algeron.

'He looks tired and thirsty,' said gentle-hearted Olive. 'I've a great mind to offer him a drink.'

'You'll do no such a thing,' said Maude imperiously. 'I will have no sister of mine running to wait on scissors grinders! Mamma, is that chocolate ready yet?'

'Chocolate?' repeated poor Mrs. Satterly with a conscience-stricken air. 'I declare I forgot all about it. But I'll run directly and set it boiling.'

Maude Satterly crimsoned to the very temples.

'Forgot!' repeated she. 'You're always forgetting! I never saw any one like you in my life! No, I won't have it now. If you can't prepare my chocolate when I want it you shan't prepare it at all. I should think you might have thought of it, Olive.'

'I am very sorry, Maude,' began Olive, apologetically; 'but for all that, I think you should not speak so crossly to mother.'

'Hold your tongue,' said Maude, stamping her foot again. 'Do you suppose I am going to be tortured by you? I shall speak as I please, and so I give you fair warning. Dear me, how that scissor grinder's buzz makes my head ache!'

And she swept into the house in her fair fury.

When Olive came in, a few minutes afterwards, with the pair of scissors all sharpened and burnished up to a scientific state of brilliancy, her sister was lying on the sofa, with her face turned towards the wall and her eyes resolutely closed.

'Oh, dear me!' thought Olive. 'I am afraid she is in one of her sulking fits that lasts twenty-four hours at a time.'

And she took advantage of the circumstances to pour out a goblet of ice-water and offer it to the Italian when she carried out the silver quarter he had so hardly earned.

He bowed low once more, after the oriental fashion, drank it eagerly, and astonished Olive very much by raising her hand to his lips, as he uttered the words 'Buon giorno signorina,' and departed.

'I suppose it's his foreign way,' said Olive, turning rosy.

'It's lucky for you Maude didn't see him,' laughed Eleanor.

'Oh, Eleanor, don't tell her!' Olive said blushing deeper than ever.

'Of course I shan't,' said Eleanor.

* * * * * * * *

'Well, what luck?' demanded Guy Mariner, as he sat smoking at his window that evening, and hailed with acclamation the approach of Algeron Medlicate.

'I've won my wager.'

'No!'

'But by the shades of Mahommed, I have accosted Medlicote, sitting down where the cool breeze of twilight could fan his brow.

'How did you manage?'

'I disguised myself as a scissors grinder, and put the family shears in perfect order.'

'Did they suspect—the young ladies I mean?'

'Not in the least.'

'And how does the fair one with the golden locks appear in the seclusion of her own home?'

'Like a shrewish vixen,' said he. 'Had it been anything else but the testimony of my own eyes I couldn't have believed it. But Olive—little heaven-eyed Olive—she is a jewel of the very first water.'

'So you have transferred your affections from one sister to another?' laughed Mariner.

'But is it not rather hard for the former Maude to learn her lesson and her wager at the same time?'

'Bah! a spoiled monk,' said Medlicote, gayly shifting his hand, 'but the diary words symbol his perfect equity here; the half-rose like open gold, half-shut-up-in-green are just becoming to the female face. And [illegible] which, Mariner, I think I have [illegible] a lively wife.

Cows Holding up Their Milk.

There is no necessity to prevent a cow from holding up her milk. Gentleness and kind treatment will in most cases accomplish the desired result. If this fails the cow may be given some palatable food while being milked. But with the latter practice, the danger is that she will become confirmed in the habit, and cannot be milked without being fed at the same time.

Weak Ankles.

A Remedy.

Probably the best that can be done for a horse that knuckles over at the 'ankles' from hard driving, is to give him liberty on an open pasture. In shoeing, it is better to use nothing, and no toe-piece, instead of trying to force the 'ankle' into a natural position by using shoes without heels. The horse assumes the knuckling position simply to relieve the strained tendons; and, which position, for the proper good of the limbs, he should be entitled to [illegible]

Fortune Bay Claim.

The Fisheries Question.

A Washington despatch says:—The claim for $163,000 damages on account of illegal interference with American fishermen at Fortune Bay, which the State Department presented to the British Government, is not a claim for any part of the Halifax Award. The Government has no intention of making claim for an abatement or any request for a reconsideration of the Halifax Award. The claim is for specific grievances, based upon actual loss to American fishermen in consequence of a violent invasion of their Treaty rights at Fortune Bay. It is also sought to obtain some security against the recurrence of similar offences. Advices received by the State Department represent that although no action of violence has occurred this year, our fishermen are deterred by apprehensions of violence from carrying on their business. We are therefore deriving no benefit from our agreement with the British Government. The feeling between our fishermen and the British justify apprehensions of violence and bloodshed; the Government is therefore anxious that steps be taken by the British Government to do away with the local prohibitory laws of the Provinces which now practically nullify treaty provisions of far higher authority.

Mitchell's Belladonna Improved India Rubber Porous Paster.

There never has been a time when the healing of so many different diseases has been treated by outward application as the present. It is an undisputed fact that over half of the entire population of the globe resort to the use of ordinary plasters.

The principal ingredients used in making these Plasters are Gum Olibanum—or better known as the Frankincense of the Bible—Rubber, and Burgundy Pitch which, when scientifically compounded, is full of electricity and when combined with the pure medicinal gums, is found to be one greatest healing mediums ever brought before the human race.

They are acknowledged by all who have used them to act quicker than any other Plasters they ever before tried, and that one of these Plasters will do more real service than a hundred of the ordinary kind. All other Plasters are slow of action, and require to be worn continually to effect a cure; but with these it is entirely different; the instant one is applied the patient will feel its effect.

They possess all the soothing, warming, supporting and strengthening qualities of all other Plasters. Many who have been relieved of RHEUMATISM, TICDOLOREUX, and various other pains in the KIDNEYS, BREAST or SIDE, and believe it is solely done by the electrical qualities which the Porous Plasters contain, and which is imparted to the system, thus restoring them to a healthy condition.

They are very soft and pliable, still very adhesive; and a sure cure for WEAK BACKS PAINS IN THE SIDE AND BREAST, and are invaluable to those who have a COLD of long standing, and often prevents CONSUMPTION. Some even tell us they believe they were entirely cured by the use of them of a long fasted Consumption.

Joy Among the Children.

COPLAND'S SWEET CASTOR OIL, equally suitable for children and adults. Endorsed by over 600 doctors in Canada.

The difficulty of administering nauseous medicines, and the desirability of having them pleasant to the taste, induced T. Copland to an heritable researches which resulted in the discovery of a Sweet Castor Oil, perfectly palatable, of the same strength and medical qualities as the ordinary Castor Oil, and while equally safe and harmless, yet acting with more certainty, and producing neither nausea nor griping. Some children say it is honey; others call it syrup—they all say they like it. One parent says—'My children drink it like water;' another—'We had to hide the bottle or they would have finished it right off;' another—'My little girl has taken it twice without any trouble, and does not know what it is, though she hates the ordinary Castor Oil and we never could get her to take it without a fight;' yet another—'I wish you manufacture your Sweet Castor Oil; it is a splendid thing—sure to take the place of all the common oil.'

The extraordinary demand for this improvement on a staple household medicine has brought fraudulent imitations into the market, but the public can guard themselves against substitutes (which unprincipled parties are attempting to sell on the reputation of this article) by noting that the name of 'COPLAND'S Sweet Castor Oil,' is on both wrapper and directions label.

The undersigned having purchased from T. Copland & Co.'s interest in the above preparations, are now manufacturing it from the purest quality, Jamaica Castor Oil, and [illegible]

SCHOOL BOOKS NOW BOUND IN IRON.

(HOPE'S PATENT.)

This remarkable invention entirely does away with the too frequent complaint that books come to pieces in the students hands, before they have done reasonable service. The Iron Books are warranted to remedy this evil.

Description of the Improvement.

The point of advantage in this Binding is simply that by the opening and closing of the book there is no friction, which is the destructive element of all ordinary binding.

By the patent method the leaves of the books are fastened by wire pins, inserted near the back margin, the ends of the pins being turned down and lying parallel with, the margin, clamping the leaves together.

A back of thin metal is pressed on the back, with flanges overlapping the ends of the pins, which prevents the leaves from tearing from the pins, as is the case with wire, sewing or tape work.

By a peculiar curve in the pins, perfect flexibility is secured in the opening of the volume, the whole forming a perfect and substantial binding, at the same time indestructible by wear and tear.

Ready in Iron binding, same prices as ordinary;

The Little Grave on the Hill.

There's a spot on the hillside for every,
Where, in summer, the green grass grows;
Where, beneath a tombstone, some lover's slumbers,
A sweet emerald shroud to mock,
'Tis a quiet and undisturbed spot.
A solitude lone and still;
Yet—somebody's love lies buried there—
'Tis the grave of a little child.

In winter, alas! that dreary stone
Is half 'neath a drapery of snow;
But around it, in spring time, fresh and sweet,
The violets and daisies blow;
And over it the summer breezes blow,
With a freedom cold and mild.
And the autumn's dead leaves thickly strew
That grave of a little child.

And, every year, there's a retirement comes
When the month of May draws nigh,
And bathe her soul in this calm spot,
Till the old grief becomes bearable light;
While her motherly sorrow, by the hour, she tells,
As if by the moon beguiled.
Perhaps—who knows? 'tis an angel comes
To the grave of that little child.

Yes, somebody's hopes lie buried there.
Some mother is weeping in vain;
For, though years may go, and years may go,
Twill never cease to be sweet.
Yet blessed are those who die in youth.
The pure and undefiled.
Some road to heaven, perchance, runs through
That grave of a little child.

THE GALT DEMONSTRATION.

Hon. Edward Blake's Speech to the Working-men—An Review and Forecast.

Hon. Edward Blake in his reply to the address presented by the working-men of Galt at the late Reform demonstration in that town, after dealing elaborately with the fundamental principles that underlie the relations subsisting between trade and labor proceeded to touch on

THE "BLEMISHES" OF PROTECTION.

The gentlemen who say they have settled to the best advantage the question of tariff and revenue—gentlemen who told you they would make you all happy and rich if you would put them in power—gentlemen who told you they were making you happy and rich by the laws they were passing at Ottawa—gentlemen who told you they had made you all happy and rich after they had passed these laws (Hear, hear, and laughter.) I don't know whether it is true or not—I don't know whether you have all been made happy and rich. (Laughter.) But I am reminded of an anecdote of a gentleman who went to a shoemaker who had made a pair of shoes for him and said: "This shoe doesn't fit." The shoemaker says, "It does." "Well, it doesn't," replied the gentleman; "it is making a blister on my foot." "I tell you it does fit," persists the shoemaker, "for I made it and I know better than you." (Loud laughter and cheers.) I do not know whether those gentlemen at Ottawa tell you that your shoe fits and that if you have a blister you have made it yourself out of pure wrong-headedness. (Renewed cheers and laughter.) Mr. Mercer and the others down at Ottawa have settled all that for you. (Loud laughter and cheers.) I was amused also at the conduct of some people who, before the 5th of June, alleged that it was vital to the interests of this country that Mr. Mowat's Government should be defeated in order that the National Policy might be sustained. These same gentlemen, since the elections have been calling on the Liberal party forsooth, to come forward and provide a remedy for the stagnation and difficulty in which this country is plunged, notwithstanding the National Policy. (Laughter.) And I myself have been told that I am not doing my duty as a private citizen if that party it do not come forward and provide some remedy which may relieve you from the immense blessing which you received from the gentlemen at Ottawa. (Renewed laughter.) I prefer that you should enjoy this blessing a little longer. I think we should all watch its bearings on all sides. I have no doubt these gentlemen are correct when they say that the promises they made before the elections were merely election promises. (Hear, hear, and laughter.) I have no doubt they were right when they say that you should have taken their assertion, that confidence would be restored as soon as they were returned to power, with a large grain of allowance. (Hear, hear.) I have no doubt they were right in telling you that it was absurd to expect the full benefits, if benefits they are, of the National Policy immediately after its adoption, and that they gulled you when they told you before the elections that you would receive the benefits of the change immediately after the tariff passed, or before it passed. I have no doubt that we have not penetrated the perfections of this tariff yet. I have no doubt that it will act in diverse ways if it remains, but I am not so anxious as these gentlemen are to propound means for getting rid of the blessings which it confers. They have got their National Policy, and I am disposed as a humble member of this community whom they have taxed, to pay my taxes and wait to see what their proposals are for getting rid of the blessing before we advance ours. (Hear, hear, and laughter.) My general principles I have explained to you to-night. My view is that we have gone on the wrong path, and I go for retracing our steps and getting on the right path again. I go for that freedom of exchange or trade, and I do not believe we can get on the way to full free trade until there be a reversal of the present tariff legislation. (Loud cheers.) Well, Mr. Chairman, I rejoice that these questions attract the attention of the people of this country; still it is to be regretted that the plausible but false doctrine of the protectionists had such an unfortunate effect at the general election. I believe there are sections in many of the constituencies where the subjects have been thoroughly discussed, and that the people see through them. In a discussion before the people the protectionist has the advantage over the free trader that he holds out inducements of apparently higher prices for goods and better wages for labor, advantages which are as it were visible to the eye; but his opponent must prove these advantages to be only apparent by a course of abstract reasoning; and therefore it is that the country took the wrong view, though by a very narrow majority of the people. We have everything to gain by a discussion of the subject. We must seek to have the people informed on the subject as on all other subjects.

THE PRIVILEGES AND DUTIES OF CITIZENSHIP.

The masses here have not the excuse of those in other countries where the work of maintaining life is forced upon them as the main consideration. You have widely extended franchise. You have great privileges, but you have them only on condition that you exercise them. You ought to make use of all the means of advancement within your reach—newspapers, books, clubs, facilities for communication, and to take a real, lively and constant interest in the great concerns of the country. This is the duty of all citizens in this great community, and disobeying that duty, I believe we may hope for a political and social elevation unsurpassed by any country in the world. I thank you very heartily for the kind allusions made to my late public career. That career has covered a period of about twelve years, in which were held seventeen sessions of Parliament, eight general elections (in six of which I took an active part), eleven protracted elections, and three Ministerial crises, involving the defeat of Ministers and the formation of new Governments. That may constitute you then I had my fill of political life, and that I might fairly withdraw from the arena. (Cheers and laughter.)

RETIREMENT AND RESPONSIBILITY.

In the course of that time I have been engaged in a good deal of discussion, political and even much more political discussion, and I have sometimes wished that the veil might be removed to some extent, and that the half-lights in which public men's actions, as well as the actions of private individuals, are also by the means of the consistently might be heightened, which would have obviated the cause of much of the misapprehension and misconstruction. But that time has not arrived, perhaps never will arrive; and it is strange a [illegible] to each of us to know that not what a man seems to his fellow-men, but what he is, is after all the matter of vital importance to himself. (Hear, hear, and cheers.) I am the first to recognize that my career has been marked with many errors and faults. I have repented of them, and amended them as far as I could; but I may not unfairly claim that certain charges that have been made against me have been proved by that career to have been without foundation. However far I may have erred in judgment, however wrongly I may have conducted my political career, I think it has been reasonably established by facts that I have never been animated by the unworthy motives that have been charged against me. It was urged at one part of my career that my object was to obtain high judicial office. But the highest judicial offices have been offered to and declined by me. It was charged against me that my desire was to obtain distinguished honor, but these have also been offered and declined. It was charged that I sought to obtain high political offices and distinction, but it is well known that I have always refused such, and when I accepted, accepted with the greatest reluctance, and resigned with the greatest alacrity any position of leadership or office in the State. At the close of my political career, perhaps few ever, but as all events for a period, I think I may not unfairly say that that career has not been darkened by the particular blemishes which have been charged against me. I am free to admit that I have entertained an ambition, in common with many public men who are often unfairly judged, and I believe it to be a laudable ambition. We entertain the ambition of doing some good in the world, and leaving it a little better than we found it. This is the only real and worthy ambition. That is the only ambition whose fruition can give ease or satisfaction when the end of life approaches and we are beyond the limits of time. I admit sir, that we do desire, if we may be worthy of it, the confidence and good will of our fellow men, and that we do shape our political careers with a view worthily to attain that confidence—but I say frankly to you, not as an end. I do not think that would be an adequate end of public career. I do not think my colleagues in public life believe, however gratifying and flattering that confidence and good feeling might be, that it would be an adequate end. No; but as a means to accomplish the object which he has in view, to the accomplishment of some good in the world, to being of use in the world, the greatest facility is afforded by our obtaining the confidence and good-will of our fellow men. Those to whom that trust is accorded have a position of enormous power, and have an equally great responsibility. They have a position of enormous power, because many minds are affected by their view of what should be done. They may raise and depress the moral and the political scale of the country to a large extent, and therefore that good will and that confidence is such a powerful means of accomplishing the worthy end to which I refer, therefore it is, I think that the bulk of our public men so earnestly desire if they may worthily deserve it. I think, however, that I may point out that it is not only public men who ought to cherish, and who do cherish, this ambition.—this desire—and who do covet this good-will for that honorable end. To each of us, whatever his lot in life—private citizen like myself, of whatever station of public men—to each of us there is given some opportunity, some talent, some means of doing some good in the world, and let him see that he be to find what that means is, and to honestly avail himself of it. I happen to be provided with a motto whilst suits a radical like myself—Virtus sola nobilitat. But if I wanted a motto, I would be disposed to borrow that of Merlin:

I found a fair young Squire who sat alone:
And carved himself a knightly shield of wood.
And then was painting on it fancied arms,
Azure, an eagle soaring, or the sun,
In device chief, the scroll "I follow fame."
And, speaking not, but leaning over him,
I took his brush, and blotted out the bird.
And made a gardener putting in a graff.
With this for motto, "Rather me than Fame."

That I believe to be a noble motto—a motto of universal application. I believe it to be a motto, the adoption of which, not merely on the part of you here, but elsewhere, would enable us to see our way to the true design and object in life. The use of mottoes and crests is over, the golden age of knighthood is gone, the nobler iron age is present. The high ideal of duty which existed there existing now, with higher objects, more widely diffused consequences, and more widely diffused means for the pursuit of that ideal. And I trust and believe, as all Liberals do, that there will be not merely reforms in politics, but that there will be a general movement onward and upward in the social and moral scale as well. You were kind enough to express a wish for

MY RETURNING TO PARLIAMENT.

When I was dismissed from the service of the State a while ago, it was not my desire to resume that service. I had served as I thought, long enough, and I thought, if not for ever, at least for a long time, I should be permitted to discharge other duties, not so conspicuous, but still not less important duties of citizenship, which I could not under the pressure of public duties. I did not feel called upon under any circumstances to seek a constituency; and I wish to say here publicly what I have said to my friends in private, that I have altogether discountenanced the suggestion that has been made by friends, and sometimes by opponents, that arrangements should be made by the resignation of one of the Liberals now in Parliament to provide me with a constituency. There is a band of Liberals in Parliament who by a sturdy fight—who have won their seats there, and who are entitled to retain them; who are doing good service to their country; and it would be unjust for me to make any suggestion for the displacement of any of them. For my own part I would not desire to obtain a seat in Parliament at the expense of any one of my former friends and colleagues who sit there. It is of course possible that there may be other opportunities. That is uncertain, as well as the contingency of my being honored with an invitation, and even in such a case I do not know that I would take advantage of it. The true part of prudence is to reserve a decision. I must decide according to my sense of duty, and according to the circumstances then existing. But still I have welcomed my present rest as

A lull in life
A truce that breaks the strife.

and I will not forget that in your address this night.

I hear a voice that bids me rest
The restless mind's tormenting toil,
Inquiry cease from fruitless quest,
Rest, discontented with the ever changing land,
And cease from painful search at all.
I hear again a voice that bids
The dreamer leave his dreams midway
For hopes beyond expectation dawn,
Life promises to those that rest,
The contrary to other themes I find

Mr. Blake sat down amid loud and prolonged cheering, which was repeatedly renewed.

Weights and Measures.

The New Regulations—Exposure to Storekeepers and Others.

Regulations respecting the description of weights and measures, balances and weighing machines that will be permitted to verification under the new Weights and Measures Act are published. The following balances are to be admitted to verification: First, balances having equal arms and in which the load is suspended below the fulcrum; second, balances commonly known as steel yards or Roman balances, having equal arms, and on which the load is placed above the fulcrum.

The following forms of Dominion weights will be admitted to verification:

AVOIRDUPOIS WEIGHTS.—H.

From 50 lbs down to 1 pound, cylindrical, with knob. The same with ring. Rectangular block, with ring or handle cast solid. Truncated square pyramid.

From 5 lbs down to one-half drachm. Any of the above forms; also discs in nests.

A 60 lb. weight for the bushel of wheat of some form sufficiently distinct from the form herein described to prevent the one being mistaken for the other.

GRAIN WEIGHTS.

From 1,000 grains down to 10 grains. Cylindrical, with a small rising stem and knob.

Six grains and under. Best platinum or aluminium wire so bent as to represent the number of grains or decimal parts of a grain.

In every case the denomination of the weights, when of sufficient size, must be cast, engraved or stamped on them in bold legible numerals, of a size duly proportioned to the size of the weight.

TROY WEIGHTS.

From 500 ounces down to one ounce. Truncated cone with knob. From five ounces down to .001 ounce, flat square plates.

The denomination to be engraved or stamped on the top of the knob of each weight, in as large numerals as the size of the weight will admit; and also on the face of the smaller weights.

No measure of capacity of which the sides or bottom are indented, battered or knocked out of the regular form, will be admitted to verification, nor any whose bottoms are not sufficiently strong to carry the contents without changing their form.

PLATFORM SCALES, WEIGH-BRIDGES AND BALANCES WITH UNEQUAL ARMS.

All these weighing machines will be rejected—

1st. When, with a full load and truly balanced, the movement of the lever weight, and "notch" or division on the graduated lever, in either direction, does not cause the lever to turn decidedly in accordance with each movement.

2nd. When, with a full load, or with any less load, and with the balance in equilibrium, the addition or removal of one two-thousandth part of the load to or from the load, does not turn the lever decidedly in accordance with such addition or removal.

Woman's "No."

The London Truth offered a prize for the best letter, the subject to be the refusal of an offer of marriage. The result was an inundation nearly filling the editor's office. Here are samples, beginning with "Portia," who took the prize:

DEAR Mr. ———I am very sorry; I appreciate you immensely, but I cannot give the casket without the gem.
PORTIA.

Sweet sounds that give delight and hurt not.—[Tempest.

DEAR MR. CALIBAN.—In declining the honor of an offer from you I am constrained to owe, in justice to my judgment, that I only refuse such as one because I have accepted such another.
MIRANDA.

Friend ever, husband never.
A. E. P.

No, thank you.
SWEET PEA.

DEAR Mr.———: Take back your offer. I cannot send a refusal to you, the friend I so value and esteem.
LANARK.

No, dear; mother says I mustn't.
POOR POLLY.

DEAR SIR.—In declining a proposal which I trust you will believe I appreciate as the highest compliment you could have paid me, I beg to assure you in all sincerity, that upon a review of my own demerits it is my belief that my refusal to your offer of marriage is the best and most unselfish return I can make you. Believe me, dear sir, yours sincerely.
PINK DOMINO.

MY DEAR EDWIN.—There is nothing in the world I value more than your friendship. You suggest to me the adoption of a course by which I should most certainly lose it. How cruel! how unkind! But the strength of my regard makes me invulnerable to temptation. I am too much your friend to marry you, and such I hope always to remain. Ever your sincere friend,
ANGELINA.

DEAR SIR.—You chanced to say accidentally in a recent conversation that your digestion was not good. This being the case, I feel it would be unwise for me to accept the proposal you have just made, for amiability of temper and chronic dyspepsia, as I know too well from my dear father's case, are utterly incompatible one with another. The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, SEPT'R 4, 1879.

THE QUEBEC DEAD-LOCK.

After having vainly tried by repeated resolutions of want of confidence, aided by committees of investigation into farcical charges, and the wasting of the patience and money of the people, to defeat the Joly Administration, the Opposition in the Quebec Assembly has called in the aid of the Tory Legislative Council. This body has passed a series of resolutions in which, after noticing the lack of money (for which the Opposition is responsible), and the fact that the propositions of the Speech from the Throne have not been literally carried out, a demand is made that the Lieutenant Governor should dismiss the Ministry. Without noticing the reference to money further than to point out that the wasteful tactics of the Opposition in the Assembly look like a purpose toward such a move by the nominative branch of the Legislature, we must declare upon the untenableness of the principle involved in the complaint regarding the Speech. An application of it to any Speech delivered at the opening of a Session of Parliament would compel the existence of the Ministry responsible for it to depend on adherence to a cast-iron course during that particular session. Following it out to its strict interpretation, it would prevent the postponement or improvement of any legislation suggested in the Speech, or the introduction of new subjects, however important, arising subsequent to the opening of the session. In general adherence to the programme first laid down by Mr. Joly, he has been sustained by the House of Assembly in spite of a ferocious opposition, unprecedented in parliamentary annals. This surely should satisfy those who placed so much stress on the power of a majority in that House when they sought to drag Mr. Letellier from the vice-regal throne. Then the popular will could not be found outside a majority in the elective branch of the legislature for a whole parliamentary term; yet, now the same party seeks to override that power by the ipse dixit of the elective branch. They condemned Lieut.-Governor Letellier for what was at most a stretch of prerogative; yet, now rejoice and seek to defend the action of an utterly irresponsible body of men in obstructing the uncondemned action of the people's representatives, and asking Lieut.-Governor Robitaille to do the very same thing for which they pretend Mr. Letellier was dismissed. No wonder their cool demand was refused; and that the Lieut.-Governor expresses a want confidence in his responsible advisers in expressing the hope that they "will find some means of re-establishing harmony between the two branches of the Legislature." It is to be hoped that the nominative will gracefully give way to the elective and popular body, instead of forcing an election on a Province which, in the admittedly deplorable state of her exchequer, cannot afford the expense of a general election. Mr. Joly has, during the session, several times resisted strong temptations to appeal to the people, and this will show that if an election be necessary through the stubbornness of the Legislative Council it will not be his fault, but that of his opponents, who will all the more likely, on that account, meet with a sweeping electoral condemnation.

THE WOOLLEN TRADE.

Mr. Rosamond, of the Almonte woollen mills, still pretends to cling to the belief that 'in due time' the people will reap the results of the National Policy. But they are reaping its results already; and these results are by no means satisfactory. Mr. Rosamond while attempting to deny that the mills in which he is interested have shut down for an indefinite period, really admits that such is the case; for he says the cessation of production is to assist the disposal of goods accumulated in manufacturers' agents and dealer's hands. Here is proof of the EXAMINER's prediction that a protective tariff must soon have the effect of overstocking the 'home market,' for which so much concern was manifested by the National Policyists. It is pretended that this effect is due to the former tariff. This can scarcely be the case; but if so, how much more must the exclusive policy that destroys foreign trade tend to such a result? The 'home market,' so much desired for Canadian-made woollens is so much more than fully supplied already that the principal manufacturers have to shut down to enable their agents to get rid in some way of the surplus stock. The same admission is made by Mr. Elliott, another Almonte manufacturer; and similar reasons are given by woollen manufacturers on every hand for shutting down or running on part time as most of them are forced to do. This has the same effect on their employees as would a reduction of wages; for the work-people are enabled to earn only a part of their former weekly pay. These manufacturers who still declare that they were not themselves deceived when they made glowing promises to their employees in regard to the N. P., are only convicting themselves of having practised wilful deception upon those who worked for them, and who are now bitterly disappointed of the hopes with which they were so very mistakenly inspired. It is all very well for such employers to say that they exercised no influence on their 'hands' as to whom they should vote for; but the world knows, and they know too, that their anti-election speeches in public and expressions in private were such as to lead the poor workingmen to believe that it would be to their pecuniary interest to vote for the N. P. candidate in their division. How that belief influenced them, and how sadly they were mistaken the employees of the N. P. manufacturers can now tell for themselves.

PETTY CASES IN THE COURTS.

Complaint is sometimes made that magistrates extend their powers in dealing with cases brought before them, but in instances where actual wrong has been done an easy remedy is afforded by an appeal. But there is another extreme to which many of our Justices of the Peace go, and which leads to consequences far more serious to the general public in the way of an increase of already hard felt taxes. This is the commitment for trial at the County Courts of persons accused of offences of comparatively trivial character, and which are quite within the province of the magistrate to deal with finally—subject of course, to the usual appeal of the prisoner, if he see fit to make such appeal. But in most, if not in all cases such as we allude to, such appeal would not be made, for the magistrate does not send a case up for trial except on such evidence as will usually secure a conviction. Where then is the use of bringing the expensive machinery of the higher court to bear, and cumbering people, judges, juries and witnesses, as well as the pockets of the taxpayers with cases that might and should receive summary disposal by the magistrates before whom they are first brought? Of what use are magistrate's courts if they cannot relieve the County Courts of petty cases? As well send them at once to the higher tribunals, and thus save the trouble and expense of what, in most instances, turns out to be a mere preliminary examination—for the puzzling, rather than the direction, of a grand jury. Only cases in which a magistrate has doubts of his legal jurisdiction should be sent for trial by him; and only such magistrates should be allowed to retain their commission as inform themselves upon the extent of their official powers. The levying upon magistrates of the fees in petty cases sent up by them unnecessarily, might have the salutary effect of awakening them to the duty they owe to the country, in the interests of which they pretend to hold Commissions of the Peace, and to the necessity of knowing more thoroughly the full duties of their position.

Strathroy Age:—Although our Premier has dined with Her Majesty, the Queen, Canadians can still walk upright. They recollect that Barnum was also once a guest at the royal table.

Mr. Angus will not, it is now said, relinquish his managership of the Bank of Montreal so soon as he had intended, and the appointment of a successor is, therefore, indefinitely postponed.

Judge Macpherson, of Owen Sound, was fined $1 and costs a few days ago by Magistrate Creasor, for striking Dr. C. E. Barnhart, Warden of the County of Grey.

Bonaventure is so pronounced in its Toryism that it was wisely decided not to contest the election, and Mr. Beauchesne was allowed to quietly step into Dr. Robitaille's shoes.

The Gowan investigation, which was to have proved Mr. Joly's corruptibility, but didn't, cost the taxpayers of Quebec five thousand dollars—just double what the Government got for the Notre Dame des Anges farm!

The Grand Trunk Railway Company closed arrangements Tuesday which will secure an unbroken through line from Chicago to Portland. The last link it is expected, will be completed before the first of December.

It is proposed in Quebec to save from $10,000 to $12,000 per annum by the abolition of useless coroners' inquests. In is asserted that many inquests are held there merely for the sake of the fees, and instances of the same kind are not infrequent in Ontario.

The death is announced of the Rev. M. Willis, D.D., LL.D., so long and so intimately connected with the interests of Presbyterianism in Canada, which event took place at Edinburgh, Scotland, on the 19th inst in the eightieth year of his age.

These Almonte woollen people are making themselves ridiculous. They know, or ought to know that the N. P. will not do them any permanent good, and that all the N. P.'s in the world will not prevent them from cutting each others' throats by over-production—the real evil.

The twenty-second motion of want of confidence in Mr. Joly's Government proposed during the present session was defeated on Tuesday afternoon by a vote of 24 to 21. Mr. Joly declines to propose a confidence with the council a second time.

The London Times in discussing the fishery question, says the Imperial fisheries are the fashionable heritage of Canada and Newfoundland, and these countries must say on what terms the right to fish in the inshore waters shall be granted. The Times regrets that the whole question must soon come up again.

Our recent article on the work and encumbrances of township clerks, has been extensively copied by the press of the province. We only hope it may lead to a discussion whereby something like justice may be done to a useful, but ill-paid class of officials. At the same time we must admit our inspiration by the Whitby Chronicle. Keep it up, brothers.

London Advertiser:—A look at the list of new barristers and attorneys just graduated leads us to ask what they are all going to do. The country seems to be well supplied at present, and litigation does not increase in proportionate ratio to the lawyers. The moral is that all young men should learn a trade or farm for a living.

It is said that for the first time in their existence the Allan steamers are compelled to bring coal out to Canada—as ballast. This is the result of the "N. P.," which paralyses importation. The Allan steamers cannot get full cargoes of merchandise as they once did and the consequence is they have to bring out British coal as ballast.

It is reported that Mr. Forbes, the celebrated correspondent of the Daily News, is to be recommended for some distinction at the hand of Her Majesty. His usefulness has not been confined to newspaper reports, but on two different occasions he has brought important despatches for the Government at the risk of his life, and arriving long before the official couriers.

The large number of 2,441 patents, covering 506,788 acres of land in Manitoba and the North-west territory, were issued from the Dominion land office last year. Of these patents 1,224, covering 290,540 acres, were half-breed grants; 470, covering 123,163 acres, were sales; 197, covering 37,002 acres, were for homesteads; 84 covering 13,270 acres were for land warrants, and 466, covering 52,816 acres, were for parish lands.

India with all her resources of wealth is not as rich as many people imagine. A very large portion of her income is spent in maintaining an immense army and a very considerable navy. The cost of the army involves a yearly expenditure of seventeen millions of pounds. That of her navy, seventy thousand pounds per annum. The military bodies of India are large, and number about two hundred thousand men, including native regiments.

The Journal of Commerce says. "Business men are open in their expressions of regret that it was deemed advisable to bring about a change in the management of the Bank of Montreal at a commercial juncture so ill fitted for any disturbing event." The same journal concludes that "the present and prospective condition of cotton manufacturing in this country is healthy and promising, and that the localised and directly ascertainable effects will be profitable to all immediately concerned, as well as helpful and encouraging to business generally."

Sarnia Observer:—Sir Charles Tupper has ordered another 45,000 tons of steel rails in England. What has become of the thousands of tons that the same Sir Charles told us were rotting and rusting all the way from Montreal to Vancouver, and which could not be used for ten years to come? Also, where are the iron works and rolling mills which the N. P. was to bring into existence for the manufacture of all the rails that Canada might require?

How the farmers have been defrauded out of what they were pledged by the N.P.! They were distinctly promised that all the wheat allowed to be milled in Canada would be wheat grown on Canadian farms by Canadian farmers. No disloyal republican grain was to be allowed to compete in Canada. Yet we find all the big city millers of Canada are allowed to bring all the wheat they like from the United States without paying a cent of duty; or, what amounts to the same thing, they pay it, and it is afterwards refunded to them.

Says the Belleville Ontario:—We have received the following from Mr. Fuller in answer to an inquiry:—"A few loads of barley sold last season as high as $1.20; considerable was sold at $1.13; and a large quantity at $1.10." It will be seen therefore that we are justified in putting the difference in the price of barley at 70 cents a bushel instead of 60 cents. We know of several farmers who harvested last year from 800 to 1,000 bushels of this crop, and who will harvest about the same this season. Their loss under the N. P on barley alone, will be from $560 to $700 Won't they cheer for Sir John and his National Policy?

A cable despatch to the Globe says:—Colonel Grey has succeeded Mr. Childers as President of the Great Western Railway Company. He has written a letter on behalf of the Board, accepting the proposal of the Grand Trunk to appoint Sir Edward Watkin as arbitrator, and to consult him with reference to the most practicable mode of effecting a joint purse arrangement with the least possible delay. General satisfaction is felt that the Great Western Board has at last yielded. The Dominion Government has given its assent to the joint purse arrangement.

The Lindsay Post says:—We received a call from Mr. J. B. Campbell, of Port Perry, discoverer of the principal mineral deposits of the north, which are now attracting considerable attention. Mr. Campbell has lately devoted a great deal of time to prospecting on properties he owns in the back country. Last week he discovered a bed of plumbago, or graphite of superior quality on Lot 16, con. 13 Galway. He opened the bed in three places and found evidences of a very large deposit. He also discovered wilhite in a few days a bed of hematite ore in the township of Latterworth, near the Victoria Railway. He reports only a couple of miles of iron to be laid upon Mr. Myles' railway, and says that as soon as it is in running order various mines will be at once uncovered.

Some very plain truths are now being stated by the press in regard to the condition of the workingmen. An exchange thus speaks of the way it finds things in Brantford:—Owing to the depression and lack of employment in Brantford, a large number of mechanics and workingmen during the last few weeks and months have left for the United States. This is a fact that is patent to anyone who is at all in a position to note the change of passing events. Scores have left for the other side and are leaving now, and by the fall the number will be increased to hundreds. A strong supporter of the "National Policy" stated a few days ago, that comparing the present time with three years ago, there was not near the amount of business done in the city, and that there were a number of men out of employment who would accept work at any price.

Farmers of this section of Ontario have a superabundant hay crop this season. It is a question with many what they will do with the surplus, as the local demands will be light, and the price scarcely enough to pay for drawing it to market. The proposition to feed stock for exportation is receiving some attention, but it is not probable that the majority of farmers are in a position to enter into this industry to any considerable extent. The hay crop of England is unusually short this season, and shipments are already being made in a pressed state. Should the experiment prove remunerative, a profitable and extensive trade may spring up, which will relieve our farmers of their surplus and return them fair profits. It is certain, however, that more stock must be fed, or less land devoted to hay; but another season may quite reverse the order of affairs and made hay a valuable article in the market.

The Banks and the N. P.

The reports of the directors of the several banks are crushing commentaries upon the pretensions of the N. P. people, and we reprint a few from many that could be selected:—

The Imperial Bank says that "owing to the uneasy feeling which has prevailed in financial circles, " " and the protracted stagnation in business," it is obliged to reduce its dividend.

The Federal Bank states "that there is little to warrant the hope of much improvement in the general trade of the country for some years to come." And again alluding to the depression, says: "This depression is widespread, embracing all branches of trade in the Dominion, without a hopeful look for an early change for the better."

The Ontario Bank says:—"The depression existing in the commercial affairs of the country, referred to in our last annual report, we regret to say has not diminished, but has in fact been intensified."

The Bank of Toronto says:—"The Directors exceedingly regret the times through which the trade of the country has passed and is still passing," and they "refrain from a forecast for the coming year," so little confidence have they in the efficacy of the National Policy.

The Bank of Montreal expresses its opinion thus:—"While the Directors trust the depression in trade, which has so long been painfully felt, has now largely spent its force, the outlook is too uncertain to warrant expectation of an early recovery."

The Consolidated Bank says:—"In view of the continued depression in business, and the consequent shrinkage in the value of property of every description, it could scarcely have been expected that this Bank could have escaped without loss," and eventually is suspended, spreading woe and desolation amongst thousands.

The Exchange Bank says:—"Owing to the depressed and unsatisfactory condition of business throughout the country, &c," it succumbed, and followed in the wake of the Consolidated.

The Quebec Bank says:—"The continued depression in trade, the absence as yet of any distant evidence of revival or improvement, the possibility of further shrinkage in the value of securities and commodities, all considered, have induced them to limit the dividend to the lower rate."

The Bank of Commerce says:—"The general depression referred to in last year's report continues with unabated severity."

It will be seen that the shrinkage in values has been large and general:—

The Work of Municipal Clerks.

An exchange says:

Very few people are aware of the duties municipal clerks have to perform, therefore a short statement of some of the duties of clerks in townships may be interesting to the public; and in villages and towns such duties are far more onerous.

FEBRUARY.—To make out and deliver to assessor the names of parties requiring to be entered on resident assessment roll and the lands owned by them

MARCH.—To make annual returns to the county clerk of the assets and liabilities, receipts and expenditures of the municipality for the preceding year.

APRIL.—To examine rolls for occupation of lands returned as non-residents.

MAY, JUNE, JULY.—To examine assessment roll. Duties in connection with Court of Revision and appeals therefrom. To copy assessment roll and transmit to county treasurer.

JULY, AUGUST, SEPTEMBER.—To prepare and superintend the printing of voters' list; to mail and register the copies to the parties required by the Act. Duties in connection with appeals from voters' list and final allowance by county judge. To make out collector's roll, calculate and insert all rates.

NOVEMBER.—To make out and transmit to county treasurer the non-resident assessment roll.

DECEMBER.—To transmit to Provincial Treasurer a return of resident ratepayers of the municipality.

In addition to the above, the clerk is expected to prepare all by-laws, make out all pathmasters's lists, and receive them when the work is done. To obtain the information for and make out a number of returns required by the Legislature when the House is in session, for which no compensation is allowed; some of these require such an amount of time and trouble that the clerk is often tempted to, and sometimes does, put the form of return in the fire, instead of filling it up and returning it.

There are other duties for which the clerk receives a small remuneration, such as elections, registration of births, marriages and deaths, etc., all of which require a great deal of time and care, and should be properly remunerated.

Smith-Ross Race.

HALIFAX, N. S., September 1.—A few minutes past five the referee gave the signal for the men to get into position. Ross came down to the shore stripped to the buff, and pulled out his boat. Smith followed a moment later, dressed. Smith won the toss and took the inside course. Both men got into line about 5:45, and a start was effected. Ross took the lead. For about the first quarter of a mile Ross led about a quarter of a length. Then Smith spurted about seven or eight strokes, and showed about two lengths clear ahead of his opponent. Smith started with about thirty-six strokes to the minute, which, after passing Ross, he slackened down to thirty, and continued at this rate. Ross rowed about twenty-eight. As the stake boat was neared, Ross spurted and made the gap between him and his opponent's stern a little smaller. Smith turned his boat beautifully in 55s. from the start. Ross took on the turn, not getting round as rapidly as Smith. He rowed hard, however, and though Smith was now five lengths ahead he decreased this distance and pulled in towards Smith, probably intending to foul him as the latter was not in his own water. Smith put on a spurt and even a foul was out of the question. He slacked his speed and rowed in to the finish, certainly not at his best, and apparently rowing easily, and coming in a length and a-half ahead. This decrease at the finish was owing to Smith's decreasing speed rather than any increase on Ross' part. Smith rowed in a paper-weight boat, and Ross in his English boat, after having tried the Amateurs best built by Elliott.

Room on the Next Floor.

The Hon. Robert Lowe, in a recent address to an audience of school-boys, made the following stimulating yet not over-colored remark. A boy might do worse than commit this to memory.

"You will find in this life that if you behave well and do your duty all the difficulty is concentrated in the first step. It is the first advances which men and women make in life which more or less decides their future. The begin nings of life are all crowded. For everything that is to be had there is great competition, but when people have once made a step, and have proved that they are worthy, all the rest is comparatively very easy. It has been my duty often to pick out persons for situations, and my experience is that when the great mass is penetrated, and you have got to persons who have advanced one or two steps, the difficulty in not that we are overwhelmed with persons fit for the place, but to get any one who is fit for it. Therefore your object in life should be to begin with the greatest care, attention and self-denial, so to make this first step as to distinguish yourself as being trustworthy and reliable in all particulars, and if you once attract the notice of your employer, and he sees you are well and honestly discharging your duty, you may rely upon it you are in a safe way to make yourselves independent and to lead a happy life."

South Africa.

Sir Garnet Wolseley arrived at Ulundi on August 10th. He telegraphs: The country is quiet, and the enemies of the army have dispersed to their homes. I am in communication with the principal Chiefs, who say they will come in and submit. Cetewayo is not very far of, and there is a good prospect of an early and peaceable settlement. The health of the troops is excellent.

The Telegraph's dispatch from Capetown says, notwithstanding Wolseley's hopeful tone, it is reported on excellent authority that the Swazies have at the last moment refused to join in the operations for the capture of Cetewayo.

Omand, King Cetewayo's brother, has refused to return to his own district, declaring that a large Zulu army was waiting to destroy him.

Wolseley telegraphs that the cavalry reconnoissance to Cetewayo's new kraal, to the north of Ulundi, has recovered two cannons lost at Isandula; that there have been severe storms, and that the bridge on the Tugela river has been partially destroyed.

A dispatch states that the disturbances at Pondoland are not considered as very serious.

Bowmanville.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—On the morning of the 29th of August, Mr. Robt. Urmiston, nephew of the Rev. Dr. Urmiston, of New York, a respectable farmer, residing in the township of Darlington, two miles west of Enniskillen, was killed this morning while in company with his brother John. They were driving into town, having a high spirited team of horses, when just inside the corporation they took frights at a woman who was carrying a straw tick and ran away, throwing both the occupants out. John also is seriously injured, but not fatally.

A Convict's Rash Act.

EDWARD THICKPENNY, THE MURDERER, CUTS HIS OWN THROAT.

KINGSTON, Aug. 30.—This morning at 6 o'clock, as the convicts in the penetentiary were being mustered previous to breakfast, it was discovered that Edward Thickpenny, the man recently sent to prison for life for murder near Toronto, had cut his throat, and was faint from loss of blood. Thickpenny was engaged about the dining-room and managed to conceal a knife about his clothing. The act must have been committed a few minutes before he was discovered, for he had hung up his bed clothes and was apparently getting ready to come out of his cell when the door was opened. It will be remembered that when on trial he expressed an opinion that it was better to die than to live, as he would then live again, thus showing his crazy state of mind. After being discovered in a pool of blood his wound were dressed, and he is likely to recover.

Sections 7 and 8, and place amounts required by the Trustees of said Sections on the Collector's Roll, if they send in requisition in time to do so. The Government of the United States are going to try to prevent the immigration of the Mormons, by diffusing through friendly European Governments the information that polygamy is a violation of the law of the United States, and that all who emigrate thither with the intention of living under polygamy, are preparing to enter the United States with a criminal intention. The Government of the United ask their Ministers in England, Germany, Norway, Sweden, and Denmark to make this state of the case widely known amongst the people, and that any person in Utah against whom evidence of bigamy or polygamy is obtainable is to be prosecuted. Ships containing Mormon colonists are to be stopped, it is said, in the ports of the United States, as the Government is empowered to prevent the immigration of "undesirable people." These measures, we think, are likely to succeed. It would be impossible to put down a merely licentious movement by such means; but Mormonism has not fascinated the people of Teutonic stock by its licentiousness, but, on the contrary, by its claim to declare a canon kind of law, ostensibly in harmony with much that these people find in the Old Testament, and one embedded in a structure of canons but existing prophecy. So soon as these kind of malignants realize that they are going to a place where they will be regarded as common criminals, they will leave their honey for the enterprise.

That Rosary.

To the Editor of the Peterboro' Examiner.

SIR,—In last week's issue of a local paper, there appears a report, I am unprepared to say how genuine, stating that Mr. Toole informed the Finance Committee that he would undertake to settle with me and that I would have no reason to complain. These remarks are likely to leave a false impression, which I ask leave to contradict. I have not offered, nor shall I offer any opposition to the by-law if submitted. Every taxpayer has an equal interest with myself in it as far as contributing his quota is concerned, but beyond that I would be placed at a disadvantage if Mr. Toole either received as a gift, or a special loan, the sum of three thousand dollars to aid him in his business. I therefore intend to ask the Council and the people of Peterborough to deal with me in an equally generous manner, and shall send in a petition asking the submission of a similar by-law in my favor, to aid me in extending my establishment, which for five years past, has, I think, done something towards the prosperity of Peterborough, in encouraging building and giving work to a large number of men. I therefore ask of your readers and the public in general, a consideration of my request, and am sure they will admit the justice of it. The grounds of my claim will be more fully explained in the petition itself.

I am yours, &c.,
A. BAPTIE,
Proprietor Peterborough Planing Mills.

Compulsory Voting.

From the Montreal Star.)

We hope the present Government will make voting at election compulsory. If it does it will do more to kill bribery and fraud than all the Acts of Parliament on the Statute book. If electors were obliged to vote the days of corrupt practices at elections would soon be over. We might indeed, look forward to a period in which men would look upon the franchise as a trust instead of regarding it as an article of commerce. "Telegraphing" would be of the past; and the public might be assured that the votes recorded were genuine. "Canvassing," another source of trouble and broken faith, would no longer be necessary, and candidates for office would be saved the humiliation of making promises which they never intended to keep. Public morality, law order and every thing that goes to make good citizenship would be benefitted by making the electors go to the polls whether they liked it or not. The fact of possessing the franchise and not using it expresses a contempt for the State. It is equivalent to a man saying, "I am in the country, but I am not of it." This is not a healthy feeling to encourage, and it is time for the law to step in and enforce obedience to its privileges. At present however, the electors too often "hang back" for their price. They have no particular political faith, they are so indolent to be intelligently independent of party ties, and they "sell" their votes to the highest bidder. Voluntary voting creates apathy, while compulsory voting would create a desire to master the political situation. Citizens would take a keener interest in the doings of Parliament, the utterances of public men would be more eagerly watched, and the franchise would become something of which the elector would be proud. But now some electors remind us of men who look down gun-barrels, a dangerous practice for there is no telling what may happen.

A SINGULAR ACCIDENT ON THE NEW YORK, NEW HAVEN & HARTFORD R. R.

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 7, 1877.

DR. GILES:—While on duty as fireman on engine 47, about ten miles from this city, on Shore Line Road, was accidentally thrown off against a rock, train under full head—about thirty-five miles an hour. Was very badly bruised. Your agent was on board. He furnished me with two bottles of Liniment Iodide Ammonia, from which I received the greatest possible benefit. In four days was able to sit up, and am now able to commence work. My aged mother also used the Liniment for rheumatism, which it cured.

More Plate Glass Windows.—During the past week Mr. G. A. Cox has had placed in the shops occupied by Mr. Kemp and Messrs. Bros. handsome new plate-glass windows. The Central Exhibition.—The arrangements and preparations for the coming Central Exhibition are being pushed vigorously forward, and there is every prospect of its being very successful. The prize list pamphlets now in press at the office will be ready for distribution by Saturday or Monday, and to those receiving them we would advise a perusal of the business men's announcements therein. The men who advertise are the men to do business with. We bespeak for the advertisers in this pamphlet a liberal share of the patronage of the agricultural fraternity.

R. C. Church Anniversary.—We would again remind our readers of the anniversary services in connection with the Bible Christian Church, Ashburnham next Sabbath. Sermons will be preached as follows:—At 10.30 a.m., by the Rev. Mr. Muldhern; at 2.30 p.m., by the Rev. Mr. Starr, and at 6.30 by the Rev. Mr. Roberts. Collections will be taken up after each service. On the Tuesday evening following the anniversary tea will be held in the Hall nearly opposite the church, when addresses will be delivered by the Rev. Messrs. Torrance, Muldhern, Starr, Roberts, and other resident clergymen. Tea to be served at 6 o'clock.

Trent Valley Canal.—A meeting of the Committee appointed by the Town Council to consider the Trent Valley Canal project was held in the Council Chamber on Wednesday evening of last week, when the following resolutions were carried unanimously:—

Mr. J. Carbmbie moved, seconded by Mr. T. G. Hazlitt:—"That a small committee be appointed to communicate with the various municipalities along the route of the Trent Valley Canal with the view of securing their co-operation, and to decide upon, and to take such steps as they may deem best to secure its construction."

Mr. W. H. Scott moved, seconded by Mr. D. G. Hatton:—"That the committee consist of Messrs. Dumble, Carnegie, Smith and the Mayor, with power to add to their number.

Exhibition of Cheese.—Circulars have been issued relating to the exhibition of cheese at the Dominion Exhibition at Ottawa under the auspices of the Arts Association of Ontario and the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association. Prizes amounting to about $200 are offered for this class. It will be in the interest of cheese manufacturers to enter goods for competition. The circular states that cheese and butter exhibited by members of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association will be taken charge of by a competent person appointed by the Association, and conveyed free of charge to the exhibition grounds, and returned to Prescott Junction if required. Parties intending to send on these terms will please notify Harford at once. Secretary Eastern Dairymen's Association. Foxboro P. O., on or before the 15th of September next.

Across the Lines.—A representative from this office made a raid into the states a few days ago, crossing the Lake from Port Hope to Charlotte on the steamer Novarosa. The weather was fine; the water calm; the dinner excellent; the boats polite and attentive; the steamer superb, and the trip delightful. We were interviewed at Charlotte by several gentlemen in bine, who insisted upon inspecting our offices, but they found nothing they wanted and permitted us to move on. We made good connection with the train for Rochester, which was greeby to our advantage. From Rochester we journeyed through several States, and everywhere the song of "hard times" was ringing in our ears. We found it rather difficult to keep up a conversation with the average American as he knew nothing of Canadian matters and we were just as well informed in regard to American politics. The most positive information we could glean after diligent enquiry was that Courtney could distance Hanlan. On our return we found at Charlotte that the Norseman was at Kingston, and would not be back for two days. But our disappointment was short-lived, for the Hastings, a fine steamer, was running in the Norseman's stead. The return trip across the lake was very pleasant, and all on board were loud in their praises of the enterprise and public spirit which prompted the Norseman to place the Hastings on the route.

Returned Home.—Mr. and Mrs. Muldhern have returned home from the south, bringing with them samples of what fortification is doing in that part of the continent. They both look healthier and heartier than ever.

A Hot Wave.—Sunday was a terribly hot day. The sun shed forth its rubeits to such an extent that the last grand kick of summer was to remind the public that notwithstanding comparatively cool weather was vouchsafed during the past couple of months there was still great power in old Sol yet.

Visiting.—A large number of the citizens who have during the past month or two been holidaying have returned home. They all say they had a "glorious" time and are settling down to work. The gentlemen to their usual avocations, and the ladies are just in time to participate in the festivities of fall house cleaning.

Private School.—Miss E. Beckett has opened a private school in the frame building on Water Street, nearly opposite St. Paul's Church, and adjoining the residence of Mr. Jas. Bent, where she will be happy to receive a limited number of pupils. The course of studies is that necessary for a thorough common school education.

Rimmia.—The Toronto News Company, of Toronto, have just issued in five and ten cent sheet form the following popular pieces of music:—"Kathleen of Killarney," "Rosa Underneath the moss," "The Old Log Cab in the Dell," "A Flower from Mother's Grave," "The Little Sailor Hoodie," "Home," "Somebody's Coming when the Dewdrops Fall." The music can be obtained at the booksteres. Call and examine copies.

Poison Ivy.—As several cases of poisoning have occurred from the handling of this seemingly harmless plant, we publish the following recipe, which is said to be an unfailing remedy, and may prove very useful to some of our readers in the future:—Put 10 to 20 drops of bromine in one ounce of olive oil or glycerine and apply three or four times a day, especially on going to bed. The bromine is volatile, so only a small quantity should be made.

Mimonic Resources.—The members of Clementi Lodge, No. 213, A.F. and A.M., of Lakefield, will hold their annual picnic at Jone Island, Stony Lake, on Tuesday, 9th instant. The steamer Chippewa will convey the excursionists from Lakefield. An efficient committee have the matter in hand, and every arrangement will be made to secure comfort and pleasure to the brethren of the "mystic tie" and their friends. No doubt it will be largely attended.

Excursions to Toronto.—The management of the Midland Railway are determined that the citizens of Peterborough, as well as those on other points along the line of the road, shall have ample opportunities of visiting the Toronto Industrial exhibition which opened in Toronto on the 1st instant, and have already announced two special cheap excursions. On the 4th, 5th and 6th, excursion tickets at single fares will be issued, good until and including the 8th inst. Next week still "better terms" are offered, return tickets being issued at $1.50. On Tuesday a special train will leave Peterborough at 8.45 a.m., arriving at Toronto at 11.30 a.m.; returning will leave Toronto at 5.30 p.m. Tickets are also good to return by any regular train up till Friday evening 12th. During the next ten days the following attractions in addition to the ex hibitions are announced:

September 5th—Reception of the Governor-General and the Princess Louise, and grand illumination of the city in the evening.

September 6th—Sailing Regatta—Lacrosse Match, Toronto vs. Montreal—Concert by the Philharmonic Society—and visit of all the Public Schools to the Exhibition.

September 9th—Caledonian Games—Drawing Room and Reception in the evening by His Excellency the Governor-General and H. R. H. the Princess Louise, at the Government House.

September 9th—Grand Volunteer Review—and Citizens' Ball in the evening at the Horticultural Gardens.

September 10th—Grand Military Band Competition at the Exhibition Grounds—and Drawing Room in the evening at the Government House.

September 11th—Bag-pipe Competition on Exhibition Grounds.

September 12th—Amateur Band Competition on Exhibition Grounds.

September 13th—Rowing Regatta, &c., &c.

September 15th—Dominion Grangers' visit to the Exhibition.

Farm to Rent.—We take the following paragraph from the Oshawa Vindicator, and we would recommend the method of renting a farm referred to in the last few lines to our farmers, both tenants and owners:—"This announcement heads a number of advertisements in this issue, as it has in previous ones. Owners of farms not thus wisely in bringing their property before the renters, as it leads to inquiry and gives a selection of tenants. One of the best farms in the township was recently rented on shares. The tenant wished a reduction of the former rent, but the owner refused, but offered instead to accept one-third of the profits of the farm, that is one-third of the crop after paying the expenses. With this the bargain. In the first place, the tenant runs less risk in a bad year, and the owner will do better in a good one."

Sad Drowning Accident.—On Tuesday morning the melancholy intelligence reached town that Elias Leonard, son of Mr. Thomas Leonard, of this town, had drowned the previous evening at Love Sick Rapids. Deceased and some others were camping at Deer Bay, a short distance above the rapids, and on Monday evening he and another member of the party named D. Lynch, started from the camp with a little boy of Mr. George Leonard, who they were to leave at the Burleigh Falls' Hotel, where it was expected the child's father would meet them. Upon their arrival there they found that the father had left for home, and about dark started to paddle back to the camp. Approaching the rapids they put the child ashore, and attempted to paddle up through the north channel, where, owing to the shallowness of the water, they struck one of their paddles on the rock, and the canoe swinging round with the current, was caught in the eddy and capsized. Deceased who was unable to swim, clung to the boat, and Mr. Lynch swam for the shore, on reaching which he discovered that his companion had either been swept from the canoe or lost his hold of it, He at once alarmed the rest of the party, who came to his assistance, and a search was at once instituted for the body, which up to the time of our going to press has not been recovered. Much sympathy is expressed for the relatives in their bereavement. Their affliction is all the more severe from the fact that but a short time ago, another member of the family—Rev. Father Leonard, of Kingston—suddenly died at Rochester.

Presentation.—On Wednesday evening of last week, Mr. Chas. Henderson, long and favorably known in connection with the dry goods business of Mr. John Erskine, was waited upon by a number of his friends and presented with a gold ring and a well filled purse, accompanied by an address. Mr. Henderson is about leaving town to commence business in Napanee on his own account, and his friends deemed it an opportune occasion to manifest their feelings of esteem and respect towards him. During a stay of many years in this town Mr. Henderson has won the esteem of all those with whom he has come in contact with, and while all his friends—and they are legion—will regret his departure, they feel certain that the people of Napanee will secure a good citizen and a straight-forward business man. We wish him every success in his new house, and trust he may meet with the realization of his highest anticipations. The following is the address which was read by Mr. A. McNeil, the presentation being made by Mr. R. B. McKee:—

"To Mr. C. F. Henderson:—

"Dear Friend,—Having heard with feelings of regret, about your intended departure from our town, we take this opportunity of asking you to accept this ring and purse from a few old friends, as a slight remembrance of your fifteen years' sojourn in our town. The memento, though small in value, conveys the esteem and respect in which you are held by your fellow-citizens. It was our intention to procure something more tangible than the contents of the purse, but owing to the shortness of notice it was found impossible to procure it, and hope you will accept it under the circumstances. We can bear testimony to your fair and upright dealings in business, and feel assured that the inhabitants of your new home will tender you a cordial support.

"Your natural talent and genial affability, which is "many and of the best," will gain you many true friends. We feel that we will miss you, but hail with delight the announcement of your future prosperity. We would admonish you to have courage, for courage, combined with energy and perseverance, will overcome difficulties apparently insurmountable, and, in conclusion, dear friend, we tender you our best wishes, and hope that "Dame Fortune" may shine upon you in your new undertaking."

Mr. Henderson briefly replied, thanking them for the presents and their expressions of friendship, after which a pleasant time was spent in social chat and song.

A Hint to Workingmen.

The honest workingmen of the country, many of whom have large and increasing families to support, have been the chief sufferers from the great reverse of the last few years. Unlimited wages have not been paid, and a corresponding reduction in the price of every thing which the workingman needs, flour, meat, food, and clothing, are cheaper, but these do not constitute all his necessities. It is sometimes necessary for him to employ a lawyer or a physician, yet the fee now of physicians and lawyers are as high as they were in "flush" times. Yet many workmen are as anxious to obtain cheap books as they are to get work, and not necessarily poor workmen. It must be obvious to every intelligent person that such cheap publications as are put up at wholesale can be sold at much lower prices than when retailed. Dr. Ayer's Almanac, Dr. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, Medical Discovery and Pectoral Purgative Pellets have attained a world-wide reputation, and their manufacturers desire to supply workingmen direct from patron establishment, and all at a very slight expenditure.

"Hard on the Boy."—The Pembroke Falls Gazette of last week is extremely severe in its criticisms of the proprietor of our Saturday contemporary.

Lecture.—An exhibition scene of humor will be played on the Asylum Cricket Grounds, on Friday afternoon, but-yeen picked teams from the Peterborough Club. "White Eagle" will fame the ball at 2.30 sharp.

Correction.—We were in error last week in stating that the injuries received by Mr. J. B. Nicholl's son were not of a serious nature, as we have since learned that Dr. Fraser pronounced them serious as soon as called in. We are glad, however, to be able to state that the patient is recovering very favorably.

Cheap Excursion.—The Steamer "Cruiser" will run a cheap excursion to Stony Lake, on Tuesday, 9th inst.—Lakefield's Citric Reliefy, Peterboro's Quadrille Band and covered scow accommodation for dancing. Tickets only 25 cents from Lakefield, and 15 cents from Young's Point. Boat leaves the Lakefield w harf at 8.15 a.m.

Fine Weather Coming.—Vessmar has issued another weather bulletin. He says: I am of the opinion that the wet period is about ended or ending, and that a dry, possibly warm wave will extend over the coming portion of the season. April first, as you will remember, I predicted a cool and wet season for Canada and Great Britain up to mid-summer; such a condition has already far exceeded this forecast in both regions mentioned. I now look forward to a very fine and agreeable period in the weather, possibly with early and severe frosts, but late snow falls.

Hall & Cannon's New Works.—Workmen are now engaged in excavating the cellar for a three-story building, adjoining the old "Chambers Block," corner of Hunter and Water Sts., which is to be erected by Mr. G. Dunsford, for Messrs. Hall & Cannon, and which when completed will be fitted up with a revolving oven and other improved machinery necessary for the manufacture of biscuits and confectionery by steam. The increasing business of this firm requires increased facilities for manufacturing, and when the new premises are completed and fully equipped, they expect to be able to compete both in price and quality with city manufacturers.

SCHOOL BOARD.

A special meeting of the School Board was held on Friday evening last in the Council Chamber, to consider the report of the Committee on Appointments. Present—Jas. Stevenson, Esq., Chairman, and Messrs. Brett, Toole, Wrighton, Romaine, Dumble, Carlisle, Macdonald, Edwards, Measles.

Upon opening, the Chairman stated the object for which the meeting was called. Before taking up the special business, it was agreed to take up other matters, if necessary, and dispense with the regular meeting on Tuesday evening.

The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE OF APPOINTMENTS.

Mr. Dumble, as Chairman of the Committee on Appointments, read and submitted the following report.

The Committee on Appointments beg to report:—

1. That they recommend Miss Flavelle as teacher for Miss Blakelly's room at a salary of three hundred dollars per annum. Miss Flavelle to be responsible for her own room only.

2. That Miss Fair be appointed to fill Miss Flavelle's place at a salary of two hundred and fifty dollars a year.

3. That Miss Parry and Miss Matthews be allowed to keep their positions until Nov. 1, to enable them to procure certificates from the Minister of Education.

4. That on Miss Ellsworth's retirement, Miss Brown be appointed to take her place, and that Mr. Dumble be appointed to take Miss Brown's place.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

D. W. DUMBLE, Chairman.

August 30, 1879.

Mr. Dumble moved the adoption of the Report, seconded by Mr. Romaine.

In amendment it was moved by Mr. Edwards seconded by Mr. Wrighton. That the Board go into Committee of the Whole on the report, taking it up clause by clause.

After this junction Mr. Edmison entered and took his seat.

The amendment was put and declared carried, and Mr. Romaine was called to the chair.

On reading the clause, Mr. Dumble explained that Miss Blakelly's position had been filled by Miss Flavelle at a saving of $100.

This clause was passed without discussion.

On reading the second clause, Mr. Dumble explained that the Committee had decided to fill Miss Flavelle's place in the South Ward school with Miss Fair. This lady had the very highest testimonials as to ability. She had what very few lady teachers secured, a second class A certificate from the Model School. She had also been highly recommended by the Principal and Mr. Dixon, Mathematical Teacher, as well as by the Trustees in South Monaghan, where she had taught. In fact she stood head and shoulders over all the other applicants as to ability.

Mr. Edwards considered it unjust that outsiders should receive the appointments over residents. Mr. Edwards also considered it unfair—other things being equal—that non-residents should be engaged in preference to those who lived in town.

Mr. Menzies wished to know who the other applicants were.

Mr. Toole thought Mr. Dumble was very scant in his information as to what occurred at the Committee meeting. From the first it was understood that any appointments made should be from town applicants—all other things be equal, and they being competent to fill the positions. Well, at that meeting, what did they do? After promoting Miss Flavelle to Miss Blakelly's place—against which there was not a dissenting voice—it was endeavored to fill the vacancy caused by her promotion with an outsider, and this over the heads of residents of the town. By the Chairman exercising a doubtful right of voting, and also giving the casting vote, this was carried. There were many who thought that Miss Bagsley should be promoted to Miss Flavelle's place, and Miss Irwin to Miss Bagsley's.

Mr. Stevenson—Why not tell the whole story. You know well enough that a the business meeting at the close of which it was rescinded at the second meeting, when the provisions of the present report were carried by a large majority of those present.

Mr. Toole—Mr. Stevenson will please remember that I have the floor, and don't wish to be interrupted. When I am through he can speak.

Mr. Stevenson—I will speak whenever it suits me.

Mr. Toole—As to Miss Parry and Miss Matthews' appointment—the resignation of the former had been accepted by the Board at a previous meeting, and Miss Brooks appointed temporary to her place. Before the second meeting a requisition had been circulated endeavoring to obtain government permits for those two teachers and have them reinstated. At the second meeting Miss Fair's appointment was reaffirmed; Miss Brooks reinstated and Miss Gamble appointed in her place. He considered it altogether unjust that parties holding genuine certificates should be engaged in preference to those who held what he would term sham qualifications. He would, therefore, move, seconded by Mr. Wrighton.—That the clause of the Report recommending the appointment of Miss Fair to the place vacated by the removal of Miss Flavelle to the Central School be not adopted, but that Miss Bagsley be promoted to that room at a salary of $300, and that Miss Irwin be promoted to her room at a salary of $280, and that Miss Brooks be appointed to the room now taught by Miss Irwin, at a salary of $260.

Mr. Stevenson said Mr. Toole could tell a one-sided story as well as any one he knew. He would ask what would become of our schools if we were going to promote 3rd class teachers to the highest positions. Some of those who were asked to be promoted barely held 3rd class certificates. All he knew about Miss Fair was that she held the highest certificate of any of the applicants. He thought the Board in making any appointments should be guided by the advice of the Principal. He would move that Mr. Jeffers be heard.

Mr. Jeffers considered Miss Fair quite competent to teach in Miss Flavelle's place, and believed the appointment would give satisfaction. His advice to the Board was to get the highest grade of Teachers. As to drawing comparisons between teachers he thought it injudicious, and he wished to be relieved from the task. In answer to Mr. Toole, he said he considered Miss Irwin competent of teaching in this grade.

Mr. Menzies thought the interests of the school should not be impaired. Miss Flavelle, a good teacher, had been removed and he wished to see her place filled with one equally as good if not better.

Mr. Dumble then read testimonials as to Miss Fair's qualification. He was in favor of filling vacancies with young people—other things being equal—but he did not care if it swept all the head teachers out of the school, he would go for getting them of the highest grade. He criticised severely the action of some members of the Board in going outside and telling what he had said of applicants, at Committee meetings. He would not be here-to-day by interested parties, but would do his duty fearlessly.

Mr. Romaine, while anxious to have the best teachers employed, thought it strange that Miss Flavelle, holding a 3rd Class Certificate, should be promoted over Miss Fair, whose qualifications was so much higher. If promotions in figures were to be made purely on grounds of qualifications then he would vote for the report, but not otherwise.

Mr. Toole's amendment being put was lost.

The report was then adopted.

Mr. Everitt said he noticed that the Toronto Board of Education had instructed their Property Committee to heat their buildings by steam, believing it to be much cheaper than heating by coal.

Miss Ellsworth's Resignation.

Mr. Everitt moved,—That the resignation of Miss Ellsworth be referred to the Committee on Appointments.

In amendment, Mr. Toole moved,—That the resignation of Miss Ellsworth be accepted, and that Miss Brown be promoted to fill the vacancy so caused, and that Miss Brooks be employed to take Miss Brown's place.

Mr. Emmery objected to the amendment as out of order, when a warm discussion arose as to the question. The Chairman ruled it would take eight members to vote for it. On the question being put only six voted for it, and it was ruled out accordingly.

Moved by Mr. Toole, seconded by Mr. Cook.—That this Board do now go into Committee of the Whole to consider that portion of the report submitted by the Committee on Appointments at the last meeting which was not considered.

In amendment Mr. Everitt moved, seconded by Mr. Shaw,—That the resignation of Miss Ellsworth be accepted, and that it be referred to the Committee on Appointments for action.

Another lengthy discussion as to points of order ensued on the submission of these resolutions, taken part in principally by the mayors of both resolutions. The amendment on being put was declared lost, as was also the original.

Mr. Macdonald moved, seconded by Mr. Carlisle,—That a special meeting of this Board be called to dispose of all recommendations made by the Committee on Appointments in consequence of the resignation of Miss Ellsworth, and that said meeting be called by the Chairman of this Board not later than the 25th of this month.

This resolution also met with considerable opposition, but was finally carried.

The Heating Furnace.

Moved by Mr. Toole, seconded by Mr. Cook.—That the Secretary be instructed to communicate with Mr. Laidlaw to ascertain the best terms on which he will take back the heating furnace purchased from him, as it does not answer our purpose.—Carried.

The Board then adjourned.

DEADLOCK IN QUEBEC.

Refusal of the Legislative Council to Pass the Supply Bill

In the Legislative Council of Quebec, on the motion for the second reading of the Supply Bill. Hon. Dr. Ross, seconded by Hon. Mr. Labrure, moved the following resolution:

That an humble address be presented to his Honor the Lieutenant-Governor, forwarding the following resolutions:—

1. That the Speech from the Throne at the opening of the session is a document of the highest importance, because the Government calls upon the authorities of the Crown to witness the measures which it promises to submit to the Legislature. Todd. vol. 11, page 331. But that the present Government has not realized the weight of such obligations, and has thereby been highly reprehensible in not summoning the Legislature, the greater number of the measures announced in the Speech from the Throne.

2. That the address of his Honor the Lieutenant-Governor should represent the authority of the Crown personally, the wisdom and practical experience of the executive power, and possess the necessary ability to carry out in both Houses the obligations which they publicly announced, not merely in their constituencies in office but also to the integrity and usefulness of their legislative measures. Todd. pp. 329 and 331. But that the present Government has not limited themselves with the principle of Ministerial responsibility by submitting to the caprice of a fluctuating majority, which interfered in the carrying out of its measures, and deprived it of its control of legislation, thus allowing the influence of the Executive to pass out of the hands of the responsible servants of the Crown into those of men who merely represent an outside will and are serving private interests.

3. That the principles of Parliamentary control over the public expenditure has been rendered moral by the experience of several centuries, and produced in the hall of richts that the Legislature is jealous of such control, which is the greatest safeguard of our political rights and liberties, and that this principle is equally applicable to the payment or to the appropriation to pay any sums of money, and to the remission of debts due to the Crown. Todd, pp. 329-330. But that the present Government, against the spirit of the constitution, has levied considerable sums in the purchase of land, and in the carrying out of enactments without having consulted the Legislature, and even in several cases, despite the refusal of the Council to sanction such payments. That it has remitted considerable debts which the Legislative Assembly had declared collectable, and has made special warrants for merely an administrative purpose to the extent of over $200,000 in excess of the sums sanctioned by the Legislature.

4. That the law of the country entrusts its sovereign authority over those who govern: not well or over those who are governed: that the government of the country is one of laws, or the execution of laws without the consent of Parliament is illegal, and that moreover the Legislature can only grant supplies for a limited service and invalid if they have not the support of the Executive. Todd. pp. 328, 329. But the present Government has given an example of contempt of the laws both in the case in the Lake St. John Railway, and in the case of the Provincial Railway, in the first case by appropriating the subsidies and forming the contract without the sanction of the Legislature, and in the second case by appropriating the proceeds of the sale of the Provincial Railway without the sanction of the Legislature, and by not having the contract ratified by the Legislature.

5. That the deliberations of a Government and the deliberations of those who have control over the public expenditure are equally necessary to the well-being of the country, but that the Government has not only failed to give to the Legislature the information which it was entitled to receive, but has refused to give it, and has thereby violated the principles of Parliamentary control over the public expenditure, and has not only failed to give September.

The gatherer-in follows :
The sere in tarning leaves :
The year's in apple or cheeks
With fruit are bending down.

The summer's bloom'd charms
Are carried in the sun :
In every field the mirrored
Its hidden silk has spun.

The autumn flowers their harvest
In every meadow bank ;
And autumn by the brook side
Make colors in the brook.

From dewy bloom at morning
The gropes' sweet odors rise :
At noon the woods all bother
With yellow honorbies.

By all these lovely tokens
September days are here,
With summer's best of weather,
And autumn's best of cheer.

But spare of all this bounty
With Boreas the north and air,
To unto me the sport
Which make September fair.

For a thing which I remember
To memories thrills me yes :
Our fav'rite amusement
Is Hide-and-Seek.

Home Memories.

"Be it ever so humble,
There's no place like home!"

I'm sitting again 'neath the old sha-ta's
And viewing the fields where in childhood I
The breeze fans my cheek, and the birds go
And coos.
While I listen, entranced, to the bees' soothing hum.
Hum, hum—sweet, sweet hum!
The' it ever so hum-ble-ly,
—I—I—"He's stung me, I vum!

We Two.

"Fortune brings in some boats that are not steered." —Cymbeline.

Its just a bit of a story, sir, that don't sound much to strangers, but I'd like to tell you about it, if you have time to listen, for they've all forgotten Bobbery down here, except me; they're poor folks, you see, and things drifts out of folks' heads when poverty drifts in.

Bobbery? yes, Sir, that was his name—leastways the name we gave him down here. As to father and mother, we never had any, I think; never had any one in the wide world to belong to, except our two selves—Bobbery and me. I was the eldest, two long years older than him; but then I was blind, you see, so the two years didn't count for much, and Bobbery got ahead of me after the time when the long days of pain slipped into long nights, and God shut me out of the world; not that I grumble, Sir,—I've given over that; and Bobbery was always such a good lad to me, that perhaps I didn't miss so much after all.

I grew to fancy things, and make believe I saw a great deal, particularly after Bobberry took to working at his trade—shoeblack, Sir; and sometimes when I became accustomed to being always in the dark, I went out with Bobbery and held the money that he made.

Well, not much, perhaps, but enough for us two, and the little room we had down at Kingstown, over against the river; only Bobbery was an extravagant lad—not in drink, Sir—we were always a sober lot—but in oranges.

They were almost his ruin, Sir—those oranges. He used to come up stairs sucking them softly, so that I might not hear, and thinking to deceive me; but I some, how smelt oranges, and it always made me sharper to catch Bobbery whistling little tunes to himself on the way up, just to put me off.

He made a deal of me, did Bobbery—along of being blind, you see—and so did the neighbors; but I was rare proud of him. You don't know what it is, Sir, to sit alone in the dark all day, and then, on a sudden, to hear a fellow call out, 'Here we are again! Come down and feel the sun out, and we'll count the coppers!' It would make you love any one, Sir, who had a voice like that, let alone a fellow like Bobbery.

Perhaps you didn't happen to be in Kingstown, Sir, last spring when the floods had risen, and the land was under water for miles round. Bobbery had to wade a little going down to his work, but he rather liked it, he said, and he used to tuck up his trousers, and call back to me and laugh, as the water crept round his feet; and he said folks wouldn't want their boots blacked, he feared, for the water would soon take off the polish.

I used to sit on the window sill to feel the sun, and if I listened very hard I could hear the ripple-ripple of the shallow water at every step that Bobbery made, and it had a pleasant sound, and made a kind of hearing and it still came rippling up against our walls, the company feeling went away and left me lonely, and sometimes I thought the water hateful, because it lay for so very long between me and Bobbery.

Well, once I was sitting alone on the window sill, and the day was very quiet—so quiet that I did not even hear the little rippling waves, and in the quiet I stretched out my hands across the sill, to feel my way down. I felt something that made me shiver, and drew back out of the sunlight—that made my whole dark life grow suddenly a beautiful and precious thing—I felt the water almost rippling up to the level of the sill, and I was quite alone, and Bobbery would never know.

I did not call out, or go mad with fright, as I thought at first I might do; only I crept away, in my everlasting darkness, from the warm sunlight, and sat down on the bed where Bobbery and I slept together, and put my hands over my ears, to shut out the roar of the waters.

How long I sat there I don't know, but I think it might have been hours, for I felt the sunlight slanting on my face, and the water rushing round me before I moved again. I was hungry too; but when I tried to get down and reach the cupboard, the water took me off my feet, and I crept back to the bed, and on to the shelves of the dresser, to be out of the way. I said my prayers for Bobbery too, for I knew he would be sorry when he found me some day, where I had died all alone, in the dark. And then I tried to think how things looked from our window, with the water sweeping up to the very sill, and the red sunset lying on it—and beyond, the pretty town and the steeple with the clock; and thought it was better for me to die than Bobbery, after all, for he could see, while I—I had no pleasure in my life. And yet I wanted to live; I wanted to hear Bobbery's voice again; I wanted the waters to go down, and somebody to remember me at last—for I was afraid.

Well, Sir, God answers our prayers sometimes in a way that is terribly just. It taken us a long time to find out that everything is very good, I think, but we come to learn it at last—and learn, too, to leave our prayers to God. Somebody did remember me at last, and came back—somebody whose laughing voice across the water was nearer every minute—somebody whom hand was on my shoulder, whose eyes, I felt, were on my face—somebody who had never forgotten me—Bobbery!

'Bobbery! Bobbery!' I cried, and I stretched out my arms to him.

Bobbery did: 'I came over in a tub—only think! such a lark! but, as I climbed up the window, our tub drifted away, and how ever we're to get over Jem's bill.'

'You must think of something,' I said.

'Bobbery it was a long day.'

'Why, of course it was,' Bobbery answered, 'without me. Come along, the river's rising like fury.'

'Is it very wide?' I asked.

'Oh, not more'n a good stretch from here to the Jay-lock—but deep; over six feet, I should say—and rising.'

'But the bed, Bobbery,' I said, 'and other things?'

'Well we must just leave them until it's all right again.'

'Bobbery in all plurality, I asked,
'Why, yes, of course,' said Bobbery.

He was such a splendid chap, Sir, was Bobbery, and so clever! He took the two chairs that were drifting about the room, and tied them close together, and then we waded across to the window and stood upon the sill.

'I think it's jolly good fun,' said Bobbery. 'If you could only see how your hair's bobbing up and down in front here! Get in quick, or I can't hold her. Here! part her hair, or something! Are you all right?'

'It's splendid,' I said, 'come along.'

But when Bobbery put his foot on to the unsteady raft, she went down on one side with a plunge. 'Never mind,' he said; 'you're just got to push yourself ashore with this pole, as straight as you can go, and I'll follow.'

I swear to you, Sir, I thought it was true, or I never would have left Bobbery. I took the pole he gave me and went out on the troubled waters, that I felt were blood-red where the setting sun had touched them. People on the opposite side cheered and cried and called me, and Bobbery behind cried out once or twice, 'Skip along!' in a shrill voice, that I knew and loved better than anything on earth, and once I heard him say, faintly—he seemed so far away—'is port at last.'

At last!

The people on shore ceased their shouts of excitement and encouragement, the light had died utterly away.

In an awful silence, and an awful darkness, I jumped to land, and held out my two hands.

'Bobbery! Bobbery?' I cried, 'I want to thank you.'

Did Bobbery hear, Sir, do you think? Do people hear anything, do people understand anything after they have gone away?

I only knew that the awful silence was turning me to stone, that the awful darkness was rising like a wall between me and Bobbery, and I was afraid. When I called no one answered me, and I was glad. If his voice was silent, any other voice would have maddened me just then, and I wanted nothing more to tell me the truth. I learned through the silence on hand and see how God had answered my prayer.

They told me afterward how the plank he was launching to help himself to the shore drifted away from his hand, and was out of sight directly, how they would have saved him if they could, and how, when they began to shout him directions, he made a sign for silence, and stood upright up on the sill, with the sunset creeping all over him, and the waters washing at his feet. They wondered why he had made no effort to reach the shore with me—they used to wonder, for long after, why he had stood so silent, with his eager eyes, and restless feet so strangely still. I know, of course; but what right had any one else to come between Bobbery and me? It wouldn't have done any one any good to know what I knew—that Bobbery wouldn't let me lose the faintest chance; thought my blind helpless life quite as well worth saving as his own. I would have done the same for him, Sir, any day—for, Bobbery and me, we were always fond of each other.

The story's been longer than I thought, Sir! but just the evening, and the floods again, and your wanting to know about the cross brought it back to me like the same evening somehow—and its company like to talk of the lad.

And Bobbery, he just died, Sir; and the folks thought such a deal of him that they collected a bit to set me on, and I took half of the money just to put up this little cross by the river side—for we always divided the coppers, Sir; and I hevent forgot him—not in these two years!

That's all, Sir—just all about bobbery.

A Masquerade.

'She is far from fascinating,' declared Lucia, as she and her sister discussed the events of the day, a few weeks after Miss Lovell's appearance at the Orchard Farm. 'An equiline nose is a defect in any woman's face; it looks strong-minded.'

'And that black silk of hers has been turned, too. I saw the old stitches,' yawned Essie. 'What do you think of her singing.'

'Guy seems to hang upon her numbers.'

'She's a novelty.'

Fascinating or otherwise, the gentlemen at the house seemed to rally about Miss Lovell, to the no small discomfiture of the Misses Thornton. Her very indifference lent a charm; and even the turned silk failed to disgust them, or the fact that she was suspected of earning her own living. There was a picnic to the recesses of the Pine Woods one day, when other expedients for killing time had been nearly exhausted, planned and carried out by Miss Lucia and her sister.

'And where is our charming Miss Lovell?' asked Duchess, an attache at one of the legations, whom Lucia had contrived to attach to her party.

'I don't know,' returned Lucia.

'Is not Miss Lovell here?' demanded Guy, 'and why is she not?'

'Don't annihilate us, Guy! What is Hecuba to you?'

'I will return for Miss Lovell,' said Duchess, not comprehending the situation.

'I will fetch her myself,' threatened Guy, hurrying away. But he did not return. Miss Lovell had no mind to accept the invitation at the eleventh hour; she was busy sketching. Would she not give him a lesson in the art? And whether or no, there he staid beside her till the sunset dyed the sea with the hues of a shell. No end of banter followed when the party returned from the woods.

'This is the way Mr. Thornton does his picnicking?' questioned Duchess. 'Don't you know,' addressing Miss Lovell, 'that they used to burn women for witchcraft?'

'Neither did the men escape.'

'These Thorntons are a proud family,' he pursued. 'They think themselves the cream of society, and the rest of the world but skimmilk.'

'And I represent bonny-clabber, perhaps?'

'They are a haughty race; whoever is not born with a silver spoon in his mouth is beneath notice—except for amusement.'

'You seem to have studied the Thorntons.'

'They interest me with their contempt for work; I wonder nobody asks if the malt that lay in the house that Jack built was not furnished by their grandfather's brewery.'

'You are too bitter, Mr. Duchess—bitter as beer. And Mr. Thornton, does he share their contempt?'

'I have not heard; but he is a Thornton.'

'Miss Lucia thinks your lecture is long. She is in doubt about the text. I believe you engaged her for this waltz?' They were having some infernal dancing in the parlors that night.

One evening in August, Miss Lovell, having spent a dull day in-doors, threw open her blinds, and felt it a waste of the season to remain under a roof. The universe seemed too narrow to hold her, folding a black veil across her yellow hair, and fastening the hood of her wrap beneath her chin, she stole out. Presently, as she sat in the shade of a great rock, a boat put in, and Duchess helped Miss Lucia ashore, and strolled away, while Guy planted an oar in the sand, and Essie crouched beside him.

'You will take cold,' said Guy. 'We must go in.'

'You wouldn't be in such haste if I were Miss Lovell. I don't know where you get your plebeian tastes. Bourbody is laughing at your devotion.'

'Let those laugh who win,' returned Guy. 'Le roi s'amuse.'

Miss Lovell had left her seat at the mention of her name, and loitered along the beach, stooping to gather a shell or bit of some wreck as she went.

'What old quiah is that?' asked Essie as she passed them.

'It looks like a fisher-woman gathering drift to boil her pot; has saving decayed Essie in decent, he fled back to the mend.

'Tragedy between the goddess,' commenting her.

'I hoped to game for a fisher-woman.'

'Yes! the complete the disguise, but we take you out fishing both.'

'With all my heart.' 'Le roi s'amuse!' she reflected; 'but he allows another to share his amusement.' And directly they were floating through a drift of stars, mingling fast and continent; slipping past the lighthouse, beyond the spits of sand, with breakers crowning about them, till the beach lights were but sparks against the darkness, past crowders of meadows, and the hummocks wherves of the town. 'Mr. Thornton,' she cried, waking from the spell, as steeples and chimneys stood revealed, 'what is this?'

'This is Bagdad. Our boat has been propelled by sirens. I am the necromancer who has annihilated time and space. Shall we keep on up the river, and join the caravans for Aleppo and Damascus?'

'Do let us return; it must be late. There are no lights in your Bagdad.'

'The Oolish pushites them after 9 p. m. Besides, gas and kerosene haven't come to light yet. My dear Miss Lovell, the tide is against and the wind is not with us. Even a necromancer may err. You have made it dangerously pleasant. I did not dream of the hour. Ralloo, there! he shouted, under the bow of the brig. 'I will give any man his price who will help me row back to the beach.' And presently two stout sailors swung themselves into the boat. When Miss Lovell and Mr. Thornton walked up to the Orchard Farm, the sun was rising.

'Ah, Guy,' cried Essie, coming forward, 'we have been so alarmed! The servant said your room had not been occupied, and—'

'You were beginning to wonder if black would become me, eh?'

'"Le roi s'amuse," she said significantly. Guy's brow darkened.

'You are mistaken,' he returned.

Miss Lovell had a nervous headache, and did not appear again till twilight.

'It has been the longest day in the year,' he said, 'in spite of the calendar.'

'You were up so early.'

'You are down so late. Come into these yellow sands.' A dense fog was blowing in-shore. 'Speaking of love, Miss Lovell,' he said, after a dozen topics had been lightly touched and abandoned, 'do you think it is of such a slow growth that if one should confess he loved you after a few weeks' intimacy you would doubt him?'

'I don't know.'

'Miss Lovell, will you take me for better or worse?'

'Mr. Thornton!'

'You do love me, you do care for me,' boldly; and Guy's arm was about to enclose her, his lips were best to her cheek, when a voice out of the fog raised, 'Is it private theatricals? Have we intruded behind the scenes?' as Lucia and Duchess drew nearer. 'Cousin Guy, there are letters for you and a telegram at the house; and while he went for the mail in the convoy of his cousin and her escort, Miss Lovell escaped to her room. The telegram proved an urgent summons, and Guy was obliged to leave by the earliest stage next morning. As Miss Lovell, unaware of this fact, was asleep at that hour, he slipped a note of explanation and consecration under her door as he passed down; but the wind blowing through her open window swept it back into the hall, and when Essie tripped by to breakfast it lay in her path. 'Miss Lovell,' she read, 'and Cousin Guy's handwriting,' and she carried it to her room, lighted a taper, and let it shrivel in the flame. That evening, as Miss Lovell lingered on the verandah, Miss Essie brushed by her and turned. 'You are not aware,' she said in under-tone, 'that Mr. Thornton is already engaged—has been engaged for years. He has not told you, of course—what man ever tells such things when he assumes himself?'

'Yes?' rejoined Miss Lovell, 'and I am engaged to marry myself—since some time.'

'A bonne bouche to write Guy, thought Miss Essie; 'I will put it in a postscript as an after thought.' It was not strange that Miss Lovell became sadly disturbed at Guy's departure without a word, and at his subsequent silence. She could not question his cousins; and as day after day passed without a syllable in explanation, she decided that he had been merely passing the time, as people will at the beach; that it was no true affection, but a will-o'-the-wisp which she had mistaken for a reality. Guy, in his turn, was both hurt and angry that she paid no heed to his farewell note; but he had no time to upbraid her, and then came Essie's postcript.

Another letter had arrived for Guy in the same mail—a letter from the woman to whom he had been engaged for years.

"MY DEAR MR. THORNTON' (it ran),—"Your last letter was received in May. I returned from Europe early in June, but did not notify you, because I have been revolving a certain matter in my mind. I feel that it will be impossible for us to fulfill the engagement which was brought about by our parents. It is out of the question that you, who know me as a mere child seven years ago—have we met once in that time?—can love me. You used to say that my straight nose was my only beauty, and I was thrown from a carriage while abroad, and it is now an equiline feature—not bad for an equiline feature either. I am confident you would sacrifice yourself rather than disobey the dead who have mortgaged us to each other, so to speak; and I feel obliged to take the initiative, and declare our engagement null and void. I have fitted myself for teaching, and have several pupils; and during the enjoyment of my grandfather's estate I have saved enough for a rainy day. Do not attempt to see me or to change my resolve, which is unchangeable. Sincerely,

"JULIETTE L. CAVENDISH."

Guy had not been a deliberate villain in this transaction. Miss Lovell had won his heart before he dreamed of danger; and as for Juliette Cavendish, she was a bobbledehoy school-girl of thirteen when he saw her seven years before—shy, nervous, and awkward, with elf-lock of tow-coloured hair. Her grandfather and Guy's father had been sworn friends, in spite of the disparity in years; and it had been their hobby to unite the family fortunes. If Guy and Juliette failed to marry they forfeited their inheritance. Happily for Guy, he had received a legacy from his mother's family unencumbered by ugly conditions; but he had always supposed he should carry out his father's will, and marry Miss Cavendish finally, and they had kept up an irregular correspondence during her sojourn in Europe.

'A strange affair,' he thought. 'Can she have fallen in love? I feel to blame as if I ought to have taken pains to love her. A smart always ensues when the dead dictate to the living.' At least he was free to marry Miss Lovell; but had not Essie just notified him of her long engagement? He hastened to write Miss Lovell a letter full of bitter reproaches and angry love; but she had hidden adieu to the Orchard Farm before it arrived there, and had left no address, having abandoned hope at the same date; and the poor love-letter, with all its angry protestations, was laid on the shelf, and Guy was obliged in turn in his heart that he had been deceived and misled. At about this time he began to wonder what manner of woman Miss Cavendish might be; if she had really a lover; and if not, what had prompted the sacrifice. What but a noble sincerity? After all, why should he hesitate to fulfill his father's will, and unite the fortunes of Cavendish and Thornton? Might she not be taught to love him? He was wise enough to know that his account with love was not closed because one woman had spurned us from. As she had given no address, he called down upon her lawyer as the most likely person to know her whereabouts.

'Miss Cavendish,' said that gentleman, 'was at the sea-shore quite lately, by the doctor's orders—a slight difficulty of the throat. Had some quotabet about carrying her daily bread, but has been practising her voice too steadily. Women who are edited to be idle are always hankering for vocation. Her relatives made much an ado about a Cavendish working that she has not edited their dues. They made her a lady of leisure. You'd better call in the city; she has people all day. Much is thought about not marrying, perhaps you know? she'll change her mind when she sees you,' laughed Mr. Small. 'Oh, by-the-way,' he called after Guy, 'I'm growing absent-minded—it's age; don't grow old, sir, it's a bad habit. To spare the feelings of her high and mighty relatives, Miss Cavendish has assumed her mother's maiden name, Lovell—ask for Miss Juliette Lovell.'

'Miss Lovell!' gasped Guy. 'What does she mean by keeping up such a masquerade with me?'

'You had better go and ask her.'

And Guy obeyed.

'I was at the beach for my health,' Miss Cavendish explained, later, after some pleasant preliminaries had passed. 'I could not afford to lose my voice, but I never dreamed of meeting you there. Afterward I thought perhaps you might grow to like me, if nobody obliged you to do so. I had taken my mother's name, not to deceive you, but because my father's family has disgraced when I entered the ranks of the laborers. I must either marry you or work. When you asked me to take you for better or worse, I was afraid it was pity instead of love, because people were cool to me after our journey to Bagdad, and I hadn't time to confess my secret. I went down next morning to surprise you with it, but you had left without a word. I supposed you had been amusing yourself, as your cousins said; that you could never have loved me under any circumstances; and then I decided you should never know that Miss Lovell was Miss Cavendish, disguised by seven years of Europe and an equiline nose. So I wrote you that letter of dismissal, if you please.'

'And, after all, we lose our hearts and keep our commandments, my dear Juliette! What will Cousin Essie say when she hears that Miss Lovell and I have been destined for each other from the beginning?'

The Canada Pacific Railway.

An Imperial Guarantee Declined—The Appointment of an Imperial Land Commissioner Urged.

A special telegram to the Globe says: The Colonial Secretary has not found it advisable to recommend a guarantee for the Canadian Pacific Railway extension desired by Sir John Macdonald, but the Imperial support may be given to the proposed extension in another form.

Part of the scheme laid before Sir Michael Hicks-Beach suggested the appointment of an Imperial Commission to act in conjunction with the Dominion Commission to have charge of lands hypothecated for the construction of the railway.

The Canadian representatives now here have impressed upon the Government the importance of having an Imperial Commissioner co-operating with the Dominion Commission.

The amount of money required to complete the line along the shore of Lake Superior to Thunder Bay, and thence to Red River, is estimated at $10,000,000.

Without the Imperial guarantee a new loan may be obtained by the Canadian Government to complete the line, but it would add to the strength of the financial position if an Imperial Commissioner took part in the administration of the lands or revenues upon which the loan may be based.

The scheme has been represented as a great emigration scheme, in which the mother country is chiefly interested.

Under these circumstances the Canadian Ministers have asked for the appointment of an Imperial Commissioner, whether the Government approve or continue to refuse the guarantee.

As Surely as Effect Follows Cause.

As surely as effect follows cause, so surely will disease eventually fasten itself upon a system deficient in vital energy. If tonic medication is not resorted to in time. The necessary tendency of a weak discharge of the functions of the body is to disorder its organs. Invigorative, prompt and thorough, is the only safeguard. No reservoir of depleted physical energy, no restorative of lost flesh, nerve power and cheerfulness, has more clearly demonstrated its efficacy than Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine. In this preparation, associated with the salutary medicines which form its basis, is pure sherry wine and certain aromatic constituents, which impart an agreeable taste to the article, and gives additional emphasis to its effects. In cases of general debility and dyspepsia it is invaluable and the desired effect is, in the vast majority of cases, remarkably prompt as well as decisive. That good natural appetite, which gives a relish for the coarsest fare, is insured by the use of the Quinine Wine, which also confers brain soothing and body refreshing sleep. Fever and ague and bilious remittent fever, are diseases to the eradication of which it is specially adapted; but it should be used only in the intervals between the paroxysm. The far-reaching effects of a good tonic, in all complaints involving loss of physical energy, are well understood by physicians, and the comprehensive influence for good of this preparation upon the system goes far to bear out the professional belief in the value of invigorants as opponents of disease. Joy Among the Children.

COPLAND'S SWEET CASTOR OIL, equally suitable for children and adults. Endorsed by over 600 doctors in Canada.

The difficulty of administering nauseous medicines, and the desirability of having them pleasant to the taste, induced T. Copland to undertake researches which resulted in the discovery of a Sweet Castor Oil, perfectly palatable, of the same strength and medical qualities as the ordinary Castor Oil, and while equally safe and harmless, yet acting with more certainty, and producing neither nausea nor griping. Some children say it is honey; others call it syrup—they all say they like it. One parent says—'My children drink it like water;' another—'We had to bide the bottle or they would have finished it right off;' another—'My little one has taken it twice without any trouble, and does not know what it is,' though she knows the ordinary Castor Oil and we never could get her to take it without a fight; yet another—'I wish you success of your Sweet Castor Oil; it is a splendid thing—sure to take the place of all the common oil.'

The extraordinary demand for this improvement on a simple household medicine has induced unscrupulous imitators into the market, but the public are guard themselves against substitution (which unprincipled parties are attempting to sell on the reputation of this article) by seeing that the name of 'COPLAND'S Sweet Castor Oil,' is on both wrapper and directions label.

The undersigned having purchased Messrs. T. Copland & Co.'s interest in the above preparation, are now manufacturing it at the old original recipe. Dispenser & Importer, Toronto.

Goods Sold Direct to the People at Wholesale Price.

The Only Business in Canada Conducted on the Same Principle.

Over $200,000 Worth of Boots and Shoes so Supplied Last Year.

The great loss annually sustained by selling to Dealers, first led to our establishing of Branch Stores, where we could supply direct to the people for Cash all the goods we could manufacture, thus giving to the people the goods less the dealer's profit, and saving to ourselves the annual loss. We were the more forcibly impressed into this step from the fact that cheap Eastern-made shoddy goods were being palmed off as our goods. We now sell our own goods, warrant what we sell, use no shoddy or inferior material of any kind, and can and do supply goods of the best quality 25 per cent. less than they can be bought elsewhere.

Everything Marked in Plain Figures. Only One Price.

CUSTOM DEPARTMENT.

Our arrangements are now complete in this department, and we can make to measure promptly either Ladies', Gentlemen's, or Children's Goods, in the Latest Styles, at little over half the price usually charged.

IMPROVED CHURN DASHER.

(Patented July, 1879.)

Introduced to all the old fashioned Round, Tub or Crock Churns. It will churn and gather the butter in from 4 to 10 minutes, and turn out 10 per cent more butter than anything of the kind in use. Each section or Sweep is an Air Chamber, which forces a large volume of atmosphere down into the milk or cream at each stroke, the cream or milk at the same time is forced over upward of four hundred inches of surface, and is thrown with such great velocity against the walls of the churn that it ruptures the globules and leaves the butter with a few strokes. It is perfectly simple and easily constructed,—no machinery about it to get out of order.

THE GREAT CAUSE of Human Misery.

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the rational and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

☞Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cents, or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

The Prodigal's Prayer.

BY T. C. DEAN.

I.

My path grows dark. Where'er I turn I meet
The phantasmas of remorse, which, from my breast
Will not depart; and oh! my wand'ring feet
Have grown so weary that they fain would rest.
Within my hearing sweet lovelily calls
His hand together; while upon my brow
The bitter curse of all my folly falls,
Until my soul knows naught of peace; but now
I will arise and leave my sin and pain.
My father takes the wanderer back again.

II.

Yes, take me back again. I have made light
Of thy commandments, for beyond the pale
Of all forgiveness. At thy holy might
I've often mocked. Beyond the sunny vale,
Where in their gladness all Thy children dwell,
I've journeyed heedless of Thy calls to me,
Until the evil one's destroying spell
Fills up my heart; lost in my misery—
With sins more numerous than drops of rain—
My Father take Thy son to Thee again.

III.

Yes! take me back again. Alas! my hands
Are empty. I have let the harvest day
Pass by unheeded. On the barren lands
Of sin I've passed Thy precious time away,
Where Satan's crowd blaspheme Thy holy name.
Far from the blessed shelter of Thy fold—
I've drifted, and have turned of their shame.
Instead of harvesting my sheaves of gold,
But, oh, my Father, let me not in vain
Cry unto Thee to take me back again.

IV.

Yes! take me back again. Oh, do not say:
"Depart, I know you not!" but in Thy great Triumphant mercy, listen while I pray;
And though my sins be heavy as the weight
Of many worlds—thick as the flakes of snow
Which through the weary, waste of winter fall
Or shadows grim that flicker to and fro
At eve—I know that Thou will pardon all.
Ah, yes, my Father, Thou will not disdain
To take the weary wanderer back again.

A Nervous People.

Excellent medical authority asserts that the constant strain of business, added to the dryness of our climate, has so changed the constitution that it is impossible for us to do what our fathers did before us safely. "We are," says Dr. Beard, "ten degrees more sensitive to cold than we were," as the cases of sunstroke and heat prostration bear evidence. There is an immense increase in neuralgia, sick head-ache, hay fever, nervous exhaustion, and especially in dyspepsia, in itself the potent source of a host of physical and mental irritants and distresses. Now with such systems as we have, high-strung, irritable, and nervous, the use of stimulants cannot be otherwise than injurious. It is impossible to use them as they were used in the days gone by. There is hardly a man of middle age who does not remember that hospitality and a side board of wines and liquors were synonymous terms. Both men and women drank freely, and professional men and the clergy indulged in the same habit. It would be folly to say that what is a vice now was a virtue then, but it can be safely asserted that people did indulge then without the same injurious effects that follow the practice now. The predominant nervousness of the present time had not been developed. Our ancestors could drink freely, smoke extravagantly, indulge to excess in tea and coffee, and yet live to a serene old age; now it is simply impossible. True, the traffic in ardent spirits has enormously increased but so has the population. True, people yet drink to excess, but they do not do it with impunity. Circumstances have altered cases, and two-thirds of the present terrible effects flowing from intemperance are due to the changed physiological condition of the human race, and especially in this country, where people are strung up to a tension that will no more allow a free use of strong drinks than a bare filled with straw will permit the introduction of fire.—Newark Advertiser.

Manitoba Products.

Manitoba will be represented in the exhibition at Ottawa by the following collection:—Samples of all the woods in the country, nicely dressed; a couple assortments of all the furs in the North-west; all the birds, animals, and reptiles, nicely stuffed; the horns and heads of wild animals; samples of the soil in glass tubes, showing it from one to four feet in depth; the clays, wild rice, wild hops. Indian curiosities, pemmican, dried meat, horns, all the wild and cultivated grasses, grain in the straw, wild vegetables, such as turnips, on which the Indians on the plains live to a large extent; samples of stones, bricks and pottery; the prepared skins of wild animals, and other things too numerous to mention. Besides these there will be an assortment of grains, roots, butter cheese, etc. The exhibit from the Prairie Province will be of an interesting character; and especially so to the people of Ontario who are so largely represented in that region.

A Vegetable Curiosity.

A remarkable freak of vegetation has appeared in the grounds of R. B. Tatman, at worcester, in the shape of a potato vine which bears tomatoes. It appears to be a mixture of the two vegetables, and is accounted for by the fact that a strong tomato vine from chance-sown seed grew in the same hill with the potatoes, and the pollen of the two plants became mixed. Unfortunately the vines were pulled up before the peculiarity of the growth was noticed. Some of our agriculturists may derive a valuable suggestion from this. As both the potato and the tomato are of the solanaceous family, it is not impossible that one should be fertilized by the other, and a remarkable economy of labor might be effected if careful and scientific cultivation should produce a plant which would bear good potatoes at the root and good tomatoes on the tops.—*Springfield (Mass.) Buried in a well.

On Wednesday morning John Farrell, a labourer, while cleaning out a well on the premises of Mr. Kerr, George street, Belleville, was buried beneath a pile of stones, which covered him to a depth of twenty-two feet. He was in the bucket, some twelve feet from the bottom of the well, which is thirty-four feet deep, when the stones gave way beneath him. The stones which fell from above formed an arch above him, and after about an hour's work he was able to converse with those who were working to rescue him. He was got out after about six hours hard labour. When liberated he was found to have sustained no injury beyond the trembling of one of his feet. It was a miraculous escape.

ATROCIOUS DOUBLE MURDER

A Father and his Youngest Daughter Chopped to Death with an Axe.

A SON'S CRIME—CLARK BROWN'S TERRIBLE CONFESSION.

WEST WINCHESTER, Ontario, Sept. 3rd.—A most atrocious double murder was committed near this place last evening, about nine o'clock. Robert Brown, a well-to-do and respected farmer, and his daughter Ada, an innocent little girl of some twelve years of age, were literally chopped to death in their own house. It is stated by Mrs. Brown that the family, consisting of herself, Mr. Brown, her son Clark, Ada, aged twelve, and Minnie, aged eight, were sleeping upstairs; Clark in a room over the main part of the house; the others in the chamber over the kitchen, both chambers having separate stairs; that a man rapped at the front door of the kitchen; her husband went down stairs, and was attacked by the man. A struggle then ensued. She went down, followed by the youngest girl, and seeing some one struggling with her husband, ran out of the back door to give the alarm. The elder of the two girls being last to come down was attacked at the foot of the stairs by the man and brutally murdered, her head and shoulders being hacked in a shocking manner in four or five places. The son Clark, who makes a similar statement, adds that he ran down the stairs from his room and encountered the strange man as his father was falling dead, that he tried to shoot the man and seize him but failed, that the man in passing out met his sister Ada, and struck her with the axe, felling her to the floor, and immediately escaped. The brutal deed was performed with Brown's axe, found afterwards near the back kitchen door. No trace of the man can be found, although many have been out searching. Brown was not known to have an enemy. No one as yet suspected. Intense excitement prevails.

NEW WESTMINSTER, Sept. 5th.—In the Brown murder case Constable Pike, who was with the prisoner Clark Brown, son of the deceased, all night, along with Constable Stallmyer, says Clark put in a very uneasy night. Dr. Reddick was sent for, and gave him some medicine, after which Clark slept an hour or so. Rev. A. Rowat, Presbyterian minister, visited him this morning about six o'clock, and requested him if he had done wrong to confess it openly, holding out the inducement of forgiveness being granted only on that condition. He made an open confession before the two constables and the Rev. Mr. Rowat. In confessing he stated that he rapped on the door below to bring his father down stairs; that he struck him with the axe at the foot of the kitchen stairs, expecting to kill him instantly, and leave him till morning. Having partly failed, his father ran into the bedroom below, where the struggle between him and his father took place, the final and fatal blow being dealt on the prostrate body of his father outside of the bedroom. Just at the door he then saw his sister and despatched her to cover the crime of murdering his father. He states that neither his mother nor his wife, nor any other person was implicated. On being pressed to give his reason for committing the horrible crime, he said he could not give any reason. He had thought of doing it all that day; that his mind was strangely acted upon, and a determination to do the deed seized him that evening.

CLARK BROWN'S CONFESSION.

After the evidence of several witnesses had been taken yesterday Clark Brown made the following statement:—I will tell it for the benefit of others, I am guilty; what I done the deed for I don't know; I went up to bed alone that night, and a thought struck me that I should kill my father; I jumped up, took my pants, and went down stairs, put them on and went to the woodshed for the axe, God forgive me, I came in and rapped on the door; father came down, and as he opened the stair door I struck him a blow on the forehead; I think to the best of my knowledge I struck at him again but missed him; he jumped up and went into the bedroom; I followed him there and gave him several blows in the bedroom; I think that he struggled out of the bedroom on his knees; I dealt him a blow there, and turned round and saw my sister standing on the floor; I struck her several blows as she ran to the foot of the stairs; she fell, and I then ran to my room, got a lamp, came down, and ran up the other stairway; I caught up my other sister in my arms and brought her down stairs; I do not expect mercy from man; I have no object in telling as untruth, but would say for God's sake do not accuse my mother or wife; there was no one ever said a word to me; it is an awful thing; my wife said that night before she went away, "Clark, if you get any worse send for me;" I told her I would; all I am sorry for is that I did not tell it yesterday; I hope God will forgive me for it; my mother did not know anything about it till after she came back; for God's sake do not blame her or my wife, or any one; do not cast suspicion on them; there was not a word spoken by my father, but he hallood "Murder!" I had my socks on all the time; that is all I have to say; we always lived agreeably; that is all; I never thought before of committing the crime.

The verdict of the jury is as follows:—

That Clark Brown, on the 2nd day of September, A. D. 1879, in the Township of Wilberforce, County of Dundas, did feloniously and wilfully murder Ada Brown, aged twelve years, and Minnie Brown, aged eight years, the children of our Lady the Queen, her Crown and Dignity.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 4.—By the arrival of the Saskatchewan mail we learn that great uneasiness was caused at Battleford by the non-arrival of the money to pay the Indians, who had assembled to receive their annuities. MONTREAL, Sept. 4.—It is stated here on good authority that the Brazilian Government have agreed to give a subsidy to the Canadian line of steamers, and that the arrangements will go into operation probably not later than the beginning of next year.

A Yacht Capsized.

SACKETT'S HARBOUR, N. Y. Sept. 5.—The sailing yacht West Wind capsized [illegible] Bay, about eleven this morning. Nine people were on board, seven of whom attempting to swim ashore, half a mile away, were drowned. Two clung to a spar and were rescued. The lost are Byron and Nelson Westcott, brothers; Edward Benjamin Shuler, Howard Drake, Lewis Allen Ramsay, and Edward York. Five leave families. The wind was very strong and the boat had heavy ballast causing her to sink.

Swimming.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 5.—The swimming match between Boyton and Webb to-day at Nantucket Beach attracted quite a crowd, but owing to some misunderstanding, information could not be obtained as to the exact position or time. The referee could not reach the press boat, and the reporters were unable to get ashore on account of the absence of surf boats. Webb came in two minutes ahead of his competitor, but the referee reserved his decision until some disputed points about the stake boat and other matters could be settled. The beach was brilliantly illuminated during the evening.

MEMPHIS, Sept 5.—A Herald's Memphis special reports the death of Mattie Rene, the heroic Magdalen, who has been ministering to the sick among the lowly until she fell a victim her self. Two clergymen attended her funeral.

The following telegram from Jay Gould has been received by the Howard Association:—

The New York workingmen held a mass meeting yesterday, denounced the Republican party, endorsed Kearneyism, and asserted the claims of workingmen to office.

Washington.

Washington, Sept. 4—The Collector for the second district of Kentucky reports that while Deputy Collector Ray, with two assistants, was attempting to capture an illicit distillery in Barren County, six or eight men in ambush commenced firing on the officers, who returned the fire, killing one man and badly wounding another. The remainder of the attacting party fled.

Halifax.

Sir Charles Tupper remains in town, and, it is said will be here till Tuesday next, when his son Charles marries a daughter of Hon. James Macdonald, Minister of Justice.

A number of dismissals have been made at Intercolonial Railway stations during the past few days. Halifax Station is said to have had twenty-four of the regular staff discharged, and Moncton Station fifty.

Great Britain.

It is stated in Dublin that the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland has requested the police of Limerick to report the circumstances under which Parnell, member of Parliament for Meath, as a recent banquet suffered the hissing which greeted the toast of "the Queen" to pass unnoticed, though he is a magistrate and a member of Parliament.

The strike of chain-makers is now in its fifth week, and promises to be one of the severest ever experienced. There are still two thousand hands on strike around Cradley.

Ottawa.

The army of office-seekers has been strongly reinforced during the past few days, and the departments of Public Works and of Railways and Canals have had rather more than their share. The run on the letter department has probably been caused by the supposition that Sir Charles Tupper had resumed his duties, but the gallant knight is still engaged on urgent private affairs, and the seekers after place are fain to contain their souls in patience.

Trouble with the Indians.

News from Qu'Appelle states that there has been difficulty, with the Indians. The starving savages became furious, and three of the chiefs were arrested by the Mounted Police as ringleaders in their good behaviour. This made the trouble worse, and the Indians informed the police that if any attempts were made to remove the prisoners they would make prompt revenge on them. All the chiefs were subsequently released. Trouble is also reported from Fort Ellice, but it will probably have nothing more. The Fire Fiend says it is quite possible that there may be some trouble this season, as the Indians have been promised a visit from the Governor-General, and have been disappointed. A gathering was expected to take place at Qu'Appelle, and considerable [illegible]

TAKEN POSSESSION.—Mr. S. J. Griffin last week took possession of his really magnificent and costly white brick residence facing Peterborough street, from where an admirable view is obtained of this grand structure, and the passer-by is at once struck with the beauty of the terraced grounds,—although yet in an unfinished state—and the handsome and appropriate surroundings. The interior of the building is replete with every description of modern improvement required to ensure comfort and convenience.

We have been informed by competent judges from Peterborough, who have visited this edifice, that there is nothing to surpass it in beauty, design, style of finish, or completeness in every particular, even in our County Town, where there are a number of expensive and superb private residences.

SHIPMENT OF CATTLE:—Mr. James Clysdale, of Dummer, on Friday last, despatched another cargo of about thirty head of cattle for Montreal. These animals were all in prime condition and will no doubt yield good prices.

A Happy Season.

An intelligent, pious teacher, is a great blessing. Young people and children so favored, should resolve to make the best of their special advantages, and improve them ere they pass away. Study the lesson at home, and, provided there are many points in which you feel interested, but which have not been brought out by your teacher, call attention thereto. Your teacher will be pleased and greatly encouraged, and the class will be benefited by the answers to your questions. Every scholar should try to make the school session a good happy season. PETERBOROUGH, SEPT'R 11. 1879.

THE POSITION IN QUEBEC.

Since our last article on the Quebec deadlock was written, the Legislative Assembly has adjourned until late in October, about two months. A proposition was first made to the Legislative Council to hold a joint conference whereby a reconciliation of the difficulty between the two Chambers might be attempted; but this the irreconcilliables of the so-called Upper House rejected. In then adjourning the Assembly, the Government adopted the only sensible course seemingly open to them, short of an immediate dissolution, and an appeal to the country. The latter is a course against which the Joly Administration has striven, not so much from any fear of the result, as to save the Province the heavy expense of a general election at a time when the finances cannot bear it. The Legislative Council has passed a resolution in which is expressed regret that the Assembly adjourned without finding, in the words of the Lieutenant-Governor's message, "means to reconcile the differences between the two Chambers." To the proposed adoption of means to that end, they turned a deaf ear; therefore, their regret is but a censure on themselves, though not intended as such. In one sense, no doubt, their regret at the adjournment of the Assembly is sincere, as it affords another proof to the people that Mr. Joly and his colleagues are sincere in their efforts to practice economy. It would have suited the Legislative Councillors better had the session been prolonged, and the expenses of its continuance heaped on the Province, that they might lay the blame on the Government. But now the Assembly has ceased to be a drain on the exchequer as a sessional body; and the longer the Upper House continues in session, the more will the little game reflect on its originators. From the utterances of their journals, it is evident that the Tories themselves feel that the move through the Legislative Council has been a mistake. All that the most sanguine Tory now proposes is the formation of a coalition government. This of itself is a sign of weakness on the part of the Opposition; for they certainly would not propose a coalition did they have the slightest hope of a clear party success. As might have been expected, such a proposal has not been considered by the Joly Ministry, which is likely to be strengthened rather than weakened by the turn affairs have taken. The business of the Province must be carried on for two months without a vote of money. The want of funds will be felt by others more than by members of the Government and their supporters, personally, and the blame will be laid on the right shoulders, those of the Legislative Councillors. These worthies will be the more execrated from the statement that before their attempted coup they, Tory-like, took good care to secure their own indemnities, at least, so we are informed, though it seems an incredible piece of sharp practice on their part. In any case it will do them no good with the electors; and must have a politically injurious effect on the party in the Assembly whom they represent, should an election be a final resort. The probabilities are that on the reassembling of Parliament the Legislative Councillors will be more amenable to reason than they are inclined to be at present.

Kingston Whig: "The Liberal party should make war upon the non-elective principle wherever it has a foothold in our Legislative institutions. We want no such relic of bygone political barbarism and tyranny as a Crown nominated Parliament. If it were really created by the Crown it would be bad enough in principle we mean, but not so bad as it actually is. Crown nominations would stand some chance of being politically neutral and respectable. Both our Upper Houses—Federal Senate included—are made up of the mere favourites of the dominant party of the hour, and represent the party appointing them and not the people. The electors of Canada will not tolerate long such tyrannical and irresponsible pranks as that which is making the Legislative Council of Quebec stink in the nostrils of every lover of responsible Government and representative institutions."

THE N. P.—ITS EFFECT.

The local N. P. organ is very stupid or wilfully blind in matters of political economy. It professes with the old surface view of protectionist advocates to see inconsistency in the remarks of Free Traders, that the purpose of protection is for the enrichment of monopolists at the expense of the general people; and the argument that manufacturers must soon suffer in their locked-in home market by rapidly overstocking it with goods they have been encouraged to manufacture largely under mistaken notions of trade. There can be no doubt that the anticipations of N P. manufacturers were, that they would get rich on higher prices wrung from their fellow-citizens through the effect of an oppressive import tax shutting out foreign competition. If this be not the meaning of protection, it has no meaning at all. And but for disadvantageous circumstances, which arise to most every advantage deliberately sought to be gained, certain manufacturers, under a protective tariff, might succeed in grabbing a large supply of pelf. With a large supply of goods for sale during the era of enhanced prices, by the increased duty they could drag in a considerable amount of money prior to the coming of the time when home competition, in the narrowed market, forced prices down. Seizing this opportunity, and getting out of the trade before the reaction affected them seriously, would make them the gainers, and their successors the sufferers. But overstocking, as Tory papers truly aver, was helped by excessive importations in anticipation of a high tariff; and the day of retribution has come to most of the N. P. agitators sooner than any one might have expected. The most highly protected manufacturers already find more goods of their line in the market than the purchasing power of the people can absorb, and their only alternative is to bring down prices at once, or postpone the evil day, or a cessation or curtailment of production. This is just what the manufacturers of woollen goods and furniture are doing, much to the disgust of the public in general, and particularly of their employees, who have to suffer the direct loss of wages in consequence of getting less work to do. This is the general effect of a high tariff on every protected business, and the loss in every case falls on those who have nothing to sell but their labor, which never receives any governmental protection, and the farmer whose products are the direct result of labor bestowed on nature's material, has to "pay the piper."

CORONER'S INQUESTS.

The necessity of investigation into the cause of death, in many cases renders the establishment of means to that end a necessity. In Ontario we have for this purpose the office of coroner—ancient indeed; but we fear we can no longer say, honorable. The payment of the officer by fee has led to an anxiety on the part of many holding the office to hold inquests on the slightest or no provocation, beyond the desire to pocket the money. We do not wish to be understood as declaring that all coroners are actuated by such sordid motives; but so well established is the fact that many of them display a horrid desire to call up an inquiry in cases where death has been plainly the result of natural causes or pure accident, that one cannot wonder the whole body of coroners has fallen into disrepute, and become popularly known as. cormorants. The reader will probably be able to recall instances in which wholly unnecessary inquests have been held; and an open, or non-committal verdict been returned; to no end save the bagging of the fee by the coroner and perhaps another by the medical man called in to hold a post mortem examination of the body. The whole difficulty arises from the impossibility of drawing a hard and fast line to determine when an inquiry should be held, and when one should be avoided. As the law now stands here, this is entirely to the will of the coroner. At least this is the result of a free rendering of the clause of the Act, which states that an inquest shall be held whenever "it has been made to appear to the coroner that there is reason to believe the death has been caused by violent or unfair means." Now it does not require a great stretch of imagination in the mind of a man who sees a good fat fee at the end of an inquiry to induce him to believe that almost any death has been caused by 'violent' means; and some who have been made coroner can readily supply 'violence' without doing much of it to their consciences. It is really wonderful in some instances how little 'reason' will establish in the mind of a coroner the 'belief' required by the Act. There is a question also as to what interpretation the word 'violent' in the connection should bear. It does seem absurd to suppose that all deaths by accidental violence should be included; and that nearly all, if not all, sudden deaths should be regarded as calling for an inquest, as is the case generally. It would be a pity to forbid inquests in all cases of accidental death; for there may be circumstances in which culpable negligence can be proved against someone, who would therefor deserve punishment. But unless there be some suspicion of such liability on which to ground a reason to believe, we scarcely think the coroner is justified in holding an inquest based on mere mystery, which attaches somewhat to every death that takes place. If coroners would await such 'reason' there would not be so many unfruitful, unnecessary, and utterly farcical inquests, or so many fees to pay in consequence. It is probably safe to say that every accidental death in the result of carelessness on the part of some one; but how many coroner's juries ever succeed in establishing any such fact in a distinct manner? Take railway accidents and explosions for instance; and notice how carefully the verdict in almost every case exonerates all those connected with train or explosive from blame. It would almost seem from the findings of the juries that this is the especial purpose for which they had been called. In cases of death from drunkenness, too, the general verdict is one of 'natural causes.' True it is natural that a man should die if he is placed in just such circumstances as must end in his death. Is it not wrong to allow him, much more to encourage him, to pursue the fatal course? If the death of a drunkard is by 'natural causes,' so is that of any man whose nature is in to die, because of the killing process, however applied. Where is the use of holding inquests and rendering such verdicts? Is it not a hideous mockery—a ghastly game in the presence of death? Another seeming anomaly is the grave process gone through after every capital execution, of holding an inquest on the body of the man who has been hanged. Of course death in such case has been 'violent,' and may be regarded by some as 'unfair;' but what is the use of calling a jury to determine judicially the cause of a death judicially taken? We should think it enough that a medical officer should pronounce the criminal dead, without further ceremony.

In Quebec, where the law regarding coroners is similar to that of Ontario, an effort is being made to point out some of the abuses carried on under the cover of the cloak of justice." It is proposed to enact that,—"No coroner shall hold an inquest on the death of any person, except where it is established by sworn complaint and information that there is reason to suspect that such death has been caused by the commission of a crime." It is thought by some who have critically examined this proposition that such information under oath, would become merely formal, and that any interested coroner would easily procure a sworn statement if he went about it. But he would have to go to more trouble than now stands in his way; and there would be far from a certainty that he could, however wily in the attempt, cast foul suspicion into the mind of anyone so far as to get an oath to suit his evident purpose. With care in the framing of such a clause as we have quoted, we believe it will be found to be a great improvement, and a much needed one on the present coroner's regulations. In Scotland, inquiries into cause of death are founded on information laid with a regular officer called the Procurator Fiscal; and there criminality does not seem to get any less rigorous range than with our disgracefully carried out plan of coroner's inquests. We hope the Quebec law will be changed in the direction proposed, and that a reform will also be introduced into Ontario, which shall prevent many of the body-snatching farces that are now carried on under pretence of serving the end of justice; but really to serve the ends of the coroner.

Sir John Macdonald will return to Canada by the steamer sailing to-day.

Advice to the Grand Junction Railway Company:—Do less blowing and more blasting. Indulge in less railing and more rail-laying.

Oats are falling in price instead of going up, as the farmers had a right to expect under the "N.P." The same holds good of wool. Those farmers who voted for a measure which these early results against them will think twice before they are again led away by Tory claptrap.

The N. Y. Sun, alluding to the opening of the schools in the metropolis on Monday, says: We should have better schools, we should save much money, and we should more wisely and equitably treat our boys and girls if the number of studies and occupations was reduced by one-half. This applies with equal force to education in Ontario.

A cablegram to the Globe says:—Col. Grey writes to Sir Henry Tyler saying if the Grand Trunk will put before the Great Western Railway Company the precise arrangement the Grand Trunk proposes, it will be considered by the officers and submitted to the stockholders of the Great Western at a meeting to be held as soon as possible.

The New York Herald's Auburn special states that Courtney in an interview yesterday said he was satisfied that a race with Hanlan will be soon arranged. In answer to an enquiry if he felt confident of his ability to beat Hanlan in smooth water he said:—"No; I am not confident of anything of the kind. I cannot beat either Hanlan or Riley if they can row two miles in 12 min. 25 sec."

The pestilence still rages in Memphis, and the Howard Association has been compelled to ask for aid from the country at large. Whether or not Memphis has used all wise sanitary precautions in the past is not the question to discuss when poverty and sickness are appealing to our kindly feelings. Suffering must be relieved, for Memphis is learning a bitter lesson, and needs just now help and sympathy.

The proposed invitation of the Governor-General and the Princess to Lindsay and Peterboro has been practically abandoned. The neighbouring town took the cooler and more sensible view that in these hard times they had no money to spare for a "reception," and a good many in this town held the same opinion. No doubt this way of looking at it has a good deal of force this year, and it can be held without feeling a lack of loyalty.—Post

An important movement has just been inaugurated against intemperance in Great Britain. It is the formation of a joint-stock company with a million of capital in shares of one pound each, to provide temperance coffee-houses and temperance places all over the kingdom. It is expected that they will be successful competitors with the public houses, and will also return a fair rate of interest on the capital invested.

We notice among our Conservative exchanges as occasional article in favor of an irredeemable currency. It is evident that the pernicious doctrine is being disseminated gradually, and that at the next general election this insane scheme will be one of the prominent planks of the Conservative platform. The genuine rag baby has proved a curse to the United States, but Conservatives tactics, just now, demand schemes of legislation for making everybody rich.

In referring to the pernicious system of cramming in some of the public schools, the Stratford Beacon says: "It is notorious fact that many of the youth attending the high schools are most defective in a knowledge of the fundamentals of good English education—reading, writing, arithmetic and grammar. And this is the legitimate fruit of the "cramming" system. We have no hesitation in saying that half of our high school pupils ought to be in the common schools, getting the foundations well laid."

They are having a second edition of the famous Guibord case in New York. A Roman Catholic who was the owner of a lot in a Catholic cemetery was shot the other day, and on his friends bringing the body to the cemetery for interment, the church authorities refused to allow it to be interred in consecrated grounds, because the deceased had belonged to a Masonic lodge. What will be the upshot to the matter it is difficult to foretell.

The Globe says:—An American Journal gets off in sober earnest this "good one" at the expense of the N. P.:—

"It is stated that the Dominion government [illegible] to the Duke of Argyll, the Governor-General, to be held at the pleasure of the Queen, and not of the Dominion Government. The object of the change is to prevent the Governor-General from being [illegible] Canada, as he would be if he were appointed by the Dominion Government. It would take at least 10,000 men to guard this carrier by day and another 10,000 by night, and even then smuggling would go on almost as badly as before, even supposing that "My Dear Gov" and those of his kidney did not get places on the "Preventive Service."

This is the indirect way in which Mr. Chapleau asks to be taken into the Quebec Government. He moves a resolution to the following effect: "That this House do not proceed to the order of the day, but that it be resolved that the state of uncertainty and agitation in which the Province stands, and the conflict that has arisen between the two branches of the Legislature, require the immediate formation of a strong Administration." In other words, the only way a strong Administration can be formed in the estimation of Mr. Chapleau would be to take himself, Taste, Loranger and a few other rabid partisans into the Cabinet.

The Scientific American, one of the leading authorities in America, seems to have no doubt as to the feasibility of heating cities by steam, and says that the principle is no longer a question of experiments. Lockport, New York State, has successfully applied the Holly steam heating system, and from all accounts a great saving has been effected. Should the scheme come into general use in the States it is more than likely that Canadians will not be slow to copy, and our long, cold winter will become a period of pleasure and comfort instead of blue, cold noses and wrinkled brows, as it is at present.

"The good old game" of cricket has been allowed to fall into disrespect in Canada during the past few years, owing to the craze over base ball and lacrosse. It is, however, the game par excellence, and the one suited to develope muscular strength, while calling for such exercise as will not expose its votaries to the danger of too great exertion. The recent splendid playing of the Hamilton Club will, we trust, serve as a stimulus to cricketers throughout Canada, and be the means of reviving the spirit of many an old veteran of the manly game. It teaches the lesson that success in any capacity enforces—that constant practice makes perfect. The Hamilton Club have played together until the strong points of each member have been well brought out and developed. They go into the field with confidence in each other and in the aggregate result of their performance.

THE VICE-REGAL PARTY.

ARRIVAL IN TORONTO.

AN ENTHUSIASTIC RECEPTION.

On Friday last, at 11 a.m., the Governor General and his royal wife, together with the members of their suite, arrived in Toronto, and got off the train at the foot of Lorne street, a short cut that runs south from the Queen's Hotel to the Esplanade. Ranged on either side of this little street were seats for the accommodation of the children attending the Public and Separate Schools of the city; and these were occupied by no less than eight—some say ten—thousand of those for whom they were intended. A salute of twenty-one guns announced that their Excellencies were in our midst. Introductions of several prominent citizens, both lay and clerical, having taken place, the Governor General and the Princess Louise received from four female scholars representing the Common Schools and four representing the Separate Schools, bouquets and songs neatly bound. The children then sang "The Campbells are coming," and "Canada's Welcome," the latter song being composed for the occasion by Mr. Awde, and set to music by Mr. Gledhill. The harmony of so many voices had, it is said, a most gratifying effect on the distinguished visitors.

The Vice-regal party then entered carriages and were escorted to the Horticultural Gardens. The sidewalks along the whole route were thronged with people; and the surging masses, and the music of the bands, and the arches and decorations, and the flags flying from every building of note in the city—all combined made a sight never before equalled in Toronto. Never before did Toronto present such a gala appearance; and never did it witness so vast a concourse within its limits. Some were more than ordinarily effervescent in the expression of their enthusiasm; and all seemed well pleased with everybody and everything. Like old Zeck Taylor, they were doubtless "at peace with all the world and the rest of mankind." The order of procession to the Gardens was as follows:

Queen's Own Band.
Fire Brigade.
Detachment of Body Guard.
His Worship the Mayor and City Clerks in Carriages.
Body Guard.
The Governor-General, Princess Louise, and Major De Winton in carriage.
Captain Harbord, Hon. Mr. Monsoe, Lady Sophia Monsmaara, and Hon. Mrs. Moreton.
Lieutenant-Governor Macdonald and Captain Grant.
Members of the Ontario Government in carriages.
Members of the City Council in carriages.
Members of the Public and Separate School Board in carriages.

Arrived at the intersection of Young and Queen streets, a halt was ordered by the Chief of Police, Major Dingey, who was marshal, the Scotsman, who led, opened ranks, and the vice-regal party and those who followed passed on. The party at length reached its destination, where already many had assembled. Those who had tickets for the Pavillion entered the Gardens from the Carleton street side; those who had "outside" tickets, or tickets simply for the grounds, entered by the gate on Gerrard street. Their Excellencies alighted near the fountain; and, walking from that point to the Pavilion, ascended and took position on the platform. Mayor Beaty having made a bow becoming his civic dignity, read the civic address. His Excellency replied, thanking the citizens of Toronto for the hearty reception they had accorded him. His Worship then presented to the Governor-General the members of the Industrial Exhibition. The President of the Horticultural Society, Hon. G. W. Allan, having respectfully requested the Princess Louise to plant a tree commemorative of her visit to the Horticultural Gardens, Her Royal Highness was pleased to accede to the request, and planted a Scotch pine, which the honorable gentleman hoped would grow and flourish as a memorial of the visit of the Princess. The planting was done with a silver spade; and the sapling having had its roots carefully covered up, Her Royal Highness inspected the trees formerly planted by her brothers, the Prince of Wales and the Duke of Connaught.

The ceremonies at the Gardens being concluded, the vice-regal party took their carriages for the Exhibition. The route was by Jarvis to King street; along King street to the Exhibition Grounds, which were duly reached. Ex-Alderman Withrow, President of the Industrial Exhibition Association of Toronto, presented to His Excellency the address of that body, which was suitably replied to. The officers of the Association were then introduced to their Excellencies. After this Mr. Fleury presented the address of the County Council of York, to which his Excellency replied; the members of the County Council, as in the case of the members of the Industrial Association, were presented to the Marquis and Princess. The buildings having undergone inspection, His Excellency declared the Exhibition formally opened to the public.

The vice-regal party next visited various departments of industry shown at the Exhibition; and having spent many time in inspecting what was to be seen, their Excellencies and suite left for Government House, where they remain during their stay in the city.

The decorations in the city were on a magnificent scale from first to last, and the streets were even gayer than they which thronged them during the day while vehicles of every description were nobly blocked in some parts of the streets, no great were there number and the number of persons on foot. The most conspicuous of the illuminations were those on the Post Office and the fine buildings on both sides of Toronto street; the Globe office, the Mail office, and the Evening Telegram, the Custom House, the Parliament Buildings, Government House, Osgoode Hall, the Imperial Bank, St. Michaels Cathedral and Palace, the School buildings and grounds. The centre and suburbs of the city were one blaze of lights, and it seemed as if the surrounding country had lent its population to swell the vast crowds belonging to the city who had turned out to do honor to the first visit there of the Marquis of Lorne and his royal wife. It is doubtful if they ever before received a welcome in such large numbers and with such enthusiasm; and when the distinguished visitors take their departure from Toronto it cannot be otherwise than with a feeling that when the "Queen City of the West" chooses to come forth, she does so in no half-hearted fashion, but in a way becoming the leading city of the leading Province of the Confederacy.

THE VICTORIA RIFLES OF MONTREAL.

A Description of the 3rd Battalion.—Their Departure for the Review at Toronto.

(For the EXAMINER.)

The 3rd Battalion Victoria Rifles was organized on the 18th December, 1861, by a few enthusiastic and loyal young men, and since then many changes have taken place in its ranks and staff. The officer now in command, Col. E. A. Whitehead, is one of the few original members. He has risen from the ranks step by step to his present position; is a popular and brave officer, full of fight; and everything he undertakes for the Regiment he accomplishes successfully. There are many reasons why a young man is proud of being a member of the "Vics." It is imperative that to be an officer, you must serve as a private, and require a recommendation from members before being sworn in. Once a "Vic." it is almost a pass-word for admission into good society; your associates are bankers, brokers and merchants, and the professions are also well represented. There are Dramatic, Glee, Cricket and Snow-shoe Clubs in the Regiment. Since the first visit made by the Queen's Own of Toronto, in May 24th, 1878, to this city, they have been anxious for a return visit from the "Vics.," and have extended several invitations; but not until five weeks ago were any of them entertained. The officers consulted and decided to go. To raise funds was the only obstacle, but that was easily overcome. $500 from the officers, $500 from the privates and noncoms., $500 from concerts, and about $800 from the Government for transport, more than enough was subscribed in a few weeks; they have been actively training for the past few weeks to make successful display. Friday night inspection by the Colonel, they drilled and marched to perfection, and how neat, trim and soldier-like every man looked, and of their fine band of 40 instruments too much cannot be said, with an additional bugle band of 20 performers. Sunday church parade 3:30, marched to the church—St. James the Apostle's—where an impressive and appropriate sermon was preached by the Chaplain of the Regiment, Rev. Canon Ellegood. Monday, assembled on Champ de Mars, 5 p. m., preparatory to leaving by special train. On the way to the station, the streets were lined with spectators, all anxious to do honor to the departing "Vics." One company of the Prince of Wales' Rifles and their band played the boys off. The enthusiasm was intense; cheer after cheer arose as the train swung out. Once aboard the boys settled down not to sleep but to raise as much racket as they knew how,—singing, speechifying and bouncing. This morning they all look haggard and worse of wear. By-the-by I must not overlook the detachment of cavalry of 25 men, commanded by Captain McArthur. They are all strapping, manly fellows, a credit and honor to the city of Montreal. They accompany the "Vics." as guests, a special invitation having been given by Colonel Whitehead.

MONTREAL.

NEWCASTLE.

SAD DROWING ACCIDENT.—Last Thursday afternoon a sad occurrence happened at the port of Newcastle. As soon as school was over eight of the pupils went down to the lake for the purpose of bathing. The lake was exceedingly rough and the waves were running high, but that fact did not at all intimidate the boys, and they undressed and swam out. Charlie Farnicomb, who was a good swimmer, going farther than the rest. Returning towards the shore it was observed that he had great difficulty buffetting with the waves, and when he neared the breakwater he appeared to be seized with cramps as he threw up his arms and called for help. Charlie Brent jr., one of his companions, immediately swam to his assistance, but before he could reach him the poor boy had sank. Another boy named Frank Garvin, who could not swim and was standing near the shore, was also drowned, having been knocked down by a wave, and was never seen afterwards. The two boys were respectively the sons of Frederick Farnicombe, Collector of Customs, and Mr. Matthew Garvin, General Superintendent of the Massey Manufacturing Company. The sad affair has cast a gloom over the village, and great sympathy is expressed for the bereaved families

THE FARMER AND WOOL.

(From the Globe.)

When we ANNOUNCED a few days ago that 10,000 pounds of wool of the grades produced in Canada were being imported from Britain the Government organ had a fit of the blues, and could find no comfort except in declaring that the importer was sure to lose by the transaction. We have now to state that the same importer, Ald. Hallam, so far from finding the business unprofitable, is going into it more extensively. He has now sent an order for an additional 20,000 pounds of wool of the same class—viz., lambs and shearling wool of the Leicester, Down, and Cheviot breeds. It will soon be plain to the woollen manufacturers that, when they endorsed the Government to give them such a complete monopoly as they have, and at the same time to break distinct pledges given to the farmers, they did not act for the permanent good of their business. No farmer can help seeing that the woollen manufacturers grabbed all they could get, regardless of the rights of everybody, and that the Government had not honesty enough to refrain from complying with the manufacturers' demands.

Large numbers are now becoming summer tourists from Toronto and Hamilton to popular haunts, such as the Island and the Beach, but are not likely to be in general much longer, as the attendance of holiday makers themselves, not to mention their children, is falling off, rain comes, lights and cars thin and Jones's beer garden. Canada is not ready for Sunday to be made a day of recreation as it is over the border.

The Conservative papers seem to have been enjoying Government advertisements and bidders. A notice in Saturday's Canada Gazette states that no advertisement will be paid for unless ordered by some Department.

"The tomato," remarks an exchange, "is masquerading about the market stalls under more aliases than you can shake a stick at. There are tomaytoes, tomarters, tomaytoes, tomattoes, tomaratoes, tomatoes, and the other day we heard a woman inquire: 'How d'ye sell yer tomaydoes?'"

The New York Sun thinks it strange that some of the British colonies retain the barbarous statute of imprisonment for debt, and that Canada is one of those colonies. A man over 70 years of age has been caged in a Canadian jail for a year past, as the instance of a creditor to whom he owes $272, and, what is worse, it is a security debt. The creditor pays $1 a week for the prisoner, who, in all probability, will die in jail. New York is the only one of the American States where a person can be imprisoned for debt, and there the law is so complicated and the costs so heavy upon the complaining creditor, that a debtor is seldom sent to jail.

The managers of Hellmuth ladies' college, London, have very sensibly decided to establish a special school of domestic economy on the plan of that at South Kensington, England. A very good idea it is. If girls were to be put through a thorough course of cooking and practical housekeeping it would be much more to their advantage than getting a smattering of half a dozen accomplishments that will never be of any benefit to them.

While the Marquis of Lorne was in Quebec a petition was presented to him in favor of having a British regiment stationed there. It is understood that in the conversation which ensued the Governor-General stated his views pretty plainly on the want of energy displayed by the authorities during the recent rioting there, and said that a properly organized and efficient city police force would he thought obviate any want of a British regiment. Until this was done he did not think the British Government would take any steps towards complying with the prayer of the petition for an increase of the garrison of Quebec.

EDWIN BOOTH IN RHEUMATISM:—Edwin Booth suffers terrible sometimes from rheumatism, and if he were not one of the most amiable of mortals would, doubtless indulge in vigorous Anglo-Saxon expletives. He takes refuge, however, in a well-smoked corn-cob pipe when the attact is on him, using no other medical treatment than a preparation originally tested by his brother in-law, J. H. Magonigle, This affords him almost instant relief, and in place of indulging in profanity when the rheumatism nips him, he calls for Giles, Liniment Iodide Ammonia, which he buys by the gallon.

Town Council.—The next meeting of the Town Council will be held on Monday evening in the Council Chamber,—the meeting announced for last Monday evening having been postponed till this date.

Store Plate-Glass.—During the last few days new plate-glass windows have also been placed in the shop occupied by Messrs. I. Robinson & Co. Mr. Cox evidently intends doing his share in beautifying the shops on our front street.

Personal.—Mr. W. Gullet, of the Montreal Telegraph office, here, was present at the drawing-room given their Excellencies, the Marquis of Lorne and the Princess Louise, at Government House, Toronto, on Saturday evening.

The Bonting Club excursion to Toronto on Saturday will enable them to attend the Exhibition who have not yet been able to do so. The fare is only $1.40 for round trip, and the tickets are good until the close of the Exhibition.

The General Prize List.—The prize list pamphlets for the Peterborough Central Exhibition were completed on Saturday last. Copies can now be obtained at either the Review or EXAMINER offices, or from members of the Executive Committee.

Auburn at the Toronto Exhibition.—The Auburn Woollen Company have twenty pieces of cloth on exhibition at the Toronto Industrial Fair. The merits of this Company's manufactures we believe will secure for them a first place among competitors.

Appointment.—The Governor-General has been pleased to make the following appointment:

Edward Noice, of the village of Minden, Esq., to be Registrar of Deeds in and for the Provisional County of Haliburton, in the room and stead of Samuel Stanly Peck, Esq., resigned.

Military Appointment.—The Canada Gazette of Saturday contains, among the militia general orders, the following appointment:—

57th Peterborough Battalion of Infantry, No. 1 Company, Peterboro'.—To be Captain, provisionally, Ellis Burritt Edwards, vice John Dixon, who is hereby permitted to retire with the rank of Lieut.

Separate School Excursion.—An excursion under the auspices of the Board of School Trustees of the Separate School of this town, took place yesterday to Campbellcroft, per Str. Golden-Eye. A very large number left the wharf and we presume as usual, a good time will be participated in by those in attendance.

Personal.—Mr. W. E. Franklin, press agent for Pullman and Co's. Great London Humpty Dumpty and Classic Gymnasium, which exhibits in this town next Monday, favored us with a call during the past week. His courteous and obliging manner well qualifies him for the position of advance agent.

Healthy Growth.—Peterborough is making fair progress this year, judging from the building operations. If these are not very extensive they denote a healthy growth. Mr. T. Bradburn has erected several new dwellings and improved many more.

Guilty Offspring.—S. White is still offering his summer stock of Boots and Shoes at and below cost, in order to clear it out before the fall trade sets in. Genuine bargains may be relied upon, as the stock is all of the latest patterns and best material. 31-tfin

Runaway.—A horse attached to a waggon ran away last Friday. It continued on its unbroken course until the wheel of the rig becoming entangled in the Otonabee bridge brought the waggon to a stand-still. After kicking a short time the horse again started off, leaving its lead behind. Nothing except the waggon was injured.

Special Bargains.—For the next our week W. J. Larmour will offer the largest and best selected stock of summer boots and shoes in town at a small advance on cost, to make room for fall importations. The custom department of the Red Boot is still maintaining its reputation for style, comfort and durability, at moderate prices. 31-tfin

Advertise.—Now is the time for the energetic business man to put his best advertising foot forsmost. The fall season trade is about to open, and buyers will soon be plentiful. He who steps to the front first and lets the world know what he has to sell, and that he is prepared to dispose of his wares at the lowest market figures, is the one who will catch the biggest share of trade. At least such has been the teaching of the past.

Correction.—In our report of the last meeting of the School Board, there appeared several remarks made by members of the Board, commenting on the certificate of Miss Flavelle which would lead the public to believe that the certificate held by her was an inferior one to some of those whose names were before the meeting. We might have mention that Miss Flavelle holds a second B. Normal School, which she secured after attending one session.

"Farmer's Monthly."—The first Annual Exhibition number of the Farmers' Monthly (September), published in Toronto, is on our table. It has grown considerably since the last number, being now sixteen pages, and is filled with numerous choice articles ably written on various subjects pertaining to Agriculture. The price of subscription is exceedingly low for such a first-rate paper, being only 50 cents a year. Address, P.O. Drawer 2562, Toronto, Ont.

The Emigration to Manitoba.—The emigration from Ottawa to Manitoba promises to be very much less this fall than last. Only one party of less than thirty has come up so far, and there will only be one more special train made on the 7th of October, applications for tickets for which are coming in slowly. Farmers in that vicinity somehow seem unable to appreciate the grand lock-up land policy of the Government, but find more encouragement in Dakotah, to which place five families are going by the train of the 7th October.

The Fullman Show.—The Ottawa Herald of a recent date, has the following notice of the above show, which will give an exhibition in this town on Monday, 15th instant:—

"In noticing the performance we can simply reiterate what the press have given utterance to, wherever this show has appeared; they perform all and more than they advertise, and every act is done in a style that challenges competition. To witness the acts of the O'Brien family—the Boissett family, or those of Mlle Hesita, the modern Hercules, or that of Mr. Levantine is alone worth double the price of admission. It is truly a live show, full of side-splitting, rollicking fun, and yet all kept within bounds. We heartily commend the show, and especially Mr. Fullman to the public."

Fire.—On Sunday morning the barn owned by Mr. E. Chamberlain, and occupied by Mr. Richard Parnall, on Bridgenorth road, was totally consumed by fire, together with the contents. Mr. Parnall's barn not being large enough to hold his crop he had rented this one. The last load of his grain had been drawn in on Saturday evening. The barn contained about 1,000 bushels of oats, 150 bushels of spring wheat, with some farm implements, which included a champion sawing machine. The loss is said to be about $600, on which there was no insurance. The fire is supposed to have originated by matches from lighting a pipe. Mr. Parnall has been confined to his house for the past few weeks with rheumatism.

The Midland Railway.—Mr. Cox has not only completed the road to Midland, on the Georgian Bay, but has commenced putting steel rails on the line, which he has laid from Port Hope to Millbrook. The road is being put in first-class condition in every respect, and the greatest satisfaction is expressed by merchants doing business on the road. Since his election as President everything goes on smoothly—not a single complaint being heard from the public or employees. He has placed some new first-class coaches on the road between Peterborough and Toronto, and has others just about finished, which will add very much to the comfort of travellers—these coaches have been built at the Company's shops, Port Hope. The Toronto train is giving great satisfaction, and is patronized better than the others. Mr. Cox contemplates other improvements, which he hopes to inaugurate and perfect before long. There can be no two opinions, that he is the right man in the right place. In connection with the new passenger coach the Port Hope Guide has the following:—

"A HANDSOME CAR.—The Midland Railway Company have just completed another very handsome passenger car at the works here, which is destined to replace the one both before and enraged on the through route between Peterborough and Toronto. The name of the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] new car is labelled "Toronto and Peterborough." The outside of the car is painted a dark colour, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] of gold and silver being used for this purpose. The car is fitted with the improved Pullman couplers and platform, such as is used on all the largest rail way lines, and in leaving Belleville it will be with the best passenger coaches used on any line. I.

During my first Easter in the Ardennes, a whole love story came to my ears through an Easter egg and a little basket of galettes. I will not tell the tale; it shall tell itself.

'I hear Monsieur is going to Liege,' said a sweet voice.

I lowered my gun with its muzzle to the ground, and looked at the speaker. She was the brightest, neatest little figure I had ever seen; a brunette, with sparkling hazel eyes, and blue-black hair, and cheeks of a brownish ruddy hue—a very fine picture of health and comely strength, perhaps; yet, nevertheless, having the happier beauty of a sound mind in a sound body, with all that cheerfulness about her which is one of the best gifts of robust health.

'Mademoiselle, it is true. I go to Liege on Easter-even. Can I do anything for you there?'

The brown cheeks grew ruddier, with just a tiny tinge of crimson, which was gone in a moment, for those brunettes do not show upon their faces every shade of thought and feeling as the sensitive blondes are fain to do.

'Monsieur is very good; if only I might venture to ask a favor!'

'Ask.' I responded smiling. 'I will execute your commission with pleasure.'

'First, if Monsieur would let me explain who I am. I am Fifine, grand-niece to Madame Rodiere.'

Madame Rodiere was the old lady who did me the honor to be my housekeeper, and I heard her speak often of Josephine as a good, honest girl, who did much of the work on the little farm which her father rented.

'Mademoiselle Josephine, pray enter and seat yourself; then you shall tell me what you want at Liege.'

This little conversation had taken place in my garden, just as I was going out in the hope of shooting some woodcock which I had seen in a meadow close by. The April wind was setting and keen, and I was glad, therefore, to get the pretty Josephine into a warm seat by the kitchen fire. She did not use much circumlocution in coming at her request.

'Monsieur, I have a friend at Liege; will you charge yourself with a little basket for him?'

She drew it from beneath her shawl as she spoke—a pretty little covered basket of coloured straw.

'It is only a few galettes and an Easter egg; but Felix always expects them from me at Easter, and I should be so sorry to disappoint him.'

'And is this all?' said I, taking the basket from her hand. 'Is there no message, no letter?'

'Alas! Monsieur, I cannot write, neither can Felix; but we do not forget each other.'

Again the tinge of crimson deepened her brown cheek, yet she gazed at me with steadfast, unshrinking eyes, and she continued in a firmer tone:

'We are betrothed, Felix and I. And we have not seen each other for two years. He was home on furlough, then, for a little while.'

'So Felix is a soldier,' I rejoined, doubtfully. 'Is it a wise thing for an industrious girl like you to marry a soldier?'

'He was 'drawn,'' she answered, sighing; he could not help being a soldier. His family was too poor to buy a substitute for him, so he is obliged to serve. He has served five years now, so in two more he will be free.'

'And will it be prudent,' I reiterated, 'to expect a man who has been seven years a soldier to return home and take up industrious pursuits again? Felix will like soldiering too well for that; at the end of his seven years service he will enlist and get his bounty.'

Fifine opened her clear hazel eyes wide, and looked at me wonderingly.

'Monsieur has not seen Felix; when he has seen him he will not say that. He will not ask, either, whether it will be wise to marry him. I have known and loved him all my life long,' she added innocently, as she arose and made me a little courtesy by way of leave taking.

'Stay, Mademoiselle Fifine; you have not told me where to find your friend.'

'At the barracks, if Monsieur will not mind going.'

'And whom must I ask for at the barracks?'

'Felix Rousel. And if Monsieur would kindly put the basket in his hand and say: 'From Fifine Rodiere, with a thousand kind thoughts,' there will be no need of more.'

'But if Felix asks questions, what shall I say?'

'Please then tell him La Mere Vigueron's rheumatism is better, and my father has bought a new cow—we have called her Blanchette—and we have ten lambs this Easter. Oh, and tell him, too, that his father can walk quite well now with a stick, and on Sundays, coming home from mass, he leans on my arm.'

She made me another little courtesy, and ran away, as if she thought she had already detained me too long.

'What an absurd commission!' I said within myself, as I eyed the basket with some discontent. 'The idea of making me a messenger to carry love tokens! But these Ardennais peasants trouble themselves little about the fitness of things.'

II.

At Liege I hired a fly, and drove up to the barracks with my galettes and the variegated Easter egg reposing on the cushion beside me. At the gateway I found an old Sergeant, gray-headed and grim, smoking a surreptitious pipe with an air of fierce satisfaction.

'Can I see a young soldier named Felix Rousel, of the Fourth Company?' I asked, putting my head from the window.

The old Sergeant withdrew his pipe from his lips slowly, and shook his head.

'The poor garcon is in hospital,' he said 'You cannot see him without an order from the Colonel. And as this is not visiting-day, you won't get one.'

Deliberately as he had withdrawn the pipe from his lips he restored it, and smoked on stolidly, with a Flemish phlegm sorely aggravating to a quick temperament. Now, while it appeared to be perfectly easy to see Felix Rousel, I had not cared much about my mission; in fact, the affair had presented itself to me in a ridiculous light, and I had once or twice felt tempted to give the fair Fifine's galettes to some hungry street dog, and quit him afterward with the Easter egg. But lo! a difficulty springs up; a piece of military routine and a stolid Flemish Sergeant stand in my way, and immediately my spirit is roused, and I feel bound in honor to overcome all obstacles, and deposit Mademoiselle Josephine's offering in the hands of her expectant lover.

'Where does the Colonel live, my friend?'

The Sergeant did not trouble himself to answer. Lifting one heavy hand, he pointed to a house near, and then, with extreme slowness, he permitted his hand to sink again into the pocket of his baggy trousers.

'You are Flemish, I think?'

An almost imperceptible nod was the only reply I received. His first speech, being a long one, had evidently exhausted him. Nevertheless, I was resolved to make him talk.

'What part of Flanders do you come from, friend?'

He looked aggravated, yet with the pipe between his teeth he condescended to say—

'Jabukkuk.'

'Ah! a delightful village!' I cried, cheerfully. 'I know it well. Smooth and flat as a table. No mountains or trees and rocks there to hinder tillage. No hills to tire men and horses. Not a tree to be seen, except a stray pollard willow, or here and there a straight line of poplars, standing like soldiers at drill. And plenty of fine cabbages under the ditches.'

Was I mistaken, or did a gleam of satisfaction shoot from those small, bullet eyes again? Yes, and the pipe came out of the corner now.

'And in Jabukkuk is a fine place?'

'What—town?' I exclaimed.

'What, pray?' said the Sergeant.

'What [illegible]

'What [illegible]

'What [illegible]

'Yes, yes, that's right. What shall we do with him?'

'Why, [illegible] what hour?' said the Sergeant.

'Presently!' said Paroot; 'I cried, 'Come and have a gallon now.'

The Sergeant was won. He came, he drank, he throned, he condescended to initiate me into certain military rules and ceremonies, which satisfactorily fulfilled, I might pierce the sealed doors of the hospital, and see Felix Rousel.

Enough that I got safely through them all, and was conducted by the Sergeant himself into a long and exquisitely-clean ward, lined on either side by white beds. To my surprise, he passed silently through this: as I glanced at each shining face, thinking first this, then that was Felix Rousel, and coming at last to a small door at the end, he opened it softly, laying at the same time his finger on his lips, and whispering, in a strange voice, 'Hush!'

The door was shut again immediately, and to my intense astonishment I found myself in darkness.

'This is the blind ward,' whispered the Sergeant, as I stood silent, groping with my hands, and wondering where I was.

The stillness of the room was so intense that the sound of his voice seemed unnatural, and the echo of my own steps grated harshly on my ear.

In a moment or two my eyes got accustomed to obscurity, and I perceived the darkness was not so great as I had imagined. And I now saw dimly many a weary figure lying or sitting listless, with drooping head, and hands clasped idly on the knees. Some were in bed with faces hidden on the pillow, as though even the scanty light admitted here was too great a pain for the vexed eyes to bear. It struck me at first as cruel to place these melancholy patients together in their dismal darkness; but then, if their affliction obliged them to shut out the sunshine, it was easy to comprehend why the authorities had assembled them in one ward.

Scarcely a figure stirred at our entrance; the pitiful patience of blindness seemed to weigh down every head in hopeless apathy. Through the long length of the dismal room, the Flemish Sergeant led me silently, till we reached a bed on which a young man sat in an attitude of rapt attention. His eyes were bandaged by a thick handkerchief, leaving visible only his pale, haggard cheek and bearded mouth. One hand, white and thin with long sickness and unrest, lay on the quilt, the other pressed his forehead. No words can paint upon the mind the picture of lonely, bitter dejection presented by this pale and woeful figure.

'Felix, lad,' said the Sergeant, 'here is a friend come to see thee.'

Mechanically at the Sergeant's voice the hand upon his brow formed the military salute, then fell down helpless and no change, no hope, no smile passed over the wan face.

'A friend from the Ardennes,' said I; 'a friend from St. Hilaire.'

Then I saw his lips quiver, and his thin hand clutched the quilt as with a sudden spasm.

'I cannot see you,' he said wearily, stretching his other hand towards me; 'and the voice is a stranger's.'

'A stranger's, yes; but I bring you a message from friends. Josephine Rodiere sends you this,'

And into the thin hand held so helplessly toward me, I put the little basket that I had so foolishly despised. Heavens! what a treasure it was here! What a light of hope and joy it brought upon that woe-worn face! What a smile played upon the pale lips, as his hand passed over it caressingly!

'Josephine!' he said. 'Then she has not forgotten me!'

Word for word I repeated her message while he listened with his head bent forward and a life and hope upon his face that a moment ago I should have said it could never wear again.

'Your parents, your friends, and Josephine know nothing of your illness,' I continued. 'Why have you kept them in ignorance of this misfortune?'

'How could I tell them?' he cried, as his hand pressed painfully on his darkened eyes. 'It's too dreadful to tell.'

I was silent. I felt such evil tidings were indeed terrible, and I already dreaded to be the messenger of such woe.

'Cheer up, lad!' said the Sergeant. 'You will get your discharge at any rate.'

The young man raised his patient face with a weary sigh.

'I am a log now upon the earth,' he said, 'I was a help at home once—a prop—a comfort; but in the weary days to come I must eat bread that I have never earned, and be a burden to those I love best. O Sergeant! they should take me out and shoot me now.'

His head fell forward on his hands, and he groaned in anguish of spirit. I could think of no words to comfort him, neither could the Sergeant, for he stole silently away, and left me with him alone. But the young man himself cast aside his misery for a moment, as he spoke again of his love.

'Ah! Fifine was always a famous hand at galettes,' he said; 'and here is an Easter egg; will Monsieur tell me its colour?'

'Violet,' I answered.

'Ah! a sad colour. She must have guessed I was sorrowful.'

'No, she did not guess it; but I think you should write to her and tell her. Reflect what a shock your misfortune will be to her, to your mother, to all, if you do not let them hear of it before you return home. The Sergeant tells me you will get your discharge very shortly. I will write a letter willingly for you, if you like.'

He consented to my proposition with a wistful smile, and, writing materials being procured, he dictated as follows. I put down word for word what he said, altering nothing. At our end of the long, obscure room we were quite alone, the other patients, with kindly tact, keeping away from us. Here is the letter of the poor blind soldier:

'MY DEAR FRIEND,—I thank you with my whole heart for your Easter gift; it came to me as the leaves come in May, when the sun makes a sudden summer, and winter and frost vanish. For, my dear Fifine, I am very sad; a great misfortune has befallen me. I was at work here on the new fortifications, when a mine we had made to blow up a great rock exploded too soon, and I and six other men were badly hurt. Fifine, dear friend, the hurt fell upon my eyes, and I am blind. The doctors say that, with care and rest, I may see again one day; but the good God knows; I have no hope of that myself. I am useless now as a soldier, so my Colonel has sent to Brussels for my discharge, and it is expected every day. Fifine, I shall come home with a sad heart, because my father is a poor man, and I fear I shall be a burden to him all my life. I sit through the weary day upon my bed, thinking and wondering what I shall do not to be a burden. My poor mother is getting old and feeble. I thought to help her—I thought to work for her; but all that is over now, and I can only say, may the good God's will be done!

'Fifine, my dear, because I write this to you, do not think I make any claim on you, or wish to hold you to that promise you gave me so long ago. No; I hope I am not so wicked. I shall never see your dear face again; but when you give yourself to some happier man, he will let me take your hand and kiss your cheek, and bless you with my whole heart. And, until I die, you will be my sole and only love upon the earth. There, I will not say any more of this, because you have a kind heart, and I should wring it if I told you all my heavy thoughts as I kneel in darkness over my hopelessness. Fifine, when I hear your gentle [illegible] my hand, and hear your voice. Then you [illegible] say, but then [illegible] Sergeant [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
